PRES. HOOVER FORECASTS INCREASED CONSTRUCTION

Chief Executive, In Radio Address to Governors' Conference, Said That Public Works Construction During First Six Months of Year Exceeded By More Than $200,000,000, the Boom Year of 1929 — Coming Six Months Promise Even Greater Results, But Need For "Continued Serious Efforts" Still Exists.

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—President Hoover said tonight that public works construction during the first six months of the year totalled $1,700,000,000, exceeding by more than $200,000,000 the boom year of 1929.

In a radio address from the white house study to the governors' conference at Salt Lake City, the chief executive said the second half of the year "promises even greater results" and asserted that the "splendid endowment of our country of fortitude, courage, boundless energy and resources, together with the unity of effort is the guarantee of recuperation."

"To definitely organize so as to prevent the activity in public works from receding like other activities in depression, and to speed them up in anticipation of future needs so as to alleviate unemployment in such a time is a new experiment in our economic life of the first importance," Mr. Hoover said in thanking the governors for their cooperation following the stock market depression of last fall.

"We have hitherto regarded great business depressions with their inevitable train of unemployment and hardships," the president said, "as an inevitable fever which must run its course, and in forme rtimes if public works were undertaken in alleviation of unemployment it has been in the sense of semi-charity . . . . Had matters followed their previous course, we should during the past six months have undoubtedly seen a dimunition in volume of unemployment in public works over normal times but on this occasion we witness a large increase."

"The department of commerce informs me," Mr. Hoover continued, "that the totals expended or contracted for in new public works and betterments by national, state and local governments, in these last six months have not been less than $1,700,000,000 and that this exceeds even the boom year of 1929 by over $200,000,000 and the organized effort to which you have contributed so much in creation will, I am confident, go still further in its accomplisthments.

"Nor should I omit reference to the effort of our utilities and our leading business concerns to cooperate with us in the increase of construction. They have shown courageous faith in the future and their expansion of unemployment which they have provided in construction and betterment works exceeds even the $200,000,000 of increase over 1929 accomplished by the public authorities."

The president said the need for "continued serious effort" still exists.

"We are pioneering a new path for the future which shall add to the orderly progress of the nation," he said. "Every dollar of work we provide now adds to the security of the home in this time of stress. It adds courage and hope in time of adversity."

ACTING HEAD OF ALL-INDIA CONGRESS ARRESTED

BOMBAY, June 30—(AP)—While the Bombay nationalists today opened a "Boycott week" against British goods, the government added another to the list of civil disobedience leaders who have been placed behind prison bars.

Pandit Motilal Nehru, acting president of the All-India National congress, was the latest arrested. He was taken into custody at Allahabad along with Syed Mahmud, secretary of the congress.

Bombay's "Boycott week" is the climax to a long period of agitation against British goods. The chief weapons of the civil resistance movement have been raids against government salt works, non-payment of land revenues, and picketing of foreign cloth and liquor shops. The rainy season has ended the salt raids but picketing has diminished little, even in face of a government ordinance against it and frequent arrests.

The program for this week began with a large parade today, and a heavy rain did not halt the activities.

Tomorrow a large parade is planned and a partial cessation of work is scheduled as one part of the demonstration. The manifestants will appeal to the public not to buy British goods, it was learned, and will mark with chalk those stores which handle such products. Men, women and children will march in the parades, shouting "boycott" and revolutionary slogans.

Authorities said the northwest frontier however, was much easier. The mobile columns of troops which have operated against armed bands of tribesmen have been broken up for return to their home stations, and in this the authorities saw a lessening of the border menace.

Many women and schoolboys were among the hundreds of congress volunteers who paraded and sang nationalist songs to open the boycott week in Bombay today.

Some of the banners read "Boycott British Goods," others said "Starve the Hand That Beats us by Boycotting British Goods," and "Save Our Starving Millions by Using Swadeshi" (homespun).

Numerous boycott posters also appeared on lamp posts and buildings in the business center.

SENATE BILL ALLOWS WAR BRIDE ENTRY INTO U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—After a long contest that led to the supreme court and finally to congress, John Munsill Ulrich, a former American soldier who married a German girl convicted of charges involving moral turpitude under the immigration laws, expects to bring his wife, Anna Minna Venzke Ulrich, to his home in New Haven, Conn.

Only approval by President Hoover of a senate bill passed today by the house stands in the way of enactment of a law that will permit the young woman to take her place beside her wealthy husband in the realm of Connecticut society with which he is associated.

The measure, sponsored by Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the majority leader, was opposed by democratic and republican groups.

FOUND BULLET-RIDDLED BODY NEAR INFIRMARY

KENTLAND, Ind., June 30.—(AP)—The bullet-riddled body of an unidentified man, apparently an Italian about 30 years of age, was found today near the Newton county infirmary. Marks on the man's clothes indicated they had been purchased in Chicago.

The man had been shot once in the head, three times in the chest and once in the hand. A minute description and finger prints were forwarded to authorities at Chicago.

SECOND VICTIM OF AUTO CRASH DEAD

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 30—(AP)—Mrs. Levina Barlow, 66, died today in a local hospital, the second victim of a collision between a sedan and truck last Friday, which caused the death of Mrs. Anna Reed, of Philadelphia, within a few hours. Mrs. Elsie Diffendrf, Mrs. Barlow's daughter, is still in the hospital recovering from injuries. Richmond Johnson of New Haven, Conn., truck driver, is awaiting a hearing on a charge of dangerous driving.

RHINELAND CELEBRATES EVACUATION OF FRENCH

REUDESHEIM, Germany, July 1—(Tuesday)—(AP)—With the departure of the last French the Rhine and the Rhineland at midnight blazed with lights and re-echoed with the pealing of bells of freedom.

The Rhine was one long river of rejoicing. Tens of thousands of Germans, in every kind of craft from folding rowboats to tourist steamers, swarmed out on the historic stream, drinking toasts to the fatherland.

From this town the Rhine was lighted up for many miles upstream and down stream by the illumination of the national monument "Niederwalddenkmal," which had been prohibited by the occupation authorities.

To the accompaniment of ringing church bells and booming, the great monument, 675 feet above the Rhine, blazed forth as a beacon light. It is a tall shaft representing the figure of Germania, and in relief are pictures of the Emperor William the First and the military leaders of 1870-71.

STATE ENDS FISCAL YEAR WITH $6,000,000 BALANCE

HARTFORD, June 30.—(AP)—The state of Connecticut ended a fiscal year at the close of business on Monday, with a balance on hand in the general fund of approximately $6,000,000, according to the estimate of Edward F. Hall, commissioner of finance and control. Exact figures on the balance were not available today, the most recent figures being those for the close of business on June 26, which showed $6,279,694.37 in the general fund and a total balance of the combined general and highway funds of $8,684,484.23. On the corresponding date in 1929, the general fund balance was $3,540,116.28 and the combined balance was $5,924,555.72.

SOUTHERN CROSS FLIERS LUNCH WITH PRES. HOOVER

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—The Southern Cross fliers went to Washington today in a borrowed giant Fokker to have lunch with President Hoover and be presented on the senate floor.

While they were away, finishing touches of adjustment were put on their own plane in readiness for a take-off for Oakland, Cal., probably on Wednesday. It is likely that a stop will be made on the coast-to-coast flight at Chicago, for fuel. Arrival at Oakland will mark the end of a two-year round-the-world journey for the Southern Cross and its commander, Squadron Leader Charles Kingsford-Smith.

INSTANTLY KILLED WHEN KICKED BY HORSE

BANTAM, Conn., June 30.—(AP)—Frank A. Seward, 65, for many years a burgess of the town of Bantam and a registrar of voters, and for three terms a selectman of the town of Litchfield, was instantly killed here this evening when he was kicked in the back of the head by a horse which he was feeding.

Mr. Seward had been raking hay in the rear of his home and evidently took a fork full of it into the stable. A son, Eric, who was in the stalls, heard the horse stamping about and, calling to his brother, ran to investigate. Together they calmed the animal and drew their father's body out of the range of its hoofs.

Mrs. Florence Parker Busch was granted a divorce from Adolphus Busch III, in a secret hearing the chambers of Circuit Judge Mulloy at Clayton, Mo.

Campbell Advocates Dry Law Repeal

Prohibition Not Logical Solution For Temperance Says Retiring New York Administrator.

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Major Maurice Campbell, retiring tonight as New York prohibition administrator, issued a statement charging that "certain treasury officials have not been sincere in their efforts to enforce the prohibition law," and that local politicians and certain administration officials in Washington feel that some permits, revoked by him, must be restored in order to obtain support for the republican state ticket next fall.

Campbell tendered his resignation last week after orders came from Washington transferring him to Boston.

In his statement, in addition to the charges he made, he said that after years of watching the "results of prohibition from the inside," he had concluded that "prohibition is not the logical solution for temperance in our form of government, and I now publicly advocate the repeal of the 18th amendment before the nation is consumed in the fires of its consequences."

He refused to add anything to his statement.

"I have been extremely conservative in my administration with regard to permit matters," the statement said; "I have revoked or refused to renew, for cause, which has been universally sustained in trials, in federal courts, many permits with political backing and have thus trod on many political toes.

"Consequently, there are certain brewery permits, whiskey permits and alcohol permits that local politicians and certain administration officials in Washington feel must be restored in order to secure necessary support for the republican ticket in New York this fall.

"With me in charge of permits in New York, treasury officials know that these permits will not be issued."

"William D. Moss, who will have charge of permits in this district, is a man for whom I have a high regard and one whom I personally brought here several years ago to assist me in prohibition enforcement," the statement continued.

Possibly officials in Washington think he can be more easily swayed than myself. I do not know. But I now publicly admonish him to gather all his strength to withstand the onslaught, for I am sure he will have need for all the ability and courage he can command.

"And now, after four years as one of the highest field officials in prohibition enforcement, with three years of that time as administrator in New York, I publicly declare that certain treasury officials who up to today have been charged with enforcement of the national prohibition act and who are still to remain in charge of kindred activities, have not been sincere in their efforts to enforce this law and they have plainly demonstrated this fact to me."

DENOUNCES PROSELYTING IN CITY OF ROME

VATICAN CITY, June 30.—(AP)—Pope Pius today brought to a close his sacerdotal jubilee with a round of activities which included the raising of five men to the cardinalate, a denial of the church's responsibility for disturbances in Malta and denunciation of proselyting activities in the city of Rome.

His holiness held a secret consistory today at which three Italians, a French prelate and a Brazilian received the high rank of princes of the church.

The non-Italians were Archbishop Da Silveira, Cintra, of Rio Janeiro, and Bishop Lienart, of Lille, France. The Italians were Monsignor Marchetti-Selvaggiani, secretary of the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith, former papal auditor at Washington; Monsignor Raffaelo Rossi, assessor of the Consistorial Congregation, and Monsignor Serafini, secretary of the Congregation of the Council.

A further honor to come to the Italian trio will be membership in the Curia, the body which carries on the administrative business of the church. The Cardinalate now consists of 31 Italians and 32 of other nations.

Following upon yesterday's canonization of North American martyrs, first new world saints, the pontiff today obtained a well-earned relaxation.

Announcement was made that 8,175 pilgrims from North America, in 21 pilgrimages, visited the pontiff hearing his jubilee, which began last year and ended tonight. Latin America sent 600.

The Osservatore Romano figures included 543 pilgrimages in all with 126,992 members, 78,290 being from Italy, 44,143 from Europe other than Italy, 562 from Africa and 152 from Asia. These statistics gave an exceedingly clear picture of the strenuous program his holiness has maintained during the last 12 months.

Gangsters' Arrest May Solve Lingle Murder

CHICAGO, June 30.—(AP)—Grover Dullard, suspected of complicity in the slaying of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, together with nine companions, was arrested by detectives from the state's attorney's office who raided two Moran gang gathering places late today.

Dullard was formerly connected with the Sheridan-Wave gambling resort in which Lingle, Julius (Potatoes) Kauffman and Joe Josephs were said by investigators to have been interested.

Dullard, according to the information upon which the state's attorney's office acted, was at the Hotel Sherman when Lingle entered there the afternoon of June 9, a short time before he was killed.

When Lingle left the lunch counter there, according to investigators, Dullard either joined him or trailed him between the hotel and the Illinois Central subway under Michigan avenue, where the assassination occurred, Dullard was joined by a "short, swarthy man" who was walking with the reporter when he was killed.

Dullard, investigators said, was known to have carried a short .38-calibre revolver, such as was left near the body by the slayer.

If, as the prosecutor's office theorizes, Dullard did not fire the shot, he possibly passed the weapon to the slayer somewhere between the hotel and the subway.

Dullard was taken by the raiders as he walked into an office in a downtown building where a number of Moran followers were conferring. None of the men offered resistance beyond attempting to make away with a heavy ledger. The book was retrieved after it had been thrown from a window and was found to contain 150 names—supposedly the payroll of George "Bugs" Moran.

The other Moran raid was made at a room in a North shore hotel. Names of those taken were not given out.

Both groups were taken to the state's attorney's office, where the suspects were questioned. Chief Investigator Pat Roche refused to disclose the results but it was understood a number of witnesses to the Lingle slaying were sent for to view the suspects.

TO INVESTIGATE SUGAR AND PIG IRON RATES

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—Less than two weeks after enactment of the new tariff law the senate today added sugar and pig iron to the score of commodities it has asked the tariff commission to investigate under the flexible provisions to determine whether the rates actually equalize differences in production costs here and abroad.

Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, proposed a resolution to direct the inquiry into the new duty on Cuban raw sugar. It was adopted without debate after approval had been given an amendment by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, adding pig iron for investigation.

The duty on Cuban raw sugar was raised from 1.76 to 2 cents by the new law. That on pig iron was left unchanged at $1.125 a ton, Senator Reed losing an amendment to raise it to $1.50, the duty recommended by the finance committee.

Under the resolution the commission would report its findings as early as practicable.

The New Yorker's proposal also asked inquiries into costs of production of umbrellas and ultramarine blues. Approval had been given earlier to a resolution by Senator Hebert, republican, Rhode Island, directing an inquiry into the rate on shoe lacings.

At the same time Representative Celler, democrat, New York, introduced a resolution seeking an inquiry into the cost of production of pipes, pipe bowls, cigarette holders and miscellaneous smokers' articles.

LA PAZ, June 30.—(AP)—The military directorate governing Bolivia since the successful revolution last week tonight posted troops about the Brazilian, German and Chilean legations to protect officers of the former regime from angry crowds.

After it became known yesterday that the revolt had been successful, great crowds began demonstrating and sought to obtain custody of the hidden official.

SENATE WILL VOTE TODAY ON VETS' RELIEF BILL

Democrats Claim Enough Votes to Win Adoption of Their Amendment to Increase Disability Pensions Provided By House—Administration Leaders Oppose Any Increase—House Leaders Determined to Return the Legislation to Conference If the Democratic Amendment Is Allowed.

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—Senate democrats claimed enough votes tonight to win adoption of their amendment to increase the disability pensions provided by the house in the World war veterans relief measure.

Administration leaders opposed the increase and Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, significantly pleaded "I hope for the sake of getting something for our veterans we will stand by the rates in the bill."

Senators Walsh, of Massachusetts and Connally, of Texas, democrats, led an all-day attempt for disability pensions with a maximum of $60 a month, as allowed to Spanish war veterans, instead of $40 as provided by the house bill.

Both sides were agreed that a vote on the bill would be taken tomorrow. House leaders are determined to return the legislation to conference if the democratic amendment is allowed.

The first day of debate on the new veterans measure which takes the place of the vetoed by President Hoover brought a sharp exchange between Senators Connally and Robsion, republican, Kentucky. The latter called attention that during the war only $30 a month was allowed for complete disability of soldiers.

The Texas democrat heatedly replied that he had voted for the $30 rate then because it was that figure or nothing. He charged Robsion with "trying to make a political issue out of this matter" and vigorously defended the democratic war time administration while condemning the post-war republican regime.

Senators Walsh and Connally conceded that it would cost more than a $40 monthly maximum allowance to disabled veterans. However, they estimated the total cost of the provision at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

Senator Reed submitted estimates that the cost of the democratic proposal would be $58,000,000 next year and would run as high as $167,000,000 in 1935. He said the pension provision of the house bill would cost $31,000,000 next year and $82,000,000 in 1935.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, said the veterans relief bill before the senate with a plea for speedy enactment. He believed an adjournment by Thursday night is entirely possible.

The Walsh-Connally amendment would allow $10 a month disability for veterans with 10 per cent disability. The administration measure would allow a $12 pension for 25 per cent disability.

CONN. AND N. Y. DISTRICT COURTS ARE REVERSED

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Douglas Clyde MacIntosh, theology professor at Yale, and Marie Averill Bland, Canadian World war nurse, both of whom refused to take the oath to bear arms in defense of the United States, won a reversal today in the U. S. district court of appeals of the decision of the lower courts which denied them citizenship.

Dr. MacIntosh, applying for citizenship in the federal district court in Connecticut, refused to take the oath because, he said, he would not bear arms if he believed the war to be in an unjust cause.

Miss Bland, who cared for shell-shocked soldiers in France, declared that under no circumstances would she bear arms in any war. She said she could not do so because she did not believe it would be consistent with Christianity. Miss Bland, the daughter of a Canadian Episcopal clergyman now lives in New York.

Both were refused citizenship by the lower courts, and both appealed.

STRESSED NECESSITY FOR ECONOMICALLY UNITED EUROPE

PARIS, June 30.—(AP)—The necessity for an economically united Europe was stressed at a meeting of the European Customs' Union association today, speakers at the same time stressing that such a union would not in any way be inimical to the United States.

Dr. Stern-Rubarth, of Berlin, told the delegates from 14 countries that the "most authoritative representatives" of the United States in recent conversations had assured him an organized Europe was far from being considered with disfavor in America—that it was, in fact, seen as a necessity for an entente between the two continents.

The association, which is a private organization with no government status, today began consideration of Aristide Briand's memorandum for a "United States of Europe," point by point.

TEXAS LAWYER JAILED FOR REFUSING COURT ASSIGNMENT

BEAUMONT, Tex., June 30.—(AP)—Because he refused to accept the assignment of the criminal district court to defend Rainey Williams, held in jail here on several charges of criminal assault, R. J. Jernigan, Port Arthur attorney, today was fined $250 and remanded to jail for contempt of court by Judge R. L. Murry.

Jernigan's refusal came after the Negro, three times threatened by a mob in as many days, had been identified by a Port Arthur woman as her assailant.

The girl's story told to County Attorney Marvin Scurlock, paved the way for the filing of a seventh charge against the Negro, already indicted for six felonies for his alleged attacks on couples parked in automobiles on highways near Port Arthur.

The Negro's trial on one of the charges has been set for Wednesday.

NOTED PURE FOOD SPECIALIST IS DEAD

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—The long and turbulent campaign of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, noted pure food specialist, to protect the public against adulterated food and drugs was ended today by death.

The 86-year-old scientist died this morning after he had been virtually an invalid for eight months from heart disease. The funeral will be held Wednesday.

Dr. Wiley began a life-long crusade against adulterated food and drugs in 1883 when he became chief chemist of the department of agriculture. He led the fight which resulted in enactment of the pure food and drug laws and kept a watchful eye on their administration almost until the end.

SHAFER PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGES

CINCINNATI, O., June 30.—(AP)—Amor W. Shafer, whose alleged $1,000,000 check kiting manipulations were said by state and federal authorities to have forced the closing of two banks here, today pleaded not guilty to three charges of embezzlement of $210,162.50 from the Henry L. Doherty Co., his former employers. His trial date has not been set.

CONGRESS DEADLOCKED OVER APPROPRIATIONS

WASHINGTON, June 30.— (AP) — While the treasury was bundling up its prohibition enforcement problems today for delivery to the department of justice tonight at midnight, the senate was pumping new life into law enforcement commission proposals for tightening up the dry laws.

A last minute drive for enactment of the commission's legislative program was undertaken with the judiciary committee agreeing to meet tomorrow in special session to consider the measures already approved by the house.

Meanwhile, the senate and house became deadlocked over the appropriations for continuing the commission's general survey through another year. House conferees on the second deficiency appropriations bill refused to accept the $50,000 limitation on funds for the commission and the stipulation that its activities be confined solely to a prohibition study.

Chairman Wood of the house appropriations committee said an effort would be made in the house to vote into the bill the $250,000 requested by President Hoover for continuing the general investigation of law enforcement.

Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, who sponsored the amendment voted by the senate restricting the commission to $50,000, immediately countered with the assertion that any increase in the fund by the house would be subject to a point of order in the senate.

Three prohibition bills probably will be reported to the senate tomorrow by the judiciary committee, but there was slight hope tonight of enactment at this session. The measures provide for modification of the new Jones law by relieving first offenders of the severer penalties; for waivers of jury trials to hasten up court action, and define petty offenses.

There was every indication tonight that the senate would adjourn by Wednesday or Thursday. Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee is prepared to seek early action on the bills but leaders realize any serious objection at this late hour will block action.

The transfer of prohibition enforcement tonight will take 2,700 employes of the treasury to the department of justice. Of these, 1,700 are prohibition agents who will concentrate upon large scale violations. The treasury, however, will retain control of industrial alcohol and medicinal liquor.

CHURCH HEAD FACES LIQUOR LAW CHARGES

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Bishop Charles Mrzena, of the Czecho-Slovakian Orthodox Catholic church in the United States, was indicted today with 18 others by a federal grand jury for alleged conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition laws.

It is charged they misused sacramental wine permits, diverting as much as 200 gallons at a time for use as a beverage.

The jury returned a presentment criticizing the handling of sacramental permits by the office of Major Maurice Campbell, prohibition administrator for the New York district, who recently tendered his resignation from government services.

"The case of Mrzena et al has shown that the prohibition administrator's office permitted withdrawal of wine for sacramental purposes, in large amounts, without proper investigation," the presentment said.

SUSTAINS DEMURRER TO INDICTMENT FOR POSSESSION

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—Justice Peyton Gordon of District of Columbia supreme court, sustained the demurrer of Representative Denison of Illinois today to an indictment for possession of whiskey, holding that the charge was phrased in too general terms.

The action virtually was equivalent to dismissal of the indictment.

Justice Gordon held that the indictment failed to meet the constitutional requirement that a defendant be informed specifically of the nature of the charge so that he may frame his defense and plead an acquittal of the charge as a bar to reindictment for the same offense.

Denison and his former secretary were indicted after prohibition agents had charged that they found trunks containing liquor had been delivered to his office in the house office buildings

EAGLEVILLE MILKMAN FINED FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, June 30—Stanley Forostoski, 41, Eagleville milkman, was fined $100 and costs in police court this morning when found guilty of driving a car while under the influence of liquor. Forostoski, who was arrested shortly before midnight Sunday evening by Police Officer Leo Piche, changed a plea of guilty to one of not guilty when arraigned before Judge Frank H. Foss. His car had collided with a coupe owned by Floyd J. Gallup of 369 Valley street which was parked on Jackson street, opposite St. Joseph's hospital, when the Eagleville man's machine suddenly swerved hundred yards further down Jackson street and returned to the scene of the accident where he argued with Gallup about the damage done. He later got into his car and drove off but was arrested on West Main street. The prosecution witnesses were, Officer Piche, Harry Gilbert, Adelard Delude and Floyd Gallup.

Awakened by what he believed to be a nocturnal saxaphone player Andrew Ogosalek of lower village was amazed about 12:30 o'clock this morning to find a pair of stray cows in the neighborhood of Brook street. The police were notified and Officers Leo Piche and Peter Marrotte were sent to conduct the round-up. The husky young officers found that they had a real job on their hands, however, as the animals proved to come of western strain and objected strenuously to having their midnight wanderings interrupted. In the game of tag that ensued the officers seemed to be "it" most of the time and Officer Piche was nearly floored for the count. A truck driver who happened along assisted the officers and the cows are now in "storage" awaiting claim of ownership.

PEACE PAGEANT GIVEN AT WESTCHESTER CHURCH

A large crowd was in attendance Sunday evening at the meeting of the Tri-County C. E. union at Westchester Congregational church. A feature of the evening was the Peace pageant, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" presented under direction of Mrs. H. Herbert Tompkins, with Mrs. W. O. Seyms at the organ. The pageant was presented on the steps of the church, using the entrance platform as a stage and was based on the "World Friendship of Children." The World was personified as the mother of the nations, Dorothy Koch as England, Helen Dean as France, Emily Balaban as Russia, Linda Drescher as Japan and Virginia Kopp as United States. The pageant opened with "Mother World," Mrs. A. L. Stebbins, seated in royal robes at the top of the church steps. Olga Koptonsk as the "Spirit of Childhood" entered, accompanied by the children of the nations and presented the "Spirit of Peace" Miss Ruth Mae Murray and her followers "Progress" Mrs. Kopp and "Prosperity", Mrs. R. E. Greene. The "Spirit of War", George Boson and his companions, William B. Gerhard, as "Hate" and John Raymond as "Ignorance", hovered in the background, together with the "Spirit of Love", Miss Doris Riley, whom they had bound and held as a prisoner.

Olga Koptonak, as the "Spirit of Childhood", Mrs. H. H. Tompkins as "Christianity", Miss Riley as "Love", Miss Crystal Drescher as "Education" and Jobert Tompkins as "Youth", all eloquently pleaded for the acceptance of "Peace". The "Nations" and the little children of the nations upheld them in their plea and were aided by Miss Hattie Belle Brown as the "Spirit of Praise", and her companions, Mrs. Eunice Boson as "Spirit of Music", Dr. Arthur L. Stebbins as "Spirit of Poetry", and W. E. Adams as "Spirit of Song".

"Mother World" finally became convinced in favor of "Peace" and bade "Peace" welcome to the circle. "Peace" then freed "Love" and the "Nations" joined in rejoicing. The pageant closed with the singing of the last stanza of "America the Beautiful" by the entire company, followed by the benediction by Mrs. Tompkins, as the "Spirit of Christianity", Miss Hattie B. Brown, Eunice Boson, Dr. A. L. Stebbins and William E. Adams as the "Spirit of Praise", "Music", "Poety", and "Song" respectively, furnished quartette selections during the course of the pageant. Their songs included: "Sweet, Peace the Gift of God's Love", "This is My Father's World", "America the Beautiful", "To the Knights in the Days of Old", and "I Would Be True". The entire company was effectively costumed and the pageant showed the result of much careful rehearsing and study. It was voted by all who saw it, one of the finest outdoor pageants presented in this vicinity.

Members of the Westchester C. E. society served refreshments during a social hour, following the pageant. C. E. members and friends were present from Colchester, Marlborough, Gilead, Columbia, Hebron, Lebanon, Westchester and other places.

"Unless the prohibition amendment is strictly enforced, the whole U. S. constitution will be seriously endangered," Colonel Moudy said. His eloquent speech gave those present a new and deeper insight into the problems of law enforcement confronting the national and state governments.

Prokop pitched the first two innings and Fedus finished the game for Colchester and although he was pitching in fine form and had good support from his men, the opposing team was too strong and held an easy lead for the greater part of the game. The Manchester outfit made several two and three base hits and a home run. Broder and Falbowski were Colchester's best hitters, Broder making a clean drive into right field netting him a double. Neikin and M. Broder were umpires. The Colchester team is scheduled to play the East Hampton outfit on the local diamond, July 4.

GEORGE AVERY DIES AFTER AUTO CRASH INTO POLE

STAFFORD SPRINGS, June 30—George Avery, 19, of 186 East Main street, Rockville, was killed in an automobile accident near Forestville, about one and one-half miles west of Stafford Springs, just after midnight Sunday, when the car he was driving left the road and crashed into an electric light pole. LISTLESS AND DULL?
MAYBE IT'S WORMS
THEY are much more common than most mothers think. Is it any wonder that your child is listless if intestinal worms are robbing him of nourishment and poisoning him with their secretions?
Look also for the following symptoms: grinding the teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.
Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

DANIELSON

BROOKLYN MAN CHARGED WITH RECKLESS DRIVING

DANIELSON, June 30.—John W. Albro of Brooklyn was ordered today to appear in court in that town on Tuesday to answer to a reckless driving charge growing out of an accident in which his car figured, over on the West Side this morning.

A machine operated by Henry Weaver of Brooklyn was coming out of the driveway into the state highway at Brindamour's filling station when the Albro car came tearing along from a westerly direction. To avoid striking the Weaver machine, Albro quickly and sharply pulled his car over to the right and evidently lost control of it, for it plunged into the equipment at the filling station and knocked over a gas pump and tore an oil pump loose from its concrete foundations. State Officer H. Theodore Strand investigated the affair.

Fitts Held on $6,000 Bail

Charles Fitts of Hampton, held in $6,000 bail on charges filed against him as the result of statements made by four small boys as to their abnormal relations with him, will be presented before Attorney L. A. Woisard of Danielson, who will be acting as a justice of the peace, in the town of Hampton next Saturday. The case was continued when it first came up during the course of last week.

Recovering from Injuries

William Hunter, 8, son of Representative and Mrs. William Hunter of Goodyear, is recovering from injuries he received at the week-end when he was struck by a hit-and-run driver operating a car with Rhode Island registration. The child was bruised on the face and right leg, but after being given attention by a Danielson physician was able to return to his home.

Captain Walter F. Jacobs, U. S. N., who has been on duty in Washington, D. C., for some time past following a long period of service in European waters, is visiting with his father, Frederick A. Jacobs of Broad street, and his sisters resident here.

Leander DeForge, who started to make a meal off Night Officer Laird Winchell Saturday night, biting him on the finger and on the breast while resisting arrest, was before Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis in the town court this morning and is now in Brooklyn jail, serving 30 days. He also had a fine of $5 assessed against him for having been intoxicated.

If you have to dodge to escape being clipped beside the ear with a horseshoe, do not take it too seriously, for it likely will not be a case of deliberate assault. The chances are that it may be a stray shoe hurled by some one of the various persons who are going to engage in a horseshoe pitching tournament, beginning Wednesday.

The Windham County Y. M. C. A. is sponsoring the tournament, and Killingly, Brooklyn, Wauregan and Moosup will be represented. Those interested met at the "Y" office here and a committee was appointed. Dana W Shippee of East Killingly, Charles E. Roth of Killingly, C. C. Rowlinson, Elbra Baker and S. I. Frink of Brooklyn were named.

The shoes will begin to sail through the air Wednesday night when Killingly plays Moosup in the latter place and Wauregan plays at Brooklyn. On July 8, Moosup plays at Brooklyn and Wauregan in Killingly. July 10, Wauregan will oppose Moosup and Killingly will be at Brooklyn. July 16, Moosup comes to Killingly and Brooklyn goes to Wauregan. The final scheduled games are for July 18 and July 23.

Each of the teams will consist of four players and each team will be allowed an eligible list of eight players. A match is to consist of best two out of three games.

This tournament is expected to be witnessed by a considerable gallery of spectators, for there is very keen interest in the game through this territory.

It may be necessary to start an active definite campaign to curb the stealing of wild flowers by motorists. Today several reports came to this writer about persons observing thieving along this line over the week-end. Warnings in the press and occasional arrest is having little or no effect in stopping the practice, and protests are coming in from various quarters.

Keeping up an old tradition, a great many persons plan to remain up the night before the Fourth and do their sleeping when they may and some time during the holiday. Some will stay up to do some early celebrating, though they face the possibility of arrest if they use explosives of any kind, while many others will be out to enjoy the midnight dances that are scheduled to continue until early on the morning of the Fourth. Danielson may have a safe and sane Fourth, but it promises to be lively enough the night before.

Incident to the observance of the Fourth, the request was made today by a member of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., that citizens use care in displaying the national flag, especially those that are hung flat on the sides of buildings or elsewhere. It was noted on Memorial and Flag day that some flags were improperly hung, with the blue field reversed from the position it should occupy.

Ripe tomatoes—the first reported grown here this season—were being picked today from the gardens of Franklin and Crosby on Academy street. They were grown by Daniel Sullivan. The first of the season's crop were picked on Sunday.

Mrs. John A. Paine and Mr. and Mrs. Irving W. Davis and children of Broad street have taken a cottage at Misquamicut, as Pleasant View is coming to be known, for July, Mr. Davis going down for week-ends.

Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools and his family will spend their vacation season at Shelter Harbor, leaving this week. Mr. Parker will divide his time between the resort and Danielson, where his usual summer school duties will engage his attention much of the time between now and September.

Some cases of a minor nature were disposed of at this morning's session of the town court.

Michael Dascoli, whose home place is in the Riverview section, is picking string beans from his garden, and has been for several days. They are of splendid quality, too. Growers remark that it is unusual to get beans so early in the year, and Mr. Dascoli is the first to report picking. He also was one of the first to have green peas in June, and has tomatoes so far advanced that they will be ready for picking in a few days.

Miss Helen (Mickey) McCall, Glendive, Mont., and Miss Esther (Jerry) Wanke, Rochester, Minn., the girl hitch-hikers, are on the long trail that leads back home. Having spent the week-end at Old Killingly pond, finding time to motor to Boston with a friend to see some historic sights, they started out today for the west. Miss McCall said that they hoped to reach home in about two weeks, given their usual good luck in getting rides. They expressed themselves as being more delighted with New England and its people than with any other section of the country. By the time they have reached home they will have covered about 12,000 miles in their rovings of nearly a year.

The project, announced a number of years ago, of having an all-concrete highway from Putnam, via Danielson, to Norwich is steadily being advanced. At the present time there is only one break in the concrete route between Putnam and Danielson, a stretch within the town of Killingly from the bridge at Elmville to a point at the southern border of Attawaugan, a distance of something less than two miles. Three miles of concrete between Wauregan and Danielson will be completed this fall, in addition to what is being built southward from Bishop's crossing in the town of Plainfield into Jewett City, and the five additional miles to be built between that place and Norwich on route 12. It is regarded as not unlikely that the Putnam-Norwich concrete road will be complete within two or three years.

STUDENTS OF LANGUAGE ALSO EAT SPANISH FOOD

STILLWATER, Okla. —(AP)— Students must learn to eat Spanish dishes as well as speak the language at Oklahoma A. and M. college.

Instead of sweltering in the classroom, summer school students gather to talk and study Spanish words as they eat Spanish dishes in a tearoom near the campus.

There is a penalty for speaking English during the sessions, and after lunch comes study in Spanish.

Experiments are under way at Michigan State college to see how long seeds can lie dormant underground and still sprout when planted.

SAVE A LIFE

When we stop to think that 33,000 persons are being killed each year and a million persons are suffering from injuries received in automobile accidents, it is strong enough evidence that something more should be done to prevent them. There is an obligation resting upon those in danger of being included in the casualty list and there is equal responsibility to be shouldered by the auto drivers.

Not all the accidents are due to the defective condition of automobiles. Certain of them are, and it is perfectly evident that the car that is mechanically fit and equipped with effective brakes, properly focused headlights and a good tail light should not figure in accidents if good judgment is used by the man at the wheel and he is not imposed upon by other highway users.

In an effort to save lives, an effort in which every auto driver should be interested, a plan is in the making for all New England to participate in the checking of automobiles. The purpose is to overcome the defective equipment which exists in too many instances, and to have the state or some state organization lead the campaign, which is to be conducted during August.

This is a move in which every conscientious driver will be anxious to participate. It is one which the careless and inconsiderate driver will try to dodge. It will be an anxious time for the person who is driving without a license and whose car isn't equipped for safe operation. But those are the very drivers and the very cars which are contributing so often to the automobile accidents. If they can be eliminated, through repairs or otherwise, it will be a big contribution to safer conditions, and from the present-day records there isn't anything which is much more needed.

Enlisting the efforts of the New England states ought to be no difficult matter. Some of them have tried the idea, with good results, and with all of them cooperating at the same time a helpful influence for safer conditions in this part of the country should be the outcome. If, by any chance, it should reduce the fatalities and accidents in this part of the country, it would be a most welcome accomplishment.

THE RADIO NUISANCE

There are those who will have a lot of sympathy for the residents of Washington who have complained over the manner in which certain radio owners make a nuisance of their loud speakers by trying to entertain the neighborhood against the wish of those directly concerned. They will likewise indicate their approval of the commissioners' action in establishing regulations and making the needless noise from loud speakers a punishable offense.

The radio is a wonderful invention. It is enjoyed by great numbers. It is to be found in a great majority of homes, but it is something which a household wants when it wants it and which it objects to when it doesn't. The radio has passed the time when it was a novelty. People still marvel over it, but they don't like to be forced to hear it, or certain programmes, whether they like it or not. It is that feature of it which is frequently carried too far. Instead of restricting the music or the lecture, or whatever the programme may be, to those within the home where the set is located, it is frequently the case that it can be "heard for blocks." This as a steady diet for hours is tiresome and irritating. It becomes too much of a good thing and the commissioners of the District of Columbia have decided that instead of relying upon the good judgment of the radio owners to control the situation it is necessary to set up regulations and make the commission of such a nuisance punishable.

It is unfortunate that radio owners have made this step necessary. It is too bad that they have not shown more consideration for others. It is regrettable that they have not seen the need of applying the Golden Rule without being forced to adopt a different policy. Washington isn't the only city that has suffered from this situation but it has been forced into action quite the same as other cities will be if similar disregard is displayed for the rights and feelings of others. There is little or no excuse for turning a radio on full blast when equipped with loud speakers, and it is strange that this isn't more generally realized than it seems to be and regulated in each home without resort to local laws.

OUT OF GERMANY

It is easy to understand that Germany is highly pleased by the withdrawal of the last of the Allies' forces of occupation. This is one of the conditions of the treaty arrangements which has chafed. It was resorted to as a means of insuring the carrying out of the treaty of peace and unquestionably has had its effect. Germany has not liked it, but it has recognized the wisdom of so abiding by requirements that as little friction as possible would result.

Through the improvement in the relations among the European countries it has been seen that this provision could be abandoned in the interest of still better relations and as a means of decreasing the expense of Germany. On previous occasions certain of the occupational forces were withdrawn, it being years since American troops were included among the forces in Germany, and Germany has demonstrated through its acts that it was meeting its obligations so that there was justification in permitting it to take advantage of the treaty provision whereby the 15-year occupational period could be reduced.

Through the help of the Dawes plan, the Locarno treaty and the Young plan the situation has been gradually shaping itself for what has taken place. Germany has demonstrated its intentions to pay its debts under the treaty and the subsequent modifications of the respective plans. In recognition thereof, the allied nations are willing to remove their soldiers from German soil, subject, of course, to a continuance of existing conditions, but with the understanding that if Germany fails to keep the agreement there can be a restoration of the occupational army, the withdrawal of which Germany has sought too long and seriously for it to do anything that would bring it back.

As long as foreign troops were on German soil they served as a constant reminder that it had lost the war, that it was not in full control, that it had to be guarded. While the relationship of the troops with the German people was, for the most part, favorable, it was impossible to reconcile their presence. One can readily appreciate the German feeling and its desire for its termination and there are reasons for believing that no mistake has been made in calling home the last of the occupational forces.

OUR MINISTER TO HAITI

Because of his peculiar fitness for the position and his thorough understanding of conditions in Latin American republics, President Hoover has selected Professor Dana C. Munro, chief of the division of Latin American affairs in the state department, as minister to Haiti.

Haiti has been having its troubles for a considerable time. It has grown tired of the American occupation and following representations from that country, the United States sent a special commission to study the situation. That commission did a quick and efficient job. It didn't bring the marines home, but it won the confidence of the Haitians, and it made suggestions which have been carried out by that republic and with a further demonstration of fitness the time will be advanced as rapidly as possible for the complete withdrawal of our occupational forces. We are not there because we wish it that way. We were forced to adopt that means of protecting that republic and had Haiti met its responsibilities better our stay there would not have been as long.

In the sending of a minister to Haiti to deal with the situation, a step taken on the commission's recommendation, much responsibility rests on that official. No one understands this better than the president, and with that in mind he has selected a man in whom he has full confidence and one who, through his acquaintance with affairs in that region, should be particularly successful.

Haiti is a small republic, but it has some important problems. This country, as well as Haiti, is hopeful of a satisfactory outcome of the commission's plan whereby the new minister will not only assume the usual diplomatic duties but take over those of the military high commissioner, with the idea of gradually reducing them and coming to a new and better understanding with Haiti for the benefit of its future peace and prosperity.

DR. H. W. WILEY

What can be accomplished by persistent advocacy of a cause is illustrated by the long fight that was maintained in behalf of pure foods by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley and the successful outcome of his endeavor.

For years Dr. Wiley's name was before the country as the result of his insistence that certain preservatives were dangerous. Dr. Wiley waged his battle as the chief chemist of the federal department of agriculture, a position which he held for many years, and it was back in 1906 that he saw the effort culminate in the enactment of the pure food laws of this country. Perhaps it is too much to say that this legislation would never have been enacted but for the determined and relentless efforts of Dr. Wiley, but certainly it would not have come at that time, for it was more than a score of years that he gave his best efforts to secure it.

During all that time he was obliged to match his efforts against well-organized opposition. That didn't cause him to abandon it in any degree. He was as determined to accomplish what he believed was important for the health of the country as he was in securing his education. That was an effort put through against many handicaps. It was continued with interruptions until he secured his medical degree, only to direct his efforts in fields far from what he had first intended. Instead of becoming a practicing physician, which was his early ambition, he developed into one of the country's noted food experts, and it is to his credit that legislation for the protection of the consumer was secured. He sought to serve humanity, and he did, but through a different channel than planned.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WASHINGTON, June 30—Washington official circles are giving to Representative Tilson of Connecticut the credit of having turned the attention of President Hoover to Colonel Frederick H. Payne, the recently appointed assistant secretary of war, and by his wholesale endorsement secured the appointment of Payne.

Whether or not that is true, it sounds as if it might be. Col. Tilson and Col. Payne have been cronies for a number of years. Each has faith and admiration for the other. Tilson was in charge of the ordnance measures, as a military expert, and member of the military committee of the house all through the world war; Payne was also an ordnance expert. Their friendship dates even farther back. Tilson is one of the closest personal friends and advisors of the president, and as he knew Payne to be admirably qualified for the position of assistant secretery, it seems likely the story of Tilson being Payne's strongest and wisest backer is well worth credence.

Col. and Mrs. Payne have set up housekeeping in Washington, and Mrs Payne proposes "to stand by" no matter how hot the Washington summer may be, as the secretary wants to become perfectly familiar with his duties, and Mrs. Payne wants to lessen the hardships of a summer of steady grind.

Ever since Hon. James Hamilton Lewis, democrat, of Illinois, has come to the front as a candidate for re-election against Mrs. McCormick, stories of the former senator, his famous clothes, his keen wit and his remarkable quality as "a mixer" have been as active in circulation, as any "best seller" on the list. Personally we recall a certain campaign down in Maine, when Lewis was sent to one of the logging camps "way down east" to talk to the men. On his return, the senator told some of his experiences, and told them in a way, and with a drawl and psuedo English accent beyond the ability of cold type to express.

It was summer time; the camp in the very back woods; the men in rough surroundings. Trey had never in their lives seen anything like the whiskered senator, dressed in white flannels with white shoes, immaculate, polite, courteous, as if in a drawing room.

Lewis got to the camp about 6 in the afternoon. A big sun-tanned, uprolled sleeves girl greeted him. Lewis clicked his heels together military fashion, and said with that inimitable English accent "My deah girl—I should like a bawth before I dine."

"There's a tin dipper and basin out behind the shack. Keep goin' till you find it."

Lewis kept going and on his return to the log house, sat down at the long wide board that served as a table. The girl stood by and said as in one word "Baked-beans—fish balls—fried ham an' eggs flap jacks." She paused expectantly. "My deah girl" remarked Lewis in smooth, golden accents, "why any one of those would kill me."

"All right," said the girl without a smile "which will you take?" Lewis took the beans.

But Maine democrats who were with Lewis that trip, say that those rough logsmen, "fell" for him, as for no other campaigner, when he made his talk after the evening shadows fell. Lewis is an orator—he knows how to make folks listen to him; and although Maine continued to go republican, Lewis won a new fame and a new following, down in that Maine lumber camp and the stories were repeated far and wide.

A new Lewis story is now going the rounds. As the story runs Senator Lewis, in full evening clothes, was standing just inside the door of the dining room of a big and fashionable hotel, waiting for friends. It was in Chicago. In swept a lady, who mistook Lewis for the head waiter and demanded to be seated. Lewis clicked his heels, bowed low and pulled a chair at a nearby table. As the lady took it, she said in a patronizing manner, "What do you recommend for dinner?" Again Lewis bowed and replied, "Madam, except I am a married man, I would recommend you dine with me." He bowed and sauntered off to meet a party of friends with whom he was to dine.

And while we are speaking of the senate, there are a number of men in both political parties who are not averse to seeing former Senator Hitchcock, democrat, Nebraska, enter the lists against the turbulent and insurgent Norris.

You see, every one knew just where Hitchcock stood. They could count him as for or against them. He stood square on the democratic party platform; he stood by his party through thick and thin; he swallowed the league of nations whole, although it seemed pretty generally understood he did so as a party man following President Wilson, rather than because he was personally enthusiastic for the league.

On the other hand, Norris stands on a drifting platform he constructs for himself. It is a platform of denunciation and for what he calls reform. It drifts first to one thing and then to another, always with the purpose of planting mines or snags in the path of regular republicanism.

Norris has no other chart than the unflinching desire to bring the party with which he is nominally affiliated, into line with his personal views. Even Borah cannot outdo him in this. To have Norris insist on wearing a republican tag, is a liability to the party, so it is small wonder some of Hitchcock's old republican friends in the senate could stand the blow without wincing, if Norris lost and Hitchcock won in the November election.

At the last senatorial election in Nebraska the republicans drew Howells, who though not a leader, has made them a lot of trouble by being headstrong, backing out of his senatorial stall, taking the bit in his teeth and trot down a path of his own, instead of following republican leaders.

Shipstead of Minnesota is the only legitimate non-party man in the senate. He has absolutely no party pledges to fulfill. He is listed as a farm-labor senator, but that seems to be an elastic title, for no one questions his official right to vote as an independent, as he sees fit. Shipstead is big, blond and a lover of out-door life. He is of Nourse ancestry, stands firm against the world court, league of nations and the London treaty. Shipstead is quiet in manner, speaks slow with a strong foreign accent, though he was born in this country. He blazes into flame when speaking against the measures he disapproves. He is a marked contrast to the so-called insurgent group, with which he most often votes. He enjoys the unusual prestige of not being tied to the apron strings of any party or faction, so can stray from one political pasture to another wih giving just cause for resentment.

Senator Brookhart got the worst call down of his life, when he attempted to defeat the confirmation of MacNider as minister to Canada. Brookhart stood with both hands on his desk, and launched a bitter personal attack on the nominee. One by one senators got up and left the chamber, till Brookhart was talking to empty chairs. Then came the roll call, and MacNider was confirmed with only one vote against him. That vote was cast by Brookhart.

A GOOD PROSPECT

"I'd have given $10 to have slept another hour!"

Nancy Cantwell yawned. Her black eyes, usually so twinkling, were rather somber this autumn morning.

"It's so silly keeping some one out at that new subdivision all Sunday morning; who's going to look at houses this time of year? But I promised to go out to Sunset Terrace—so here goes. I'll be back for dinner."

It was really delightful to ride in the bus past the wide fields and golden-tinted woods. Nancy relaxed in spite of her early-morning peevishness. Getting up at 8 on Sundays wasn't so funny; but this last hint of Indian summer across the hills was beautiful, with a wistful, almost poignant loveliness that caught at the heart.

"What a darling house, the gray one with the soft green shingled roof and that fascinating irregular stone wall! It would be fun, after all, to start a home out here, where everything is new."

Nancy drew a deep breath as she stood at the door of the artistic little real-estate office perched upon a knoll beside the road. Her eyes, now soft and interested, gazed off across the wooded country to the several attractive houses, cozy, graceful bungalows, which looked as though they would be charming inside.

"I'd love to go through that gray one with the wide porches and the ivy climbing over the door."

She was restless rather than bored by 11 o'clock. If she could tramp about and see the houses it wouldn't be so bad. But Mr. MacFarlane had asked her to stay here until eh came out. He thought he had a good prospect.

The sound of a car coming down the hill brought her to the window, where she watched with some eagerness as a tall young fellow stopped his roadster and surveyed the landscape. She drew back when he entered the little office.

"Pardon me," his voice was nice, too, but he looked rather amazed at the sight of Nancy in her trim blue suit and smart hat. "I was to meet Mr. MacFarlane or some one from his office to look over some houses." Nancy nodded and smiled.

"Yes," she answered, "Mr. MacFarlane sent me out. He can't be here until 12, but I have the keys and the list of the various places for sale."

"Could you come along and look over the houses with me," he asked. "We've a very fussy client to please, and a woman's opinion is a big help. It won't take long." Nancy's eyes were shining.

"I'd love to. I've been longing to see those houses."

The next hour flew by. Nanvy batted eagerly, poking her nose into every nook and corner, sighing with delight over every wide veranda and roomy fireplace. The young man, who said he was Duane Crandall of Simonds and Cresswell, was as pleased and interested as Nancy.

"I say, isn't it great? I never knew a small house could be so attractive. I've lived in hotels and apartments all my life. I believe I'd like a place out here." His eyes were eagerly fixed on her as he talked. How nice he was! Nancy's cheeks deepened in color as he watched her.

"Me, too!" The confession left her rather breathless.

At 12 o'clock Nancy received a telephone call from Mr. MacFarlane. Hal there been any prospects? Nancy's eyes danced as she looked at Duane.

"Yes, a very good one. He's taking an option on a house." As she turned to the door the young man spoke eagerly.

"May I take you home if you've finished here? I'll have to find out where yo ulive if I'm to see you again soon." As they sped through the bright autumn noonday in the cozy roadster Nancy blushed a his words.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Phineas Wheeler, Schoolmaster and Toll Collector

Mr. Editor: We read a good deal in your columns about the "Old Timers" and what they used to do. I wonder how many are living today who used to cross over the old toll bridge to the east side, and pay toll to that good old timer Phineas Wheeler, schoolmaster and toll collector. Phineas Wheeler lived in North Stonington where he taught school for 20 terms. One of his hands becoming disabled he removed to Norwich where he took up his abode at the old toll bridge house.

I had the pleasure of visiting Phineas Wheeler's daughter, Mrs. James Fitch. She showed me all of the old toll books and the records of Phineas Wheeler's school in the toll bridge house.

The first toll he took in was on March 4, 1852 and the items that follow are most interesting:

April 10, 1852 Austin Roath paid toll on 2 one horse wagons—.12 1-2.

Dec. 20, 1852—Jabez Roath paid toll on one load of wood and an empty—.18 3-4.

The cost of oil to light the bridge for six years and three months was $98.40 or $1.17 a gallon. Mrs. Fitch was a little girl; but she remembers how she used to help her father hang the lanterns in the bridge for the night. The school books like all the other books look very ancient, the size of them being about 5 1-2 inches long by 3 1-2 wide. There is the Book of Knowledge 1786: English grammar 1792: Hymns and Spiritual Songs 1709: Elements of Geography 1795 and a Geography and Atlas 1826.

On November 1, 1858 Phineas Wheeler opened his school upstairs in the toll house. I found that in 1858 Edwin Roath paid one week's tuition for his sons Williams, Tyler, and Calvin at 25c each.

John Fox paid the same amount for his daughter Ellen. Robert Harris paid 25c for his son Orrin. While in 1859 Alfred H. Vaughn and Austin Fitch each paid 25c for one week's tuition. William R. Burdick paid 20c for four days. William B. Palmer, Thomas N. Chapman and many others were on the roll.

The amount of tolls taken in from the bridge was $10,793.55. The bridge including the toll house was bought by Norwich and Preston for $6,000, when it became free. I regret that I did not live in the days of the old toll bridge and have my name written in those wonderful old books that have the appearance of having come over in the ark.

The Lynching Record for First Six Months of 1930

Mr. Editor: I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, that in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings. This number is 5 more than the number four for the first six months of 1929; four more than the number five for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as the number nine for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is four more than the number five for the first six months of 1924; six less than the number 15 for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921.

Of the persons lynched one was white and eight were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, 5, murder, 1; bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; attempted rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

Yours very truly,
R. R. MOTON,

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 30—So far as the prohibition aspect of the New Jersey republican senatorial primaries is concerned, things haven't changed much. New Jersey is still wet.

So the only very surprising thing about the Jersey vote in a non-presidential year is the size of Mr. Morrow's victory. That was not expected by most Washington political dopesters.

New Type.

It serves to launch the quiet mannered, small statured and modest Morrow into the political turmoil under happy auspices.

Even before he had displayed unsuspected abilities as a campaigner and vote getter, speculation was rife as to whether his belated swing to political life might not mean that a new figure for high office was arising.

Morrow has always been an effective, quiet, go-getter. He's a new type to politics in a way.

On the very night when returns from the primaries were coming in, Morrow was describing himself to an audience in Newark as formerly, "a somewhat inconspicuous member of a rather conspicuous business house and since then an amateur diplomat."

That certainly is modest enough to satisfy the most exacting taste, particularly when you stop to note that the "conspicuous business house" referred to was the house of Morgan and the achievement of the amateur diplomat was swift tranqualization of previously dangerously disturb American-Mexican relations.

To pass so lightly and gracefully over all that is not the usually accepted idea of what politicians have to say of themselves.

Until November.

Some of the Bystander's Washington newspaper colleagues have been nosing about in Jersey, seeing what they could see as to November prospects. They seemed to think Morrow's election over his vigorous, hard-hitting democratic rivals was not necessarily assured. That was before the primary, however.

It is a long time to November, however, politically speaking. And the New Jersey campaign doubtless will command as much public attention as did the recent primary.

Regardless of what may happen in that connection, Calvin Coolidge certainly started something when he drafted his old college chum to help solve aviation problems of his administration.

That actually was Morrow's political debut.

A YANKEE ABROAD

The Indian Masses

LONDON — The mentality of the masses in India, for whom Mahatma Gandhi is trying to achieve freedom from British rule, is high.

Potentially these brown skinned people are capable of great things. Practically, of course, they are mainly untutored and quite illiterate, and in many respects are treading the paths their ancestors trod.

During a tour of India a few years ago I had a chance to get acquainted with many types in the country. One of the most interesting was the personal servant who accompanied me.

Custom termed him "boy," but he was 44—a fat but impressive individual, with expansive shoulders, who sprang from the coolie class of Madras.

He spoke many dialects and could make sounds which corresponded closely enough to English to be understood. Incidentally he had 13 wives, in 13 different cities.

Naive, But Shrewd

Sam was a queer mixture of shrewdness and childish naivete. His mental processes were to me a constant source of amazement, and not in frequently embarrassment.

We were en route from Calcutta to Gwalior, where I was to be the guest of the maharajah. We had to leave the main railway line and proceed to Gwalior by a branch. The Gwalior train had left when we arrived at the junction. There was no other train that night, and there was no hotel at the junction.

Sam proceeded to the office of the junction superintendent, a native. There was great excitement among the employes. The superintendent who greeted me was terrified. He stammered apolgies because the Gwalior train had gone without me.

"I didn't know that you were aboard; they didn't inform me," he almost sobbed. "The train has been gone nearly an hour, but I will try to catch it and have it return."

The superintendent rushed off and started telephoning to try to catch his train. After a few moments he came back in a state of absolute funk. The train had passed the last station at which it was possible to halt it.

But the superintendent would do everything in his power for me. A private car which happened to be at the station should be placed at my disposal for the night.

Inquiry and Cause.

As My Boy Sam got me fixed up for the night, I propounded a question which had puzzled me:

"Sam, what was it you told the superintendent when we first arrived?"

Sam paused in the midst of arranging my clothes and related precisely:

"I told him, your honor, that you were greatest maharajah in America. I say you live in big palace with many wives and so rich you got lot more money than any rajah in India, I tell him that rajah of train Gwalior expecting your honor in train tonight, and rajah be at station to meet you with many soldiers and elephants. I tell him you furious, and rajah of Gwalior be furious, and superintendent sure get sent prison for life."

YOUR HEALTH

The Age Misnamed Dangerous

By Frederick W. Parsons, M. D., Health Commission, Albany, N. Y.

In the mature period the vital processes moderate. With men the progress is unobtrusive and little is thought of it, but in women attention is attracted by about equal amounts of over-emphasis and misinformation to the impending absence of an event which formerly occurred monthly. Some women dread this change and anticipate the discomforts which common talk has convinced them is unavoidable at this period of their lives. Old wives tales recount traditional difficulties, and so women have been led to expect a trying time.

A decrease in frequency, a decrease in the amount, or even the complete cessation of menstruation is at the proper age a natural and orderly proceeding which should cause no apprehension. Cessation merely marks the close of the reproductive phase of adult life which a wise nature limits to the period of greater vigor in order that the offspring shall have the best chance to survive. It is not responsible for altered disposition nor for the development of mental disease, and for the great majority of women it brings considerable relief.

Every age has its own changes and years bring experience, judgment, and new activities, aims and desires as well as physical growth and evolution. Ordinarily we are only vaguely conscious of the processes of change, if we are aware of them at all. But the idea that "I am getting old" sometimes leads a woman in the forty-fifty decade to feel a sense or disappointment over the passing of youthful dreams and this feeling often finds expression in symptoms entirely imaginary or in the enlargement by the mind of trifling feelings which otherwise would have passed unnoticed. Unstable, imaginative women are inclined to blame on nature everything which they experience at this time. They look for and find the symptoms they seek. Patent medicine makers, knowing this, by suggestive advertising make sick people out of those uncritical persons who desire to be convinced they are ill because they have acquired the idea that illness is inevitable. Usual explanations for middle-aged ill health in women deserve to be disregarded. There is no reason for a woman to have ill health at that age or to be changed in disposition or appearance. Health and looks are often matters of temperament. A good disposition, a cheerful outlook and proper bodily hygiene will keep one young in everything but years. A gracefully aging woman can be and generally is lovely.

Were it not for the external evidences a woman would not know what was taking place. Men experience a similar moderation in activity but having no outward manifestations fail to realize it. Women would be better if they thought of it less and regarded it as an occasion long prepared for and entirely natural.

Increased frequency and increased volume generally are due to local conditions which may prove serious, and for these conditions one should consult a physician. But do not be concerned about a reduction or complete cessation or expect to have ill health before, during or after the menopause.

Little Talks on Thrift

The Horton Printing Company, Meriden

Doubtless inspired by the prestige given the printing industry by that famous early American, Benjamin Franklin, one Elisha A. Horton founded, in 1867, E. A. Horton & Co., doing general printing. Headquarters were in the old Hall & Lewis building, Meriden.

After seven years of successful business, the plant was moved to its present location at 21 Church street.

Upon the death of Elisha Horton in 1893, Isaac C. Lewis reorganized the company, with himself as president, Selah A. Hull, vice-president and treasurer, and William G. Hooker, secretary. Auditors were George W. Fairchild and Baldwin I. Thompson.

Mr. Hooker passed away in 1913; whereupon Mr. Thompson became secretary and manager and also took over the former secretary's stock in the concern, now known as The Horton Printing company.

After 15 years as secretary and a major stockholder, Mr. Thompson completed a deal whereby he became president and sole owner of the business. Mr. Thompson, or "B. I." as he is popularly known, has been continuously identified with the company 47 years.

The business is now conducted by and under the active management of his son, Raymond B. Thompson, vice-president, and the secretary, Miss Florence M. Alexander.

The plant is flourishing and provides industry at the present time for 35 of Meriden's good citizens.

With modern type faces and methods and a co-operating organization, the company is turning out first grade of work, covering all branches of printing from business cards or wedding invitations to catalogs, stamping, embossing, four-color process printing, binding, etc.

The officers of the company are: R. B. Thompson, president; B. I. Thompson, vice-president; Edna L. Thompson, treasurer; Florence M. Alexander, secretary.

FIVE FINED IN COURT FOR PART IN FIGHT

The five Norwich men, who participated in a drunken fight at a party at the unoccupied George C. Butts house, No. 4 Sachem street, Saturday evening, were found guilty in the city court Monday morning and received fines. Ralph Tomaino, 22, Arthur Baribeault, 25, Edward Joubert, 31, and Walter Corcoran 21, each paid fines of $5 flat on the breach of peace charge, and Matthew Morrell, 22, was fined $10 and costs, $5 of which was for an additional charge of intoxication. He paid $23.50.

According to the police, who gathered in the celebrators on the complaint that there was a drunken brawl in session, two young women members of the party made their escape. As a result of the fight two of the men were slightly injured, Corcoran receiving a cut over his left eye and Morrell an injured right eye, while Joubert had his straw hat smashed. A whiskey bottle, a bottle containing a small quantity of red liquid, a glass and a cup were secured by the police when they made the arrests.

MRS. MARY WOOSTER SUTTON ADMITTED TO BAR

In the presence of members of the New London county bar Monday morning in the superior court here, Mrs. Mary Sutton of Groton was administered the oath of attorney by Clerk John H. Walker upon the order of Judge Allyn L. Brown and made a member of the Connecticut bar for New London county. Her application for admission to the bar was presented by Judge William H. Shields, president of the New London county bar association, who mentioned that the county bar association had unanimously endorsed Mrs. Sutton and that it was voted to recommend that she be admitted without examination, and be made a member of the bar.

Attorney George H. Gilman, chairman of the investigation committee from the county bar association, spoke of Mrs. Sutton's high qualifications and recommendations and Judge Brown in addressing her on her admission to practice at the Connecticut bar made congratulatory remarks. Mrs. Sutton is qualified to practice law in several states.

Eugene Saunders and secretary and treasurer, Herbert B. Cary, which position he has held since the incorporation of the Co. 24 years ago. Mr. Cary was also appointed general manager of the store, and Mr. Saunders, a director of the company.

His interests have been purchased by Mr. Cary. Mr. Saunders has been in the hardware business for many years, securing his first knowledge in the T. H. Eldredge store, later working at the Eaton Chase company. Of late he has conducted a successful grocery store on Laurel Hill.

CHARGE WAS CHANGED TO RECKLESS DRIVING

The original charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor was changed to reckless driving in the case of Nicholas Vitiaz, 39, of Jewett City, was tried in the city court Monday morning. He was fined $25 and costs on this charge, paying $28.14. The accused was arrested Sunday evening near Taft's station, Taftville, upon the request of John C. Atterbury, Jr., of Blissville, who noticed him driving all over the road. He complained to Officer Woitkiewicz who put after Vitiaz in Atterbury's machine and caught up with him just over the city line.

OBITUARY

Alvin C. Bentley

The death of Alvin C. Bentley 83, formerly of this city, occurred Monday in the Milford hospital. He was formerly a printer employed by The Bulletin company, but had been retired for the past 15 years. He was a member of the typographical union in Waterbury, where he resided for 15 years after leaving here about 25 years ago. For the last 10 years he had lived in Milford. WEDDING

Riley—Wiese

Miss Bertha H. Wiese of No. 54 Yerrington avenue, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Wiese, was united in marriage with John E. Riley of Westerly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius F. Riley, at 8 o'clock Monday morning at St. Patrick's church by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, who also celebrated the nuptial high mass which followed.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Genevieve Wiese of Norwich, as maid of honor, and by the Misses Pauline and Helen Riley of Westerly, sisters of the bridegroom, as bridesmaids. Cornelius Riley of Syracuse, N. Y., attended his brother as best man and the ushers were George Riley of Providence and Jerome Wiese of Norwich, brother of the bride.

The bride was charmingly attired in a princess gown of white satin, wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of roses and baby's breath. Her maid of honor was dressed in orchid chiffon with hat to match. Miss Pauline Riley wore yellow chiffon and Miss Helen Riley wore flesh pink chiffon, each wearing hats to match their gowns. The maid of honor and bridesmaids carried shepherdess crooks.

After the ceremony, a reception and supper was held at the home of the bride on Yerrington avenue and later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Riley left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and Canada, from which they will return in about two weeks.

To the bride the bridegroom gave a choker string of tear drop crystals and to each of the ushers and best man he presented scarf pins. The bride's gift to the bridegroom was a ruby ring and to her attendants she gave gold pendants with chains. The bride also received a wealth of other gifts, including linen, cut glass, silver, money and furniture.

Barber—Athens

Saturday evening at 7:30 a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vergason, of Lafayette street, when Rose E. Athens was united in marriage with Ralph B. Barber. Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, of Norwich Town, performed the double ring service.

The bride wore a flesh-colored gown with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaid, Miss Delia Rowe, sister of the bride, wore a yellow gown with hat to match. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses. The bridegroom's mother was matron of honor and was gowned in flowered crepe. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The best man was Albert Axelson.

A buffet lunch was served to relatives and friends from Providence, Putnam, Plainfield, Moosup, New York and Boston. Many beautiful gifts were received. The newly-married couple will be at their home at 27 Division street, after a short tour through the New England states.

Dawley—Perkins

Monday evening at 7 o'clock at a pretty June wedding, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Perkins of 142 McKinley avenue, Miss Lucille May Perkins became the bride of Herbert Arthur Dawley, son of Joseph L. Dawley of Westerly. To the music of the Mendelssohn Wedding March rendered by Swanson's orchestra, the bridal party entered the reception room and the ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church. The bride was attended by her maid of honor, Miss Charlotte Johnson, and the bridegroom had as his best man, Gardiner B. MacGregory.

The bride was charmingly gowned in bridal pink chiffon, carrying a bridal bouquet of pink roses, and the maid of honor wore blue chiffon. In the reception room, where the ceremony was performed, the floral decorations were in smilax and pink roses, with clusters of smilax on the ceiling, showered with pink roses. The dining room was in yellow, with Pernet roses for the centerpiece, and Tallsman roses with palms were used in the music room, the decorations being by Hawkins the florist. Following the ceremony there was a reception for the few intimate friends and relatives who were the wedding guests and a buffet luncheon was served, the Terminal catering, and the orchestra played for dancing.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a rope of pearls and to the best man he presented a bill fold. The bride's gift to the maid of honor was an amethyst ring. The bride received a large number of lovely gifts in silver, glassware and linen, and substantial checks.

The newly married couple left during the evening on a short, unannounced honeymoon trip and are to reside for the rest of the summer at Ocean Beach.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEMBERSHIP MEETING BY NORWICH COMMERCE CHAMBER

A membership meeting by the Chamber of Commerce, which set a high-water mark of success for such an affair was held Monday evening at the Norwich Inn, opening with a banquet at 7 o'clock, followed by the programme of addresses and other entertainment. Many of the members attended with ladies, covers being laid for 150 at the banquet.

The principal address of the evening was by President Aurin E. Payson of the American Thermos Bottle company, who spoke upon general business conditions, in which he gave it as his opinion that pessimism now was as unfounded as had been the extreme optimism of some periods in the past year and that we should look upon the present business recession as only a slight dip in the upward curve towards higher and better things. Business men, he declared, should be glad they were living in the United States, rather than in some other parts of the world where conditions were worse.

Secretary John Richardson was the other speaker, delivering a forceful but brief talk, in which he called upon Norwich people to realize the rich heritage which had come down to it from the past and to move on to a yet more glorious future.

After the singing of a verse of the Star Spangled Banner, President Frank R. Murdy called upon Rev James E. Dargan, curate in St. Patrick's parish, to ask the blessing before the menu was served. William G Park and F. Russell Smith, officiating as song leaders, brought out some snappy singing on the part of the diners, Waldo Newbury being at the piano.

In opening the programme that followed, President Murdy extended a welcome to all and expressed his acknowledgment to Larue Bliven, chairman of the membership committee, for making the arrangements for the banquet and to Secretary John Richardson and Miss Mary E. Bundy, assistant secretary, for carrying out the projects of the Chamber of Commerce.

He introduced State Attorney Arthur M. Brown as toastmaster of the meeting, who officiated in this capacity with his characteristic ease and readiness, having a happy introduction for each of the speakers, invariably with a touch of humor, and each one introduced added his own bit of humor to the interchange of pleasantries.

Toastmaster Brown announced that this was to be an all-home programme, for Norwich could produce a high degree of talent in whatever line was required, and as the first speaker he called upon Rev. James E. Dargan to give his impressions of Norwich since he came here two weeks ago from Hartford to be curate in St. Patrick's parish.

Rev. Father Dargan responded in an interesting vein, speaking of the picture of Norwich which was forming in his mind, of the cordiality of the welcome which he had experienced on many sides, and declaring himself to be a loyal citizen of Norwich, ready to cooperate in every worth-while enterprise. He was given hearty applause as he concluded his remarks with the words of a popular song, Happy Days Are Here Again, which he said expressed his feelings.

Henry N. Brynan, violinist, who Toastmaster Brown said was destined some day to bring great honor to Norwich, was next heard in three finely rendered solos, for which Joseph B. Downes was at the piano as accompanist. Mr. Brynan gave a German dance by Mozart, Melody from the opera Orfei by Gluck and a Russian gypsy dance. For an encore he gave a Russian lullaby by Kroll.

Financial Statement

Miss Bundy was called upon to make a statement of the financial condition of the Chamber of Commerce, which she did with several touches of humor, and spoke of the amount of dues outstanding, a total of $6,140, and appealed to the membership to reinforce the treasury of the chamber by cutting down this item.

Her plea along this line was endorsed by Toastmaster Brown, who then introduced President Payson of the American Thermos Bottle company.

Spoke on Business Conditions

President Payson was listened to with close attention as he gave a clear-cut analysis of business conditions at home and abroad. In part, he spoke as follows:

It is difficult to make interesting a talk involving mostly figures and statistics and yet it is by such figures that we measure general industrial and commercial activity. I have not the temerity to stand here tonight and attempt at this stage of the present recession to draw conclusions and make prophesies. You have seen in the daily press the variety of opinions expressed by people high in business affairs during the last six months. Some have said that normal conditions would return by the end of the first quarter and these have proved incorrect. Others have vouchsafed increased business activity by spring, again these statements have shown to have been too optimistic; and now appear another group of prophets who say that it must be this fall or winter before we will see an end to the present dullness.

Supply and Demand

It is interesting to note that in the present situation the fundamental law of supply and demand is still at work, in fact it is the continuous operation of this law that has brought about the present slowness of business in practically all areas. The whole world has produced more raw material than it can use and until that slack is taken up and those goods reach the consumer it is difficult to say how we can expect a material increase in business activity beyond the usual seasonal fluctuations. The difference between this recession and that of 1920 and 21 is the fact that at the start inventories of finished goods were generally conceded to have been very low in contrast to the existing super-abundance of raw materials. Finished goods inventories were high both in volume and in price and it was the rapid deflation of these values that brought distress in their wake and impaired materially some of the largest manufacturing and banking institutions. The present business recession has occurred in the face of surplus raw materials but with small stocks of finished goods on hand except in very few instances, one of these being radio industry. For this reason manufacturers have been able to avoid much of the damage due to high inventories and you will note that today a large portion of their reserves are in cash. Those industries which have quick and rapid turnovers have been able to take advantage even of the falling raw material at quantity prices and have even improved their position. I refer for instance to foodstuffs where the declining prices of raw materials is quickly translated into the finished product. On the other hand manufacturers who have slow inventory turnover, such as iron, steel, automobiles, etc., have not been able to take advantage of these lowering price levels.

Slight Dip in the Curve

Another point which it is well to remember is that industry and the demands of civilization are not standing idle. It does not take long for this excess capacity to be diverted to other lines and uses. In other words the point that I would like to emphasize is the great error of losing our perspective. The pessimism of this spring is just as out of place as the optimism of last spring. If I were to be guilty of any prophesy it would be that a few years from today we will look back on 1930 and see that it is merely a slight dip in the continually upward curve of industrial activity in the United States. This curve has been continually upward, except for the slight temporary variations, for over one hundred years. History repeats itself and it is idle to believe that conditions in the future can defy all the laws that we have learned in the past.

Foreign Trade Conditions

If you will pardon occasional reference to my own business I will touch lightly upon the conditions of foreign trade. It so happens that it is necessary for us, distributing our products in practically all of the consuming countries of the world, to have accurate trade information of conditions as they exist in the many different areas. We receive current reports of trade conditions from our agents who are very widely scattered. In addition to this we make good use of the government consular service; and the bureau of foreign domestic commerce examine the condition of our Thermos products and their market at our request in practically all foreign ports of any considerable size. Let us look at some of these countries and see what condition they are in.

We can dismiss Canada with the remark that business activity there generally parallels the United States. The interchange of trade ideas is very close and prosperity or recession in the United States is usually accompanied by similar fluctuations across the border.

The Central American and South American countries are having exceedingly hard times. Quoting from a report that has just been received from Brazil—"Conditions at the present time are at their worst. Except for the terrific fall in prices and exchange which was experienced in the last financial and commercial crisis of 1920-21 we believe that conditions are worse today than they were then. Orders for even foodstuffs are scarce at the present time. You can, therefore, imagine what little chance there is to sell a product like yours on any reasonable scale. Collections are frightfully bad. Losses are awfully heavy. Requests for extensions are more numerous than payments at maturity. You know, the terrific fall which has taken place in all commodities and more especially in those produced in a country like Brazil, such as coffee, sugar, cotton, cocoa—four of the leading products in all South and Central American countries and the West Indies. Consequently—enough said."

In the Far East.

Skipping for a moment to the Far East we find conditions that are interesting to us because they are so different from our own. But here the law of supply and demand is working. We have in the Far East an exceedingly interesting representative. Our Mr. Hodges is an Englishman with a rare sense of humor and his reports are delightful to obtain, even if at the present time, from a business point of view, they make very sorry reading. China as you know from the daily press is torn with internal strife. The trail of the various armies of the different Chinese factions are reaping a terrible toll from the country. Except along the border cities there is real distress. China is on a silver basis and the value of silver, as you know, in the last few years has depreciated over two thirds. This has caused an enormous increase in prices and in the cost of goods. Furthermore China not being a country producing manufactured goods to any large extent finds that imports, many of which are necessities, can only be obtained at prohibitive prices. Whenever one of the warring factions obtains control of an area where imports are received, the government institutes new taxes on these imports in order to obtain increased revenue for carrying on their civil strife.

In Japan the value of silk has in the last few years gradually come down until it is about one-third of what it formerly sold for. The Japanese government has attempted to come to the aid of the silk manufacturers and is buying silk, much the same as our own government is buying wheat, and cotton, with a view of maintaining reasonable prices for the producer. But these purchases inevitably prolong the recovery because that volume will hang over the market until it is ultimately disposed of. As we go down through the Strait Settlements and the Federated Malay States we find tin and rubber on a non-paying basis in fact some of the Holland merchants are proposing a two months holiday on the production of tin so that their African and eastern colonies can have their stock reduced and permit the fabricators to catch up on their supply.

Conditions In Europe.

Coming back to Europe we find conditions but slightly better. Germany is making a tremendous effort to win back her export market. It is an effort that one cannot help but admire. Her industries are much more susceptible to government pressure than in America and recently a general reduction of 10 per cent was put into effect with the consent of practically all exporters on all goods destined for foreign markets. The story in England is familiar with the doles system which has been their government's answer to the serious unemployment situation resulting from the free trade policy that they have followed for years.

In looking at all these countries of the world it will be seen that in each instance there is an over-production of raw material, tin, coffee, sugar, cotton, wheat, copra, silk, rubber, etc. Various attempts have been made to control the prices and prevent the downward trend. The attempts of the Stephenson committee to control rubber prices is now history but it failed. Likewise in the United States the attempt of the refiners to peg the price of copper at 18c also failed. One of the regrettable things about business recession in some of these countries, that I referred to before, is the fact that they are less able to stand depressions than in civilized countries because there they do not have financial resources and modern means of distribution. Over-production in one area cannot be rushed quickly to famine areas. They have no methods of relief and many times recessions in business are followed by the downfall of their governments. What looks to us like business recession is to them calamity.

U. S. Comparative Prosperity.

One cannot help but be impressed by the comparative prosperity of the United States when the trade of the whole world is seen in this perspective. It may not be a Christian spirit but it is certainly productive of a certain amount of human satisfaction to be able to look around and see that somebody is at least worse off than we are. With all the troubles of the American manufacturer today he can well be thankful that he is in business in the United States.

The Norwich Inn.

It would not be fitting to close these few remarks without some reference to the reason we are having our annual meeting here today—the completion of the Norwich Inn; and it takes no stretch of the imagination to see the connection between this inn, if the real significance of it is thought of, and our general business conditions today. You realize that last year American tourists spent literally $600,000,000 abroad, it is estimated that this year they will spend nearly $750,000,000. This is over three times the total war debt payments annually owed by foreign nations to the United States. A really stupendous figure. But tourists are not only going abroad they are going to California, Florida and New England. If New England has suffered in the past because of the changed conditions there is one prophesy that I would not hesitate to make and that is that in the future we will begin an era in which New England will be one of the premier places in America as a playground and vacation land for all who can afford to travel and spend their summers away from their work. Those of you who have seen the flat plains of the middle west and have ever had occasion to spend the summer in the heat of the south will realize what this rolling country with its desirable climate and excellent roads really means. Connecticut is located at the gate-way of this future development and if this inn is evidence of Connecticut Yankee ingenuity in adapting itself to these changed conditions, and if it is an attempt to take full advantage of what promises to be an attractive future, we need not worry about the development of this state. Furthermore we can feel that if the same energy is displayed by our people in the future as was exerted in bringing this inn to Norwich the present generation will not have failed and will be leaving as valuable a heritage to their children as history has presented to them.

President Murdy gave delight to the assemblage, when he sang "Sweet Mystery of Life," which Toastmaster Brown said was at the request of Judge Ayling, and President Murdy gave an encore number by singing the verse of "Gypsy Love Song," with the company joining in the chorus.

Secretary Richardson Speaks

Secretary John Richardson, to whose ability, energy and cheeriness of spirit the toastmaster referred, was the concluding speaker, and was given rousing applause as he closed his stirring address.

Secretary Richardson paid a tribute to his predecessor, Secretary Pilcher, in the accomplishments that brought about the Norwich Inn, and went on to speak of the wonderful background which Norwich has, but said that just now he felt there was a need of filling in industrial gaps by diversity of industry. Through the cooperation of President Murdy and the broad-mindedness of the directors, he said he believed it would be possible to announce by Sept. 1 the acquirement of a new industry.

He went on to speak of the business of the retail merchants and its importance to the community and urged that Norwich citizens should at least try Norwich stores first in supplying their needs, remembering that every dollar spent here was a factor toward school, church and playground and every Norwich interest. It is fundamental, he said, to put back in the Norwich pot every dollar that can and to think of what our dollars mean to Norwich merchants. With what we have we ought to have a great future before us in a wholesome, whole, rounded American community, one of the kind that contributes to make a great nation.

The remainder of the evening was given over to dancing, for which Thumm's orchestra played.

ZONING BOARD GRANTS THREE APPLICATIONS

Lack of a quorum at a meeting of the joint zoning board of the city and town of Norwich Monday morning at the office of Mayor Lee Roy Robbins in the court house for the hearing of three appeals to the board caused the three members attending to shift the meeting place to the home of Alex M. Pasnik, a member, in order to secure a quorum and thus avoid postponement of the hearings for a second time within a week. This move became necessary when only three board members appeared at the mayor's office, Chairman William S. Murray, Mayor Robbins and Andrew B. Davies. Mr. Pasnik was unable to attend as he is confined to the house with a bad foot and the fifth member, Walter T. Camp, is out of town.

As no one appeared in opposition to the applications at the hearing, at which Chairman Murray presided and Mayor Robbins acted as clerk in the absence of Mr. Camp, all of them were granted. The Goldberg Rubber Tire Co. was granted permission to erect four additional pumps at their service station at the corner of Franklin and Willow streets, while Harrington and Son were allowed to erect a building at about 695 Boswell avenue to be used for the purpose of conducting a monumental works.

The third application granted was that of Berkman Bros., of Yantic, who sought and received permission to establish a gasoline filling station upon their premises on the easterly side of the Willimantic highway in the village of Yantic; also to install four pumps at the same location.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMEN INJURED IN CHESTERFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, June 30.—An automobile owned and driven by Mrs. Thomas F. Quinn, Chicopee Falls, Mass., and in which were Mrs. Adeline Cohen, Mrs. John Haliburton, Mrs. George Queior, all of Chicopee Falls, and Mrs. Armand Seaney, of Holyoke, Mass., was wrecked in Chesterfield Saturday night when Mrs. Quinn in some unexplained manner lost control of the steering wheel, causing the car to overturn. All of the women sustained injury and were taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital. Mrs. Quinn sustained bruises to her arms, knee and shoulder; Mrs. Cohen received a lacerated right thigh and bruises to her neck and shoulder; Mrs. Haliburtor received an injury to her hip and pelvic bone; Mrs. Queior sustained injuries to her back and Mrs. Seaney suffered a lacerated knee and arm. After being in the hospital overnight, the women insisted on going to their homes. This they did, but on their own responsibility.

NEW HAVEN MAN HELD ON PICKPOCKET CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, June 30.—Solomon Shorr, 28, married, representing himself as a novelty salesman of 1156 Chapel street, New Haven, was arrested just outside of Danielson tonight on behalf of the local police who went him here for alleged pick-pocketing activities at the scene of an accident on lower Main street Saturday evening. Shorr, who was taken into custody by Lieut. Ross V. Urquhardt of the Danielson state police barracks and County Game Warden Thomas Daniels, was identified here by John Mijcher, whose pocketbook was lifted while he looked on at the accident Saturday night. Mijcher noticed his loss in time to jump on the running board of Shorr's automobile and regained his pocketbook, which contained $58 in cash and two money order checks totaling $17. Andrew Pleg lost $3.50 under similar circumstances.

Shorr was returned here by Chief of Police Thomas F. Grady and County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler. It was found that he had a record of six arrests at New Haven and the possibility was expressed that he may be linked with the theft of a roll of bills amounting to about $1,000 from the pocket of Kenneth Kouchlinis proprietor of the City Cash market, who was victimized while attending the Coleman Shows, during their stay at Windham field a few weeks ago.

Accompanying Shorr at the time of his arrest were Joseph Minini, alleged New Haven gambler, and Louis Best, of Highlands who are being held as suspicious characters. Shorr was driving a Jordan roadster bearing the same registration numbers that were secured here Saturday night.

CATCH YOUTHFUL BURGLARS OF FARM BUREAU OFFICE

Two breaks at the office of the New London County Farm bureau and another at the office of Lawyer John D. Hall, located in the Shannon building, which netted the youthful burglars $34 in cash, two books of postage stamps, a pocket piece and a magnifying glass, have been solved through a neat piece of work by Captain Thomas F. Murphy. Two School street brothers, aged 10 and 12, are responsible for the breaks.

One of the brothers, who had been setting off fireworks Monday evening was brought into police headquarters and reprimanded by the captain. The pocket piece, stolen from one of the offices, came to light and becoming suspicious Captain Murphy questioned the boy about it, with the result that he admitted that it was stolen by him and his brother. The boys then admitted that they broke into the offices and lifted the money and other articles.

They claimed that they had sold the postage stamps, spent part of the money and hidden a quantity of it in a shed in the rear of Max Gordon and Sons. Sergeant Matthew Delaney in company with the boys went to the shed and buried under a stone was $10 of the loot, while the boys had on their persons $3.90 in cash. The magnifying glass was also recovered.

The youths claimed that they broke into the farm bureau office on Thursday, securing $3, and again on Sunday, stealing a much larger amount, at the same time appropriating two books of postage stamps, and a magnifying glass, from the Hall office. According to the police $31 was taken by the boys in their second visit to the farm bureau office.

GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR BREACH OF PEACE

After being found guilty of a breach of the peace charge in the city court Monday morning, John Williams, 31, Porto Rican, was given a jail sentence of 30 days, suspended. A second charge of violation of the liquor laws was nolled upon the request of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, because of lack of evidence. The accused was arrested Sunday afternoon by Officer Albert Lamphere, when he had in his possession a quart bottle of alleged moonshine.

In reply to a question as to where he secured the liquor and what he was going to do with it, Williams testified in court that "I got it in a booze joint and was going to drink it up. I had been drinking all day and was going to take a little more to sober up." His arrest on the breach of peace count, came as the result of his creating a disturbance on High street earlier in the day.

COMPLIMENTARY LUNCHEON TO MRS. FRANK A. MITCHELL

Invitations have been received here for a complimentary luncheon to be given by the state department of public welfare in honor of Mrs. Frank A. Mitchell of this city who is completing 25 years as a member of the board. The luncheon is to be at 12.15 Wednesday at the Heublein hotel, Hartford.

NORWICH TOWN

In addition to the many hundred feet of cement walks and curbings at the attractive home of Dr. and Mrs. Frank D. Coles on Harland road Dr. Coles recently had constructed a wide area of cement foundation of extra thickness laid off in blocks several feet square, at the approach to his office and garage, in his long driveway which is bordered on one side with a flower garden containing nearly fifty varieties of summer blossoms.

Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford H. Snow and son Master Richard Snow, of Huntington Greene, motored Saturday to Quonochontaug Beach, R. I., and spent the week end at their recently built cottage "Heretis."

The congregation of Norwich Town First church united in the communion service, Sunday morning, at Park Congregational church. Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of Norwich Town occupied the pulpit.

At the Sacred Heart church Saturday morning at 7:30, the pastor, Rev. Edward J. Quinn, celebrated a month's mind high mass of requiem for the repose of the soul of Thomas O'Connell, for many years valued sexton at this church. Mrs. William A. Murphy organist directed the choir. Miss Mary Buckley sang De Profundis at the offertory, and for a waiting hymn, Abide With Me. There was a large attendance of relatives and family friends.

Announcement was made at the Sacred Heart church Sunday morning, that the services of the choir, also sessions of the Sunday school, would be dispensed with during July and August. For the first Friday of July at this church mass will be at eight o'clock.

In many locations at Norwich Town, foliage, shrubbery and flowers were never more beautiful, than at present. The hedges especially about the property of several local residents so well trimmed, are greatly admired. When passing the Sacred Heart church on West Town street, many observe the well kept grounds, so well laid out and cared for by the late Thomas O'Connell, sexton for many years. Until Mr. O'Connell's last illness it was his pride and pleasure to work around this place, beautifying the house of God and its surroundings. There is a variety of shrubbery and flowers around both church and rectory within the artistic hedge which forms the border.

ALLISON SURPRISES TENNIS WORLD BY BEATING COCHET IN STRAIGHT SETS

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30—(AP)—Wilmer Allison, blond whirlwind from Austin, Texas, upset the great Henri Cochet of France in straight sets in the quarter-finals of the British tennis championships today.

Cochet, the defending champion and recognized No. 1 player of the world, was beaten by scores of 6-4, 6-4, 6-3, in one of the most surprising matches ever witnessed here.

Although Allison had been playing brilliant tennis since his arrival in Europe with the United States Davis Cup team, few were prepared for the wonderful exhibition of serving, driving, volleying and smashing with which he all but swept his famous opponent off his feet. Cochet never had a chance to get started.

Two other Americans followed Allison into the semi-final round while the potent racquet of Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, gave the other berth to France.

Borotra downed George Lott of Chicago, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, in a match that American adherents had far more hope of winning than the Allison-Cochet encounter. Bill Tilden trimmed Dr. J. Colin Gregory, one of England's two top ranking players, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3, and in an all-American encounter John Doeg, stalwart Davis Cup player from Santa Monica, Calif., turned back his Newark, N. J., rival, Gregory Mangin, 6-3 1-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In the semi-finals on Wednesday Allison meets Doeg and Tilden tries conclusions with Borotra, whose victory today saved the French from immediate and complete elimination from the tournament they have won for the last six years.

By his showing today, Allison, former American intercollegiate champion from the University of Texas, became a strong candidate for a singles berth on the United States Davis Cup team, although previously he had been slated only for doubles duty with Johnny Van Ryn as his partner.

Allison ranks seventh among American singles players and had been considered at his best in doubles. He was accompanied abroad by his bride of a few months and the trip is in the nature of a honeymoon.

Against the little French marvel Allison was expected to be lucky to win a single set, but he amazed the gallery of 15,000 by playing as sensationally as he did last year in doubles when he and Van Ryn won the British title and went on to beat the French in the challenge round.

Cochet until today seemed well-nigh invincible and had not been beaten by an American since Bill Tilden performed the feat in the Davis Cup challenge round of 1927 and John Hennessey defeated him at Forest Hills in the United States championships of the same year.

Cochet had loafed through the early rounds and seemed listless and uninterested at the start of the Allison match but the American after dropping the opening game at love and also losing the second, soon began to wake up the champion.

Serving well, driving with deadly accuracy to both wings and covering court with panther-like swiftness, Allison took the first set, then the second, and finally the match. In the first stages Allison played the net like one inspired.

The women's singles quarter finals feature tomorrow's programme. Phyllis Mudford, the little English sensation who has lost fewer games in this tournament than Queen Helen herself, opposes Mrs. Helen Wills Moody in the curtain-raiser on the center court in the first quarter final match, followed by Joan Ridley, England, vs Mme. Rene Mathieu.

Meanwhile, Elizabeth Ryan, American player living in England, meets Betty Nuthall of England on the No. 1 court and this match will be followed by one between Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Calif., and Cecile Aussem, Germany.

Bill Tilden and his Dutch partner, Hans Timmer, oppose Mangin and Berkley Bell, Tustin, Tex., in a third round doubles match on the center court and Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan play Mrs. Randolph Lycett and Mrs. J. E. Hill in the quarter-finals of the women's doubles.

Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan won easily today from Mrs. A. D. Stocks and Mrs. L. G. Owen, 6-1, 6-3, in a match that was almost totally eclipsed by the spectacular developments in the men's singles play.

MARBERRY HAS BETTER OF DUEL WITH BLAEHOLDER

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—Fred Marberry outpitched Blaeholder in a twirling duel today and then added the finishing touch by knocking in the winning run in the ninth to give the Washington Senators a 2 to 1 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The Browns' lone run came on a long homer by Kress.

Heinie Manush found Blaeholder for a double and triple out of four times at bat. Marberry kept well scattered the four hits he allowed St. Louis, while he and his mates made eight off Blaeholder. The score:

A'S RALLY BEHIND ROMMEL TO WIN FROM TIGERS

PHILADELPHIA, June 30—(AP)—A three-run rally in the eighth combined with Eddie Rommel's great pitching gave the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics a 3 to 1 decision over the Detroit Tigers today.

Vic Sorrell had the Mackmen blanked until the eighth, when Mickey Cochrane led off with his fourth single of the game. Simmons followed with another single and both scored on Foxx's triple. Foxx added the third run on a squeeze bunt engineered by Jimmy Dykes.

Singles by Gehringer and Alexander and Stone's sacrifice fly in the sixth saved the Tigers from a shut out. The score:

RUTH BANGS OUT 30TH HOMER AS YANKEES WIN

NEW YORK, June 30—(AP)—Babe Ruth swung into a 12-day and 12-game lead over his 1927 home run record today when he cracked out his thirtieth circuit drive of the season to lead the Yankees to a 15 to 4 triumph over the Chicago White Sox. The four-base hit was the Babe's fifteenth of the month.

George Pipgras pitched steady ball for the Yanks, easing up in the seventh to allow the Sox to score three times but a few runs like that didn't matter as Ruth and company collected their tallies in clusters of threes for four consecutive innings. Harry Rice led the Yankee attack with four hits while Ruth got three. The score:

INDIANS SCORE FIVE IN 8TH FOR VICTORY

BOSTON, June 30—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians fell upon Eddie "Bull" Durham, for five runs in the eighth inning today and defeated the Red Sox by that margin, 8 to 3. It was the first game of the series here. With one out in the eighth, Averill walked and Hodapp followed with a home run over the left field wall. Three more Cleveland runs went across the plate before the inning closed.

SHAMROCK V. SCORES FIRST VICTORY ON THE CLUDE

GOUROCK, Scotland, June 30—(AP)—The Shamrock V, with King Alfonso of Spain aboard, scored her first victory on the Clude today, finishing the 36-mile course in 3 hours, 4 minutes and 5 seconds. The White Heather, the only other of four starters to complete the course, finished 2 minutes and 37 seconds later. Both started from scratch.

The race confirmed the impression that Sir Thomas Lipton's latest America's cup challenger, the Shamrock V, is a great light weather boat.

RUTH TO BECOME A RETAIL MERCHANT

NEW YORK, Jun 30—(AP)—Babe Ruth, home run hitter and writer, announced today that he would become a merchant in the early autumn. He will open "Babe Ruth's Shop for Men, Inc., to be located "somewhere on Broadway." Papers of incorporation were filed today by his attorney.

"I have never aimed to be a dude but I admire a well dressed man," said Ruth. Emphasis will be placed on hats and caps in the new shop.

There is grave danger of the Police force of the city being disrupted.

Strange as it may seem, it's a fact nevertheless. And it is all the outcome of some officer on the force being complimented for his courtesy in directing a stranger to the boat races last Friday.

It seems that a state senator from South Manchester wrote to the mayor of our fair city expressing his appreciation of the kindness shown him by a local officer.

The fly in this ointment is that the state senator failed to name the officer or even give his number so that no one is certain just who the courteous policeman is.

As no names were mentioned practically every officer on the force is claiming that he is the man that the state senator meant. In fact the rivalry to be known as the courteous officer is so keen that one patrolman who was off duty on that day is laying claim to the title.

And each officer apparently has a valid claim for he can tell you just where and when the incident took place and just what was said. It would seem that on that day every officer on duty did a good bit of directing of strangers.

It looks as though Norwich can lay claim to having one of the most courteous police forces in the state if every officer did a good turn that day.

The only solution that will save the peace and quiet of the department is to have the state senator come to Norwich and parade the force before him and let him pick out the courteous officer.

But to whoever the bouquet belongs to it speaks mighty well for the police force and incidentally reflects much credit to the city.

BRAVES COUNT TWICE IN 8TH TO BEAT OUT PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, June 30—(AP)—Rallying after Pittsburgh had swept away their early lead, Boston tallied twice in the eighth today to defeat the Pirates, 6 to 5. Richbourg's single with the bases loaded gave the Braves their tying and winning runs.

The Pirates threatened in the eighth and ninth but could do little with Seibold. The victory sent the Braves into fifth place ahead of the Pirates.

The game marked the appearance of Lloyd Waner in centerfield for the Pirates for the first time this season, although he had been in one game last April, singling in a pinch. Waner has been out recovering from an operation performed during last winter. The score:

CUBS INCREASE LEAD BY TURNING BACK THE GIANTS

EIGHT AMATEUR BOUTS AT DANIELSON TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 30.—The stage is all set for the first series of amateur bouts held in Danielson in a long time and scheduled for Tuesday evening. There are to be eight bouts in the new North street arena that Louis Peloquin has erected on his property and which will be brilliantly lighted about the ring and well lighted elsewhere. The prospect is for the fans to witness the bout in real comfort and with added enjoyment.

Much interest has developed in this series of bouts, which will bring 30 battlers from various towns and cities for miles about. Some of the boys will not get a chance to go on Tuesday evening, but they will at later shows that Mr. Peloquin will arrange.

It is just about a sure shot that the fans will see plenty of action in the current show, for amateurs have no time to waste fiddling around, but are in there to sock each other out of the picture, if that be possible, and it frequently is.

Mr. Peloquin will pick from the talent tonight to arrange the bouts so that the boys may be as evenly matched as possible. Fans are coming from the towns represented by the amateurs and everything is all set for a big night out under the stars.

CITIZENS HAND IDEAL TEAM THIRD STRAIGHT DEFEAT IN CITY LEAGUE

A wild second inning, during which the Polish Citizens netted six runs on but two hits, beat the Ideals once again at the campus last night. The final score was 7 to 5. As a result, the Citizens moved into a tie with the Royals for first place in the league standing and the Ideals toppled deeper into the cellar with three straight defeats.

The Servicemen out-hit the winners, 10 to 7, and Omer Pepin out-hurled the Greene brothers, Bootsy and Johnny, but that second inning was too much.

After both sides had gone out in order in the first, the Cits, with Johnny Greene as lead-off man, came to bat in the early second and hit all the way around. Johnny opened with a two-bagger into left and moved to second while F. Smith was juggling Leo Jarvis' grounder. Leo was safe at first and Sydlo walked, to clog the bases, after Finn had popped to Liberty. Boots Greene tried to bunt on his third strike and was out when the ball went foul. Cimmy then hit an easy fly to left and when Buck Shahan, former Greeneville boy, now of Montville, let it trickle through his hands, Greene, Jarvis and Sydlo scored. Gaudette and Lloyd Jarvis both walked and the bases were again filled. Tony West then smashed a long double into center, scoring Cimmy, Gaudette and Jarvis. Johnny Greene, making his second appearance of the inning, walked, but Finn foul flied to Murphy for the final out.

The Ideals earned all of their runs, scoring twice in the third on four clean hits and three times in the sixth on four more. The final Citizen tally also came in the sixth.

Boots Greene, the starting hurler for the Cits, after yielding nine hits, was relieved by his brother midway through the sixth. Pepin went the entire distance for the losers and although he walked five, hurled fair ball and but for ragged support would have won. Lloyd Jarvis and Johnny Greene led the Citizen offense with a double and single apiece and R. Smith, J. Murphy and Pepin were best with the stick for the Ideals. Each had a brace of bingles. Nap Liberty, at third for the Idgals, turned in the best fielding exhibition, handling five hard chances without a slip.

Who Plays Tonight?

Whether there will be a game in the City league tonight is a question as there are two conflicting reports regarding the game. Earl E. Brigham speaking for the board of governors of the league said emphatically last night that the Royals and the Italians would play their regular scheduled game. On the other hand Manager Panek and Oney are equally as emphatic in their assertion that the Royals will be unable to play.

The management of the Royals state that they notified the board of governors last Friday that they would be unable to play this evening and that they understood that there would be no game. Further Mr. Oney said that neither he nor Mr. Panek had been notified that they were to play. Continuing Mr. Oney said that he had complied with the rules of the league in giving a twelve-hour notice that he would be unable to have his team on the field and that he understood that the Italians and the Polish Citizens were to play an exhibition game.

ROTARY AND POLISH TEAMS TO OPEN JUNIOR LEAGUE

The Norwich Junior league will open at the Duwell field on Wednesday evening with a game between the Rotary club and the Polish National Athletic club.

At a meeting held at the Duwell club last night, final plans were made for the opening of the season. Each of the six clubs entered in the league, together with members of the organizations sponsoring teams, are to gather at the Elks Home at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening and parade through the center of the city and then over to the Duwell field for the game itself. It is expected that the Rotary club band will furnish music for the occasion.

This year's Junior league is to be run along the same plans as the leagues of the past two years, which afforded excellent training for youngsters between 14 and 18 years of age. It is expected that the winning team will be awarded a trip to New York in September as their prize for the league championship. This has been done in the past two years and if sufficient funds are available at the end of the season it will no doubt be done again this year.

This year's league is composed of teams sponsored by the Rotary club, Elks, Duwells, Y. M. C. A., Italian Young Men's club and the Polish National Athletic club.

ARMY-NAVY AND MARTIN SERIES OPENS SUNDAY

Final arrangements have been completed for a series of games to be played between the J. B. Martin and Army and Navy baseball teams of Taftville for the baseball supremacy of the village, the first game of which will be staged at Martin field next Sunday afternoon.

It is rumored that Army and Navy club who have played but two games this season and have been defeated in both of them, are making an effort to secure an outside battery and a hard hitting outfielder to strengthen their team, so that they may be able to cope with the Velvetmen.

The J. B. Martin team on the other hand has been going great guns this year and will depend upon its regular line-up to see them through.

GRIFFITHS-RISKO BOUT IS WEEKS FISTIC HEADLINER

NEW YORK, June 30—(AP)—Tough old Johnny Risko, a stumbling block for many a good heavyweight, will try to stop Tuffy Griffiths' march through the heavyweight division in this week's best offering for cauliflower followers.

Griffiths and Risko, who recently cuffed Paulino Uzcudun around for ten rounds, will meet in the feature battle of ten-rounds at the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night. Sharing interest with this bout will be the ten-round non-titular engagement between Young Jack Thompson, welterweight champion, and Young Corbett of Fresno, at San Francisco, Friday. Young Stribling, Mason, Ga., heavyweight, meets the old trial horse, Bud Gorman, at the Newark Velodrome tomorrow night, and Primo Carnera is slated for a ten-round match with Jack McAuliffe of Detroit at South Bend, Ind., Saturday.

Detroit's Tuesday night show is headed by a ten-rounder between Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., featherweight, and Earl Mastro of Chicago, while Kid Chocolate, Cuban Negro 126-pounder, takes on Dominick Petrone of New York, in the headliner at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, Wednesday night.

Other bouts on the National schedule:

Lake Eyre: Australia's "Dead Heart."

A region whose edge has been in sight of a railway for 40 years, yet has come to be really known in the last year—such is the Lake Eyre basin of Australia, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Lake Eyre might be called Australia's 'Great Salt Lake,'" says the bulletin. "It is located only about 250 miles southeast of the geographical center of the continent and because of its desert surroundings has been called 'Australia's dead heart.'

"The lake and its immediate surrounds constitute the only area in Australia that lies below sea level. Its shore line is 39 feet lower than the ocean waters that surround the continent. The bottom of the lake can be considered with little error as at the same level: for Lake Eyre is in reality only a tremendous salt flat that is covered from time to time with a few inches of water. It becomes a lake after droughts are broken by unusual rains in the far away Queensland plains, so that floods rush down the usually dry river courses that lead to this closed basin. But quickly the shallow covering of water evaporates and the 'lake' becomes first damp and then dry.

"The recent exploration of the basin was accomplished in airplanes, from which photographic maps were made. At the time of the flights the lake was so dry that a land plane taxied along its center, stirring up a cloud of dust.

"Later to check on the observation that had been made from the air, a party left a railway station 50 miles from the main lake and after great difficulty covered the intervening rough country in a motor car. Near the shore the lake bed was found to consist of a thin salt crust underlain by dry gypsum sand from a few inches to a foot in depth, with damp clay beneath. Farther from the shore the salt crust increased in thickness, reaching 17 inches at 12 miles out, the greatest distance penetrated. This crust is pinkish. When dry it buckles up so that slabs lean against each other like childrens' card houses.

"A surprising discovery on the bed of Lake Eyre was the existence of colonies of ants some distance from the shore. Lizards half a foot long scampered over the surface as far as five miles from the shore. They are pinkish gray, the exact color of the salt crust.

"Along the western margin of Lake Eyre are 'mound springs' which apparently are natural outlets from the artesian waters that underlie large sections of Australia. As the waters bubble up they bring large amounts of mineral matter which are precipitated, building up roughly circular dykes. Eventually elevated mounds are created which contain in their tops little pools of water.

"By means of airplanes the uninhabited, formerly unknown region north of Lake Eyre has also come to be known. Effort after effort was made in the past to enter this region but it was found impossible to penetrate it even with camels which have conquered many of the out-of-the-way sections of Australia. The area is waterless and is covered with parallel sand hills hundreds of miles long and only a few hundred yards apart. The hills are from 50 to 100 feet high and so steep on one side that even an unladen camel can climb over only a few of them. From the air the region has the appearance of a vast field furrowed by a Titanic plow.

"The railway from Adelaide and Port Augusta, South Australia, which will in time cross the continent from south to north, skirts the southern shore of Lake Eyre. For more than 35 years its terminus was at Oodnadatta in the highlands 100 miles west of the northern end of Lake Eyre. Within the last few years the road has been extended to Alice Springs, 300 miles farther to the north. The country has a very sparse population. When railroad construction is not under way, trains are operated at intervals of two weeks."

WESTERLY

NEW SAFETY ZONE MARKER BEING TRIED OUT LOCALLY

The police committee of Westerly town council and members of the Westerly police force have been experimenting with a new highway traffic marking machine, with a view to its purchase for use on Westerly highways. With interchangeable marking wheels making a four or six-inch stripe a five gallon reservoir at the rear is operated automatically. The machine, which has been successfully operated in Central Falls, R. I., has also been used extensively in western cities and is a one-man affair. A revolving sweeper operates in front of the marking wheel removing loose dirt and debris to give a clear surface for the application of the marking paint. When the sweeper wheel is thrown back the marker can be operated close to curb lines and around corners.

NEW LONDON

Work on the children's ward annex to the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals is fast nearing completion and indications are now that the building will be ready for occupancy within three weeks.

A great part of the painting has been finished and work will start on the laying of heavy linoleum floors next week.

When completed the new annex, in reality will be a distinct unit from the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals and which will be known as the Manwaring Children's hospital and will function under a separate board of trustees, which, however, will be interlocked with the trustees of the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals.

The cost of the new building will amount to about $200,000.

The new building will have 45 beds which will be divided into public, private and semi-private wards. This will bring the total beds with those of the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals up to 230.

As soonas the building is ready for occupancy children in the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals will be moved over into the new building. Most of these are now located on the third floor of the maternity building.

The H. Wales Lines company has been awarded the contract for the construction of a laundry building addition to the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals. The enlargement will be located along the north wall of the old south wing of the hospital and will be 37 by 40 feet in dimension, one story high, of brick and steel construction.

The laundry building will contain equipment for all laundry work in the hospital and nurses' home located nearby in Ocean avenue. With the contract awarded for the laundry the third substantial building project in connection with the hospital will be started this year. The children's annex is now nearing completion, a new boiler house has been enclosed and now work is starting on the laundry addition.

The red brick walls have been virtually completed. The building is being erected for Pappas Brothers of Montville who for years have been in business on the northeast corner of that location. The new structure will have three stores facing the Norwich road and two facing the Palmertown road on the first floor. On the second floor will be located a dance hall and community amusement center.

BEAUTY IN KITCHEN IS AIM OF EXPERTS

Beauty and color in the kitchen are keynotes of a modern home. Gone are the days when kitchens usually were tacked on wherever there was some room not needed for another purpose and fitted in a haphazard way with a few standard essentials. Home designers of today recognize that the kitchen is of great importance and apply their utmost ingenuity in making it as comfortable and attractive as possible.

Women having dreary kitchens built before this domain of woman gained its rightful recognition may have them beautified, just as though they were newly built. The walls of old kitchens may be panelled with wood and a suitable number of wood cabinets, drawers, bins, cupboards and shelves easily may be installed. Features such as these also will greatly reduce the work of preparing food.

With a plentiful amount of wood surface to serve as a base, wonders may be worked with paints, enamels and stains. Any desired color effects may be obtained in any degree of brightness or dullness. Color combinations may be worked out that will harmonize perfectly with colored cooking utensils so much in vogue today. And enameled or stained woodwork is so much easier to keep clean.

Color in the curtains, the light fixtures, the finish of the woodwork and the cooking equipment combine to create beauty distinctively suitable for kitchens. Bright greens, yellows and various other tones not suitable for use in the more formal parts of the house are admirably appropriate for the kitchen. They give it life and charm out of the ordinary.

PROPER CARE NEEDED IN UPKEEP OF HOME

Living rent free by owning one's home is a fine thing but living upkeep free in that same home is an entirely different matter. Of course nothing of a material nature is permanent, but the natural life of any material used in the construction of a home can be prolonged through proper care and treatment.

If in our homes we desire to keep down upkeep it is necessary first to use good materials and to have them assembled according to good construction methods. Few home builders are familiar enough with materials and methods to write their own specifications and to see that the terms of the specifications are carried out. For these reasons alone, although there are others, the services of an architect should be engaged.

Never was there such an opportunity to build into a home permanence and quality as exists now. Research, carried on continuously, has brought the standard of building materials to a level probably beyond the comprehension of our forefathers. It is now possible for a manufacturer to guarantee his product whether it be tile, brick, cement, heating system, plumbing fixture and fitting, or paint. All of which has brought to us better homes at lower prices, if we go about getting them in the right way.

NEW UPHOLSTERY FABRICS SIMPLE

One of the most noticeable things about the new upholstery fabrics is the simplicity of design in most of them. In striking contrast to the glaring figures superimposed upon upholstery fabrics a few seasons ago, are the structural, simple patterns which seem to grow out of the material itself.

The rather simple lines of upholstered furniture demand a good, bold design but not an ugly or crude one. More refinement is seen in the graceful, pleasing lines of the new patterns. It is very refreshing after many seasons of meaningless figures obviously added on to the fabric and in no way a part of it. A closer harmony between fabric and design is being worked out and a greater improvement in upholstery fabrics is the result.

Some of the new colors for 1930 have very intriguing names. A few of them are lemon peel, nymph green, garden green, purple violet, haze pink, Lido green, Chartres blue, peachskin Spanish melon, cloud grey, Normandy blue, fleet blue, Granada tan, tahiti brown, viking brown, tropic red, Riviera beige, woodthrush, melon green, butter yellow, hyacinth, aquatone, Sorrento blue and firebrand.

MAPLE IDEAL FOR INTERIOR FINISH

One of the results of recent interest in New England antiques has been the revival of old maple furniture and the production by furniture manufacturers of splendid reproductions of these beautiful old examples of early New England cabinet making.

Why is it, we are tempted to ask, that more people who have come to love the soft finish of beautifully grained maple do not make greater use of the same wood for interior finish? Some, of course, have made use of it already, but it is surprising that more have not done so. A skilled worker in woods advanced the information that maple makes excellent interior finish, especially when it includes the floor as well as baseboards, molding and possibly wall paneling. The graining is unusual and restful. It wears well and it does not become one-tenth as tiresome as did the old quartered oak which enjoyed such a vogue a decade or two ago.

Maple may be finished in a number of ways, all of which bring out the best in the graining. When used with maple furniture and rugs which harmonize with the finish of the wood it is unusually effective.

If one plans to do this it is wise, however, to place responsibility for the work in the hands of a capable carpenter. Just any carpenter will not do. It calls for a skilled workman and one with an eye for angles and mitering. Otherwise much of the beauty of such woodwork is destroyed by bad angles, gaps and poor wood selection.

ENSEMBLE IDEA IN RUG DESIGN

Among the new rugs shown at the spring markets there was clearly seen an effort to have rugs which would be a definite part of the furniture ensemble of a room.

With this idea in mind rugs were shown which would combine well with furniture of the early American and Colonial types. Others were displayed for use with Old English, Spanish, Tudor and Empire furniture. The idea of combining different pieces of furniture in a harmonious ensemble is growing more and more popular, and the possibility of rugs made to be used with certain kinds or groups of furniture will undoubtedly add to this popularity.

Carpets for the entire floor are gaining in favor. They combine well with the more formal styles of furniture for which there is an increasing demand. Both plain and all-over design carpets are shown. Sheen type rugs and domestic Orientals are enjoying a great popularity. Blues and browns, tans and reds in ground colors are heading the list.

FLOOR DECORATION POPULAR.

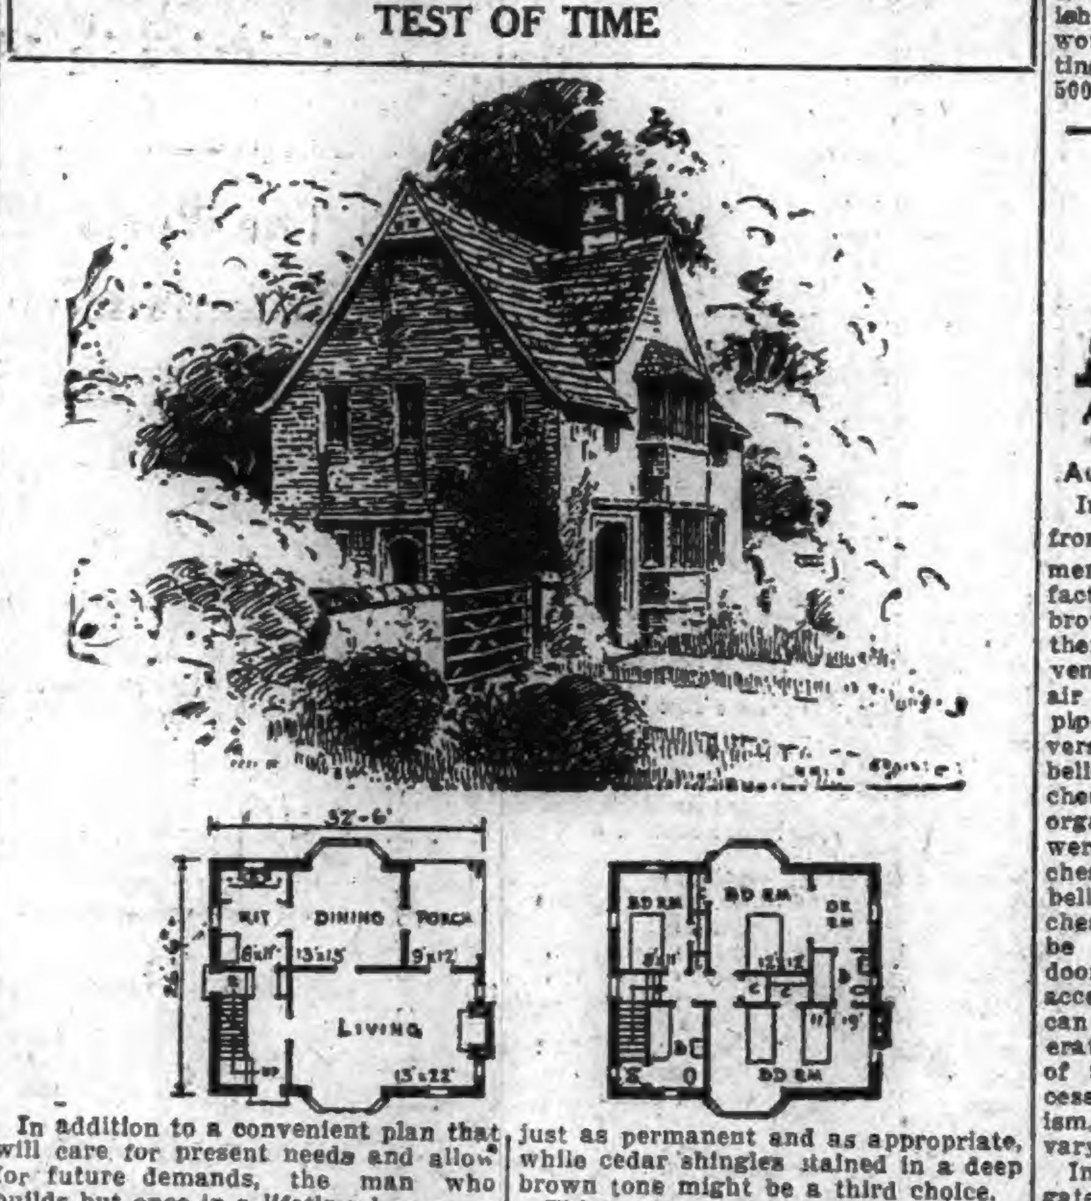
The return of the decorated floor to favor is quite in line with the popular trend in decoration. Our lately somber homes are becoming brilliant with color and design, in which a painted floor may play an important part.

There is nothing more cheerless and lacking in character than a room or house utterly devoid of the sundry little visible evidences of the occupants' personal tastes and individuality.

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING.

Contracts awarded for building projects in New England during the week ended June 24 amounted to $7,584,400, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation. The average of the previous weeks this year was $6,788,600, while the cost of building contracted for during the corresponding week last year was $8,288,100.

THIS TUDOR HOME WILL WITHSTAND THE TEST OF TIME



In addition to a convenient plan that will care for present needs and allow for future demands, the man who builds but once in a lifetime has many other requirements.

Very naturally, he wishes a residence whose exterior has some claim to distinction, yet is conservative enough so that he will not tire of its appearance.

He wishes his house to grow old gracefully and be constructed of materials that will easily stand the test of the years.

The house presented here is one answer to the foregoing. It is built of brick—a material as old as the history of building and probably the most durable known.

In its appearance this structure reflects the dignity and calm of those English countrysides in which stand the Tudor houses that originated its style.

Simply detailed stone trim in the Tudor fashion is used about doors and windows. As shown, the roof would be of slate, although flat tile would be just as permanent and as appropriate, while cedar shingles stained in a deep brown tone might be a third choice.

This residence has been planned for erection on a plot about 50x100 feet. It would occupy a space 36 feet wide by 27 feet deep, exclusive of the space taken by the windows projecting to front and back.

The kitchen has direct access to the entrance hall as well as the dining room, thus saving a busy housewife many steps when she must answer the door while about the daily chores.

A service entrance is provided.

The living room measures 13 feet by 22 feet and has a fireplace at the end opposite the hall door.

Directly behind the living room is the dining room, 11 to 13 feet, and in the outside "L" between dining and living rooms is a porch gained through French doors opening from each.

The second floor contains three bedrooms and two baths.

The cost of this house would range between $10,000 and $12,000.

NEW HOUSE COMPLETED ON OTIS ST.

One of the buildings that has greatly enhanced the attractiveness of Otis street is the one pictured above, recently completed by Frederick S. Armstrong of Washington street. Mr Armstrong has erected a number of houses on the street all of which have greatly added to the appearance of this part of the city. Before Mr. Armstrong started his little development of the Otis street section the lots on which his houses were built were allowed to run to grass and were very unsightly.

The recently completed house is one of two apartments of six rooms and bath each. The apartments are very attractively arranged with a large living room, dining room, kitchen breakfast nook and three bedrooms. All the floors are of oak and the walls are of hard finish plaster and are papered. In the living room there is a large fireplace. The dining room is separated from the living room by French doors. A corner cupboard in the dining room adds to its attractiveness. The kitchen is very pleasant and convenient with built-in ironing boards and cabinets and a nook for electric refrigeration. There is also an attractive breakfast nook just off the kitchen.

The exterior is very attractive in colonial clapboards and brown stained shingles. There is a large double deck veranda on the front of the

CHEAP LINOLEUM IS NOTHING ELSE

The daily experiences of thousands of housewives emphasize the wisdom of paying a trifle more than the average price in purchasing linoleum for the kitchen. Some of the samples seen in the stores look like a million dollars, but begin to show wear within a dismayingly short time. By paying slightly more per yard it is possible to get handsome inlaid linoleum which stands the wear and tear of constant and rough usage for a number of years.

The writer purchased one of the "moderately-priced" varieties a few years ago—much against his wife's advice, let it be added—and has regretted the tendency to economize ever since. The pattern began to wear through within six months and no amount of careful varnishing has served to save the rest of the surface. On the other hand, a neighbor purchased an inlaid linoleum at the same time, at a total cost of perhaps two or three dollars more, and it appears exactly as fresh and new today as when it was put down. The answer appears to be obvious—it pays to buy the best.

SHOULD LOOK TO FUTURE IN SELECTING HARDWARE

Hardware selection should be governed more by what its appearance will be five or ten years from the time of purchase rather than how it will appear in a room furnished in a particular period style. The use of a single style of hardware throughout the home is the part of economy, for when special models are used there is often difficulty in matching the original when replacements are needed.

Another very important matter in the selection of hardware is to ascertain its quality. Even cheap hardware may be so plated that it appears to be the best, but many home owners have learned to their sorrow that this plating soon wears off and the hardware has to be renewed. Specify and insist upon receiving hardware made of solid brass or bronze.

COST OF FURNISHINGS

How much money should the average person spend in furnishing his home? The general opinion seems to be that from one third and one half of the total cost of the home is an adequate amount. If, for instance, one had $15,000 to spend on his home, and put one third, or $5000, into furnishing the $10,000 house the result would be more satisfactory than putting one tenth, or $1500, into a $13,500 house.

OAK OR WALNUT IN ENGLISH DESIGNS

For the house where furniture after the early English designs predominates, chests of drawers, cabinets, and square desks, outlined with mouldings, are appropriate.

Oak is used for the heavier, more massive pieces, finished in a dull, antiqued polish. For the lighter, more refined designs, walnut is the correct wood.

Gate-leg tables, refectory tables and table desks are also in keeping with the early English styles They may be combined with lighter weight pieces.

Upholstered pieces to use with this style are those of massive, heavy lines. Upholstery was not used at the time these styles were originated but upholstered chairs are more comfortable than the wooden ones of those times and the two may be combined if attention is given to line and relative weight.

PAINTING PORCH CALLS FOR CARE

Porch floors and wooden steps have a rather tough time of it. That's why so many shabby porches may be seen on houses which otherwise are neat and in good condition. Many porch floors become warped and split. Portions rot out beneath, as may be found on examination. Most of this is due to carelessness on the part of the home owner.

The average owner wouldn't scrub his hands with gritty sand or road dirt, and he takes particular care to dry his hands thoroughly after washing them. And yet, is the same care taken with a porch floor Both of these conditions are responsible for the effects of a blistering summer sun and the winter cold on a porch floor.

When new porch floors are laid the edges of the boards should be thoroughly primed. It prevents rotting on the under side and at the same time it provides good ventilation, provided a minute opening is left. The priming coat should be watched carefully, for paint must penetrate well to prevent peeling later on. The best thing to do is to buy paint prepared especially for use on porch floors.

FIGURING COST OF PAINTING A HOUSE

In figuring the number of square feet a gallon of white lead paint will cover, a great deal depends upon the surface to be painted; that is, the kind of wood, whether it is very dry or not, and whether the surface is rough or smooth. Some woods are more porous than others and consequently absorb more paint. Much depends, too, upon the way the paint is brushed out, some painters brush out paint more than others and thereby cover more surface.

The priming coat mixed according to the formula followed by the average painter will cover, as a general thing, about 575 square feet of surface to the gallon in a single coat. Second and third coats on new work and first and second coats on old work should cover on the average, about 600 feet to the gallon for each coat. These are interesting facts to consider in estimating the cost of a paint job. Invariably it will be found that reputable painters compute their figures on this same general basis.

WALL PAPER FOR CHILDREN'S ROOM

Wall paper and drapery fabrics are easily found to carry out any scheme of furnishings in the youngster's room.

All sorts of amusing patterns are to be found in wall coverings illustrations from the nursery rhymes, pictures of the animals beloved by every child, as well as drawings from the fairy tales.

TIP ON WINDOWS

Either doubled studs or four-inch posts should be used at the side of all windows and door openings. The upper header carrying the load above the opening should rest on the inside studs or, if posts are used, be notched well into them.

BRICK COMBINES WELL

Common brick meets all architectural demands for surface effects and type. It may be used in the best homes in combination with slate or tile roofs, copper and zinc gutters and down spouts, metal casements and sash, exposed oak timbers and plate glass!

MAKE REPLACEMENTS FIRST

It is often found that after the home has been newly decorated the home fixtures have been outmoded particularly the plumbing fixtures Replacements of this type should be made before redecorating to save the cost of breaking through a newly painted or papered wall.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Austin Organ Company, Hartford.

In 188 John T. Austin emigrated from England and obtained employment in the Farrand and Votey organ factory of Detroit, and in 1903 his brother, B. G. Austin, joined him there. In 1894 John T. Austin invented and patented the Universal air chest system, a radical change in pipe organ construction. The Universal air chest replaced the separate bellows, air conductors and smaller chests, used in other systems of organ construction, as all the pipes were placed on one large air tight chest, one side of which acted as a bellows or reservoir. This large chest, similar to a small room, can be entered by means of air-tight doors, so that all the mechanism is accessible from the pressure side and can be seen and adjusted under operative conditions. The advantages of this invention are immediate accessibility to all the organ mechanism, without taking apart and an unvarying supply of wind to every pipe.

In 1917 this invention was investigated by the Franklin Institute of Science and Art and they awarded John T. Austin the Edward Longstreth medal of merit.

During the earlier years a few organs were built by the Austin brothers in Detroit, and the first large organ built for the east was installed in the old Fourth Congregational church on Main street, Hartford. While this organ was being installed the Detroit plant was destroyed by fire, but this organ created so much local interest that the Austin Organ company was organized and started business in Hartford in 1899.

It is interesting to note that the chairman of the Fourth church music committee, the late J. B. Pierce, was one of the original stockholders and was the first president of the Austin Organ company. Other original stockholders included such musically inclined men as John Spencer Camp and Professor Waldo Pratt, both of whom are still associated with the company as directors.

The company has built many notable organs including such instruments as the Mormon tabernacle organ of Salt Lake City; San Francisco fair organ; the sesqui-centennial organ; and one of their latest is the instrument in the Horace Memorial hall in Hartford. They also build reproducing player organs, one of which to be installed in the new Aetna Life Insurance company building.

The present officers are: John T. Austin, president; B. G. Austin, vice president; John Spencer Camp, treasurer; Waldo S. Pratt, secretary.

A carriage company at Leominster, Mass., has adopted a novel method of keeping its stockroom employes on the move without unduly tiring them. The company has bought roller skates for the workman and has retained a roller skating instructor to teach them how to skate. The men have to push hand trucks down a platform 150 feet long. With the skates it has proved a faster method to push the trucks, riding with the momentum to their destination, and then glide back to the stockroom.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES

If I Knew

If I knew that a word of mine,
  A word not kind and true,
Might leave its trace on a loved one's face,
  I'd never speak harshly, would you?

If I knew that the light of a smile
  Might linger the whole day through,
And brighten some heart with a heavier part,
  I wouldn't withold it, would you?

The Lion-House

Always the heavy air,
  The dreadful cage, the low
Murmur of voices, where
  Some Force goes to and fro
In an immense despair!

As through a haunted brain—
  With tireless footfalls
The obsession moves again,
  Trying the floor, the walls,
  Forever, but in vain.

In vain, proud Force! A might,
  Shrewder than yours, did spin
Around your rage that bright
  Prison of steel, wherein
You pace for my delight.

And O, my heart, what Doom
  What warier Will has wrought
The cage, within whose room
  Paces your burning thought,
For the delight of Whom?

—John Hall Wheelock

An Italian Donkey

No larger than a sheep dog,
  On little, fawnlike feet,
He pulls a painted wine-car
  Along the cobbled street.

With fringed ears gravely flapping
  And light unhurried tread,
He minds me of brave Bottom
  With roses on his head.

And when I hear the wine-cart
  I run to watch him pass,
As though I were Titania,
  Enamoured of an ass.

—Agnes Kendrick Gray

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

One of the most popular of our winter birds is the chickadee. During the spring and summer the chickadee withdraws from the public view into the damp woods and woodland swamps where the insects are most plentiful. Here early in the spring he gives up his friendly habit of flocking and takes up his family cares. A cozy nest of hair, fur, and bits of bark is used to line the excavation in a tree which he may be lucky enough to find or else laboriously construct. During the months when the young ones are growing one must be sharp indeed to see Mr. Chickadee or his wife quietly and busily getting insects.

During the fall, however, one may find flocks of these birds scattered through the woods, calling cheerily back and forth.

But it is in the winter that one becomes most acquainted with this gay little fellow. Induced by the abundance of food in the now nearly forsaken orchards, he can be found by the dozens, dangling like acrobats under an outstretched twig, standing on the cone of some tall pine tree, or swinging head downward from some high trapeze. He is constantly hunting for food or calling to the others of the flock. How delightfully he and his busy friends break the muffled midwinter silence with their cheerful calls. With a thick coat of fat under his soft gray feathers, the winter has no terrors for him.

Chickadees are wonderfully inquisitive and tame, perhaps the tamest birds we have. Patient people who know how to whistle up these little spirits can induce the chickadees to light upon their hands.

To some winter is a dreary, dismal season, but to me it would be far drearier, far more dismal if it were not for the happy-go-lucky chickadee.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Mischievous Pet Goat

Dear Uncle Jed: May I tell the Wide Awakes about our pet goat? He is really just a kid for he is four months old, but oh! what a kid!

He gets in mother's garden and eats off the cabbage plants and beet tops and walks on everything in the garden.

One evening he got on top of one of mother's chicken coops. Mother pushed him off but he jumped right back on it and shook his head at her as if to say, "No, I won't stay off."

He climbs on our little wagon and stands on his hind feet, then jumps off. Sometimes he and our dog run races.

When he was small we fed him with a bottle and nipple. Once he pulled the nipple off and swallowed it.

Our neighbors said goats would eat tin cans. He doesn't, but he eats rags, paper and most anything but tin cans.

Mother says he is an awful pest, but he is lots of fun for me and my little brothers and sisters. We are going to drive him when he gets big enough.

Beautiful June Day

Dear Uncle Jed: Who was it that said: "What is so rare as a day in June"?

I think that that poet had in mind just such a perfect June day as was Sunday.

We had rain all week and it certainly was a revelation when such a clear, beautiful day came along. The sky was the brightest blue with billowy clouds floating across it. The grass and shrubbery were fresh green. It was not too hot and not too cold, but just, well, just right!

About half past seven the sun began to set.

It was a fitting end to a lovely day. The rosy setting sun reflected its colors on the clouds, tinting them in colors not to be imitated by mere humans. Purple faded into lavendar, lavender into pink-blue, then darker pink, rose, and finally fiery red, where the sun was sinking below the horizon.

Above the horizon, southwest of here, the clouds seemed to be mountains rising above a blue sea of sky, in which could be seen the reflection of the hills.

No mortal could paint that sky and sunset, such gorgeous, yet soft colors could never be made by man. Neither be seen to be appreciated.

At the Beach

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing you another story in hopes that you will think it nice. It is about a few days at the beach.

I arrived there Thursday night at 10 o'clock and went to bed without seeing what the place was like, but I arose early the next day to begin the day by helping to get breakfast.

After breakfast we made the beds, cleaned the rooms and porch, and sat down to rest until it was time to get dinner.

After the dinner dishes were washed we changed to our bathing suits, took the beach umbrella and went out on the beach for the afternoon. We had lots of fun playing in the water and catching crabs. The waves were so big that when you sat down they would wash over you and you would come up laughing and shouting.

When we went home, we took a shower, changed our clothes and ate our supper. It was then eight o'clock, time for the little children to go to bed.

Then Clair and I went out on the beach to watch the waves come lapping up on the beach at night.

Sunday more company came and we all went bathing together.

Sunday night I came home and now I hope that if you should go to the beach you will have as good a time as I had.

Likes Page

Dear Uncle Jed: This time I am going to write and tell you how I enjoy the Wide Awake circle letters. I have followed them up ever since I was five years old, as my brothers wrote stories and won prize books; they also enjoyed the Wide Awake letters. I always read the whole page and find it very interesting. I wrote my first letter to you and the Wide Awakes when I was seven years old and won my first prize book. To me this page is the most interesting page in the Bulletin. I hope it will always continue.

Her First Letter

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awake circle, so I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy it.

The title is, "Going Swimming." Last week my friend and I decided to go swimming, so we put our bathing suits on and started.

When we reached the place, we hesitated about getting wet all over, but finally we got used to it. We stayed in until my friend had to go home for her supper.

We reached home tired and happy.

Health Rules

Dear Uncle Jed: Health is the most important thing in our life. If we would be healthy we should remember a few so-called "Good Health Rules."

Drink plenty of water. Do not drink too much in the summer, especially when tired, exhausted or hot.

Do not eat between meals.

Take plenty of exercise.

Do not eat too much pastry; eat enough solid food so you will not need much pastry.

Take a long walk occasionally.

Children should have over ten hours sleep.

Sleep in a well ventilated room at all times. If it storms, put in a ventilator.

See the doctor once a year.

See the dentist twice a year.

If we follow these rules we will be assured of good health.

My Kitten

Dear Uncle Jed: A strange kitten came to our house. She was so cute that I kept her and named her Tippy. She is a great hunter; she killed three or four snakes this summer. She passes most of her time near the brook. I am proud of her good work. I feed her very good to reward her for her kindness. Hope you will like my first story. Truly yours,

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Plenty!

By Thorton W. Burgess

Who never knows parental cares
In life's great problems never shares.
—Old Mother Nature.

"The first time I asked you how many children we had, do you remember what you said?" asked Jerry Muskrat of Mrs. Muskrat.

"No," replied she. "What did I say?"

"Plenty," replied Jerry, and grinned. "You certainly told the truth. We did have plenty and we've still got plenty. But how long we'll have them is another question. There goes a youngster crawling right up on that bank. What chance would he have if Redtail the Hawk should come along? Or Reddy Fox should be lying low up there?"

Mrs. Muskrat didn't stop to make reply. She hurried after the wandering youngster and sent him back in a hurry. In fact, she sent him rolling down the bank so that he splashed into the water. He was whimpering, but she paid no attention to him. You see, another one was boldly swimming out into the middle of the Smiling Pool. Mrs. Muskrat hurried after this one and sent him back in a hurry.

"You might at least help to try to keep these children out of danger," she said crossly to Jerry.

Jerry said nothing, but started after another of the youngsters, who was too boldly exploring the shore. By the time he had sent this one back, another demanded his atention. "Plenty was right!" muttered Jerry under his breath. "Plenty certainly was right! I don't know how we're ever going to keep all these little scamps out of danger. The first thing they need to learn is the danger signal. I must take it up with Mrs. Muskrat. I certainly must take it up right away."

"No," replied she. "What did I say?"

So Jerry swam over to where Mrs. Muskrat was. Just as soon as he got a chance he said: "My dear, it seems to me very important that these scamps of ours should learn the danger signal right away and what to do when they hear it. We can't go running after them every time they stray away, because while we are chasing one, another goes. But we can teach them the hit-and-dive signal."

"I presume you mean tail-slapping," said Mrs. Muskrat. "I was thinking about that myself. You know, we sometimes know things for so long that we forget that other people don't know them. Now, I can't remember when I didn't know enough to dive the instant I heard a tail slap the water. Of course, these little folks of ours are not such good divers as yet, but they are learning. They are learning every day. The first thing we know, they'll be grown up and leave us. I'll round them up now and we'll teach them what tail-slapping means."

After some trouble Mrs. Muskrat got the nine children around her. "Now," said she, "it is time you children learned one of the most important lessons in all the Great World."

"What is that?" squeaked one of the little Muskrats.

"Obedience to the danger signal," replied Mother Muskrat. "We Muskrats have one signal that we all know and all heed. It is used when one of us discovers possible danger. It is a slap of a tail on the water. Now, your father is going to swim across the Smiling Pool. When you hear it, you do just what I do."

So Jerry swam across the Smiling Pool. When he got across he suddenly dived: and as he did so, he hit the water a smart blow with his tail. It made a sharp sound. Instantly, Mother Muskrat dived; and as she went under, she hit the water with her tail. The nine little Muskrats looked at one another uncertainly. Then Mother Muskrat reappeared. "That was the danger signal," said she, "and I showed you what to do. Now, we'll all try it."

MINORITY REPORT ATTACKS LONDON NAVAL TREATY

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—The London naval treaty was described as "unfair and unjust to the United States" in a minority report of the senate foreign relations committee signed by three members and made public today.

The minority, all republicans—Senator Johnson of California; Moses, of New Hampshire, and Robinson, of Indiana submitted a lengthy statement of its views contending particularly that the treaty fails to provide parity between the American and British fleets and fails to bring about a saving to tax payers.

Senator Moses added a memorandum complaining against the "indecent haste" with which the treaty was being pressed. He is leading a movement to defer consideration of the pact by the senate until next November but President Hoover is standing firm for prompt dispposition of the agreement.

It appeared likely today that the treaty, which was approved by the foreign relations committee by a vote of 16 to 4, would be called up in special session before the end of the week. Mr. Hoover has asserted he will call the special session the day after congress adjourns. Whether he will call it back on July 4, however, should the adjournment be Thursday, is problematical.

The minority report of the foreign relations committee also took into account the objection voiced by Senator Shipstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota, to the refusal of the administration to turn over all the documents relating to the London conference. The attempts of Senator Johnson to get these papers were reviewed at length.

"The minority of the foreign relations committee," read the Johnson-Moses-Robinson report, "disclaim either militarism or jingoism, and insist that its few members have ever been and still are advocates of fair naval limitation and honest naval reduction."

WASPS RAISED TO FIGHT DESTRUCTIVE PEACH MOH

WASHINGTON —(AP)— A horde of tiny wasps is being raised by the department of agriculture to wage war on the oriental peach moth, enemy of American orchards.

This fly-like wasp, which for years has subsisted on another American insect pest, the strawberry leaf roller, has been found to be the parasitic foe of the peach moth.

The wasps, however, are not abundant, says Dr. A. L. Quaintance of the department, because they have been kept down by the limited food supply afforded by the strawberry leaf roller.

At the Riverton, N.J., experimental station of the department, effort is being made to raise hundreds of thousands of the insects to be turned loose in peach orchards all oover the country.

MANY LEADING SHARES GAINED 3 TO 6 POINTS IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, June 30—(AP)—The stock market ended the first half of the year today on a rally supplied by short covering. Trading was the dullest since early in the month. Nevertheless, it was the first time in many days that the market had progressed steadily upward from gong to gong, uninterrupted by a selling flurry.

Most of the buying, which lifted numbers of leading shares 3 to 6 points net, appeared to come from the smaller and more timid members of the bear group, for the 1,843,000 share turnover hardly indicated a particularly vigorous covering movement.

The theory that the market had become oversold on the basis of business indices so far available seemed to be growing, although few were willing to venture the opinion that further efforts to mark stocks down would be abandoned. Much depends, apparently on the character of the news from commerce and industry in the next few weeks.

Call money firmed. Renewing at 2 per cent, the rate was raised first to 2 1-2 and then to 3 as banks and corporations withdrew funds in preparation for the month-end requirements for interest and dividends, as well as for payrolls and other expenditures. Loan calling today was estimated at close to $150,000,000.

Many of today's prices were especially interesting in comparison with those of last week, when stocks were making new lows. Eastman Kodak had rallied 24 from the bottom, J. I. Case, 22, Atchison, 12, American Telephone, 10, and U. S. Steel 8. The last named touched 160, after a long absence from that figure and showed a net advance of more than three points.

Stocks up 3 to 4 points, included American Telephone, Electric Power and Light, North American, National Biscuit, American Tobacco "B," General Electric and Public Service of New Jersey. Westinghouse rallied six, Consolidated Gas, five, Eastman Kodak, nearly 9, Atchison 8 and Chase 10. New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway, Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Radio, Radio Keith Orpheum and Standard Oil of New Jersey, among many others gained one to two. There were signs of pool operations in some of the lower priced shares, especially in the late trading when Kahn Department Stores rose more than 3 and Brockway Motor, almost 7 points.

Grains moved against the trend of stocks. Wheat closed 1 1-2 to 1 3-4 cents lower in sympathy with the weak Liverpool market, large receipts and reports of rains in the northwest. Corn lost about a cent, reflecting bearish private crop estimates. Cotton closed slightly lower.

News was meagre. A compilation of May earnings of 73 railroads showed a decline of 32.5 per cent in net operating income as compared with a year ago, but slightly better than the April figures. The May increase in net over April, was nearly $4,000,000, while gross rose $9,000,000.

Foreign exchanges eased, pointing to a flow of funds in this direction, perhaps for employment here. Sterling eased as much as a quarter of a cent, ruled at $4.86 for cables, off 1-3.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—Treasury receipts for June 27 were $12,024,388.52; expenditures $14,310,243.61; balance $342,056,835.11.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, June 30—(AP)—Curb shares displayed a firm tone in dull trading today. The more active issues rallied 1 to 4 points, while several lightly traded shares mounted 5 to 10.

Electric Bond and Share was the most active issue on the list, surging up 4 points to 79 3-4. United Gas new, a member of the bond and share group, rose more than a point in active trading, and Electric Power and Light warrants gained more than 5. American Gas and Electric mounted 4 points. The Standard Gas issues mounted 8 points in a few sales.

Several of the investment trust issues firmed up, evidently reflecting the feeling in some quarters that the market has touched bottom. Prince and Whitely issues were firm, apparently in belated response to its favorable earnings statement. This is one of the few trusts to show an appreciation in assets since last September. The preferred mounted 4 points, and the common fractionally. Goldman Sachs rallied 2 points in active trading.

Industrials were dull. Deere and Tecnicolor each rallied more than 4 points, Kokker, Mead Johnson, Manning Bowman, A. O. Smith, Aero Supply, American Tobacco new, and Swift International gained 1 to 4 points. Aluminum, Ltd., mounted 10 in a few sales. In the oils, Gulf, Humble and Vacuum mounted a point or two. Cities Service sold up fractionally in light trading for this normally heavily traded issue.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, June 30—(AP)—The listed bond market showed greater stability in a dull trading session today. The sustained rally in stocks gave a firm tone to convertible and warrant issues, and the influence of easy credit asserted itself on a wide list of corporation and foreign bonds. Prime domestic issues, were sluggish. The trend was irregularly higher with legal issues the dullest spot in the domestic list. Firming of call money, which advanced to 3 per cent, was believed to have retarded sales, which were the smallest in more than a week. Tightening of rates was incident to withdrawal of funds for interest dividend an maturity payments part of which is expected to flow into bonds. Atchison 4 1-2s and St. Paul adjustment 5s, made the best recovery among railroads, rising a point or more, International Telephone 4 1-2 advanced 1 1-2 points, and Philadelphia Reading Coal and Iron 6s, closed more than 2 points higher than Saturday.

The demand for most rails was nominal and price movement hesitant. Baltimore and Ohio 5s, Canadian Pacific 4 1-2s, Chicago and Great Western, 4s; Chicago and Northwestern 4 1-2s, Denver Rio Grande and Western 5s, Erie 5s, Missouri, Kansas and Texas 5s and Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, gained about 1-2 point each. International Great Northern 5 B's soarer 3 points.

A better inquiry developed for some utility and industrials but was partially offset by the downward trend of others in these groups. The averages showed utilities made the only gain of the day. Pennsylvania Bell Telephone 5s, Columbia Gas and Electric 5s, Public Service Electric and Gas 4 1-2s, appreciated moderately. Denver Gas and Electric Stamped 5s lost 5 points.

The majority of the active foreign bonds turned upward as trading in the group broadened.

United States government bonds and treasury certificates, were active and firm. Liberty 4th, 4 1-2s, were heavily accumulated with a slight advance.

New offerings for tomorrow include Midland Natural Gas company $2,500,000 six per cent gold debentures, and Central Illinois Public Service company, $3,100,000 five per cent first mortgage bonds.

QUALITY CORN TO RESIST BORER STILL IS SOUGHT

MONROE, Mich.—(AP)—Twenty-four hundred plots of corn at the Michigan State college experiment station represent man's efforts this year to find a type of corn of high yield and quality that will resist attacks of the European corn borer.

Farm crops specialists in four years of experiment have conquered their main objective. In Maize Amargo, a South American strain, they have found a type of corn that will resist the borer. The pest never has attacked the strain since the experiment started.

The second objective—to find a resistant strain of high yield and quality—may take several years more in tests and trails.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater.

To be called "a big lummox" is not considered a very complimentary appellation in most parts of the United States, but in Hollywood any one of a score of famous actresses, including some of the greatest stars, would have been happy to be officially greeted as "Lummox."

For Herbert Brenon, United Artists producer-director, made an all-talking screen version of Fannie Hurst's celebrated novel, "Lummox," which opens a three day engagement at the Broadway tomorrow, and hundreds aspired to play the title role. Not since Brenon directed "Peter Pan" and "Sorrell and Son" had there been such feverish competition for a screen role. Seemingly every actress in Hollywood and New York wanted to play the part, but Brenon had his own ideas of Miss Hurst's most famous fiction character, and he gave the prize characterization to Winifred Westover, who had been off the screen for eight years.

Miss Hurst went to Hollywood at the request of Joseph M. Schenck, president and chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, and wrote the dialogue for "Lummox."

Breed Theater

The time-honored lover triangle has been displaced by a novel four-sided domestic tangle in "Paris Bound," a sophisticated Pathe dialogue drama of marriage which will hold the featured place at the Breed theater today and Wednesday.

Ann Harding and Frederic March, both noted Broadway players, are seen as the young married couple upon whose adventures the story is based.

George K. Arthur and Karl Dane again are teamed in the laugh riot, "China Bound," which is the added feature on the program today and Wednesday. This is the fifth comedy in which the funmakers have been co-starred. Polly Moran, famous comedienne, adds to the fun and Josephine Dunn is the leading lady. Charles F. (Chuck) Reisner, famous comedy director who directed Dane and Arthur in "Brotherly Love," again is at the megaphone.

Palace Theatre.

Romance on the Mexican border; love and intrigue in the heart of the underworld. Both of these thrills are to be found in the great double-feature bill starting at the Palace theatre tomorrow and lasting through the next three days. One of the new pictures is that famous outdoor melodrama, "On the Border," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, Armida and others. The second feature on the bill is the new smash hit, "Sweet Mama," with Alice White and that blazing new male star, David Manners.

ALICE WHITE MAT HERE

Crammed with emotion, and etched as sharply as the crack of a gunman's pistol, "Sweet Mama" is an appealing film. It starts in the dilapidated railway station of a small town. A little group of burlesque queens huddle around the stove for warmth. Their show has flopped; the manager has no money, but everyone is desperately hungry. Among the group is Goldie, a girl who has had lots of trouble in her day, and who soon finds she is destined to have a lot more.

"On the Border" is a picture that carries us from the hum and fervor of the city out to the windswept plateaus of the Mexican border. In this film we meet the lovely Armida, cast as Pepita, the daughter of a rancher. In swift succession a gang of smugglers, a horde of blinking Chinese, border patrolmen and a great-hearted dog pass before our eyes as the story unfolds. One by one the dark red threads of love and death are woven. There is treachery, passion, lust, power and romance in this picture. No one will want to miss it.

Today for the last times, the Palace presents that magnificent drama of intrigue and mystery on a southern island, "The Sea Bat." Those who have not yet seen this film, should not miss their last opportunity.

Broadway Theater.

Paralleling the rapid rise of Buddy Rogers to screen stardom is the quick ascent of Jack Oakie, whose first portrayal as a stellar luminary is that of Marco "Soldier" Perkins in "The Social Lion" which closes an engagement at the Broadway today.

Buddy's earliest general recognition as a favorite came with "Wings." He gradually built up his following in "Get Your Man," "Abie's Irish Rose," "More Work, Less Pay" and "My Best Girl." By that time the public demand naturally brought him stardom.

Jack Oakie started as a featured player in Clara Bow's "The Fleet's In." That was in July, 1928. Then he appeared in "Someone to Love." Came the talkies and Jack was assigned to "The Dummy," "Chinatown Nights," "Close Harmony," "Fast Company" and "Sweetie." He was loaned to RKO for "Street Girl" and "Hit the Deck." After that his general popularity brought him a much-deserved elevation to the position of a star in the ranks of Paramount actors.

"The Social Lion" is based on Octavus Roy Cohen's story, "Marco Himself." It has to do with the fortunes of a young garage mechanic who plays polo so well that he gains a place on the polo team of a wealthy country club in his town. But he makes the mistake of thinking that he can become number 301 in "the 400" and that's where all the riotous fun begins.

POETRY

MY ESTATE

I have four loves, four loves are mine,
My wife who makes all beauty be,
Tom Squire and Master Candleshine,
And then my gray dog Timothy.

My wife makes bramble-berry pies,
And she is bright as bramble dew,
She knows the way the weather flies,
And tells me everything to do.

Tom Squire he is my neighbor man,
His apples fall upon my grass,
And in the morning, when we can,
We say good-morning as we pass.

And Master Candleshine the true,
Considering some fault of mine,
Says—"Had it been for me to do,
It had been hard for Candleshine."

When I have thought all things that be,
And drop the latch and climb the stair,
And want an eye for company,
My gray dog Timothy is there.

My loves are one and two and three
And four they are, good loves of mine,
Tom Squire, my gray dog Timothy,
My wife and Master Candleshine.
—John Drinkwater.

DUSK ON RICE FIELDS

The bayou is a yellow mirror laid
Upon the quiet rice fields, and its edges
Are beveled with blue shadows that are made
Where stubbled willows fall in quivering ledges.
Only a thrush's winging wakes the hour
That burns in dying embers down the sky,
And now a cabin's candle bursts in flower
And shimmers like a star. No melody
Drifts on the night, no lonely dusk wind calls.
Along the bayou as the last gold yields
To darkness, and cathedraled silence falls
In purple victory across the fields.
—Daniel Whitehead Hickey, in New York Sun.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Good heavens! What have the Malarians done now? —Exchange

"What a surprise! It must be nearly two years since you last called on me."

"But, my dear, consider the weather we've been having."—London Opinion.

Hubby—"Yes, I do. That's why I'm going out."

"What is absolutely certain is that, just like intelligence, stupidity is hereditary, and—"

"That's a nice way to speak of your parents."—The Pointer.

Instructor—Supose you were at 10,000 feet and your plane burst suddenly into flames. What would you do?

Cadet—Try to keep cool, sir.—Army and Navy Journal.

He—Darling, didn't you notice that the sauce at the hotel last night tasted of furniture polish?

She—Yes, dear. But it went well with the cabinet pudding.—Cambridgeshire Chronicle.

"Fine, fine!" exclaimed the sales manager enthusiastically.

"Yes. One to get out and the other to stay out."—Montreal Star.

A lady motorist whose car had swerved across a street and crashed through a plate-glass window was being questioned by the police sergeant.

"Surely on a street as wide as this," he said in amazement, "you could have done something to prevent this accident?"

"Oh, I did," the lady assured him tragically. "I screamed as loud as I could."—Montreal Star.

WHISTLE SOUNDS REQUIM FOR FAMOUS RIVER LINE

MEMPHIS—(AP)—Deep tones from an old chime whistle echo across Memphis harbor, sounding a requiem for one of the most picturesque fleets that ever churned Mississippi waters.

The whistle is that of the old James Lee, and roustabouts drop their work and look for a phantom craft when when it sounds. It now graces the tug H. H. Colle, having been given the owner by Capt. G. Peters Lee, last of the Lees on the Mississippi.

Always used by the pride of the Lee line, the whistle is all that is left of the famous packet fleet that once numbered 14 boats. The Chime signal was on the first James Lee, the second James Lee and the Harry Lee, all widely known on the river.

LAUREL HILL DRIVER DEAF TO SIREN'S WARNING

Ralph E. Potter, 168 Laurel Hill avenue, Norwich, was arrested today by Automobile Patrol Officers Clarence Martin and George Cockell charged with failure to grant right of way, the specific charge being the interference of the driver with a police auto that was responding to a hurry call. Potter will be in the police court tomorrow.

A telephone call was received at police headquarters about 8 o'clock stating that a fight was in progress on Hamilton street and Martin and Cockell were speeding through Bank street when the auto approached the car driven by Potter which was proceeding in the same direction as the police car, the siren was sounded several times. Potter instead of pulling to the curb and allowing the police car to pass, persisted in blocking it and even when he peered to the rear so that he could observe that the auto signalling was a police car.

The fight was between two of the bummer type, one of the men being George Hapeny, who resides at a cheap John street lodging house when he is not serving time in the county jail and it is but a few days ago that he concluded a jail sentence. Hapeny and his adversary were arrested and they will be in court tomorrow.

Three soldiers, stationed at one of the island forts were arrested tonight by Patrolmen Braxton Hill and George Goldberg charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. They were locked up and will be in court tomorrow. The soldiers were at the Neptune hotel, patronized principally by soldiers and fishermen and when they became boisterous and one of their number hurled a bottle to the street, the trio were arrested.

MINER RENOMINATED FOR ZONING BOARD MEMBER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, June 30—A special meeting of the city council this evening at 7:30 continued for half an hour, during which time it was voted to lay 2064 feet of sidewalk on the west side of Mohegan avenue and to lay curbing and transfer walls where necessary. The council voted to buy hard tires from the Thompson Motor company for trucks. Sidney H. Miner was renominated for membership on the zoning board. The date for the payment of assesments for laying a sewer on Ocean avenue, north of Gardner avenue, was changed from the 21st day of August to the 21st day of November. A new fireworks ordinance to become effective on its passage and which prohibits the sale of pyrotechnics had its first reading in the process of its passage.

SCHOOLEY GIVEN FINE OF $100 AND COSTS MONDAY

Harry A. Schooley, sailor, was in the Waterford town court this afternoon charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 and costs.

Schooley was driving on Logger Hill road, Waterford, Saturday night and was accompanied by Mrs. Louis Moore, 1 Mitchell court and Miss Flora Green, 30 Howard street. Schooley, who had been drinking freely was driving toward New London and when on the Hill, he pulled from behind a Chrysler auto driven by Harvey Holden, of Elmwood. In attempting to pass the Chrysler, Schooley's auto sideswiped it, with the result that the Chrysler was ditched and overturned and after Schooley's auto had continued but a short distance, the driver lost control of the steering wheel. The car was also ditched and overturned. Schooley escaped injury and retreated, securing the services of a taxicab and went to the home of the Moore woman. The state police were informed of the crash and Officers William E. MacKenzie and Eric Swanson conducted an investigation. The officers made a search for Schooley and finding him at the Mitchell court house arrested him. Mrs. Moore and Miss Green were taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital, the former suffering from head injuries and both having bruises. They remained at the hospital over night and Sunday insisted upon going home. They did so, but upon their own responsibility.

LOVE NESTS WITHOUT FORMALITY OF WEDLOCK

J. F. Schuster, United States Coast Guard academy and Laura Curtiss, 34, a waitress who claims both New York and Madison, Conn., as her home, were arrested at 1 o'clock this morning at a rooming house on Colt street. The couple rented the room a week ago and presented themselves as man and wife. Late last night information was obtained by Patrolman Louis Wheeler that Schuster and the woman, had not married and going to the house he arrested them. In court Schuster was fined $50 and costs and the same penalty was meted out to the woman, but execution of judgment was suspended.

Another couple of the opinion that they could live as man and wife was William A. Cooke, U. S. S. Lansdale, stationed at the submarine base and Mrs. Helen Morrison, 32, wife of Donald Morrison, member of the crew of the submarine O-3, also at the base.

Fabbri Fined Again.

Enrico Fabbri, 19 Smith street, charged with violation of the liquor law, the specific charges being keeping with intent to sell and possession, pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs. Fabbri has been arrested several times on the same charge and so has his wife.

Smith's Case Goes Over.

Thomas Smith, 25 Shapley street, and seldom employed, was charged with theft, being accused of taking $85 from Mrs. George Chapman, 11 Colman street. The case was continued to tomorrow. Smith was in a Main street store at the same time as was Mrs. Chapman Saturday evening and when he observed the woman deposit her purse on the counter while she inspected stock, Smith took the wallet and disappeared.

Lawrence E. Olsen, 110 Willetts avenue, charged with failing to stop at an automatic danger signal, corner of Bank and Shaw streets, Saturday evening, having been arrested by Patrolman Henry Sylvia, failed to appear so his bond of $15 was declared forfeited.

Albert Peek, 251 Huntington street, was charged with reckless driving and failing to stop at an automatic traffic signal, corner of Broad street and Connecticut avenue. His case was continued to July 7th.

C. A. Hamilton, 57 Franklin street, charged with reckless driving on Ocean avenue was given suspension of judgment.

Two cases of intoxication were tried. Both men were fined $5 and costs. A Lyme man was also charged with intoxication, having been arrested on Colman street Saturday night, but he did not present himself in court today and his bond of $25 was forfeited.

William P. Hoffman, New York, Irving W. Gadbois, 115 Truman street, Frank H. Adams, Groton Long Point and Frank Camerada, 34 Elizabeth street, Norwich, were charged with infractions of the city's traffic laws. None of the drivers showed up so their respective bonds of $8 were forfeited.

O'NEILL'S STOLEN $160 WAS FOUND BY A BOY

A wad of $160 which Michael O'Neill of Ashcraft road, a former member of the New London police department lost early in June through a pickpocket was found by a youth who did not make known his find. The boy was arrested by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and was given into the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield. O'Neill and Sergeant William Casey, the latter of the Norwich police department, went to Waterford on the night of June 8th and witnessed the performance of the 101 Ranch. When leaving the circus grounds O'Neill and Casey were wedged in a crowd and O'Neill felt a thrust at his trousers pocket. Feeling for his money and finding it gone O'Neill made known his loss to Casey. Two young men, nearest Casey and O'Neill were seized and searched, but the money was not found. No doubt one of the seized men was the pickpocket and dropped the money, which comprised seven $20 bills, each and two $10 bills. The boy found the money and taking it home, gave it to his parents.

STATE HOSPITAL SUPERINTENDENT IS SPEAKER FOR CONTACT CLUB

The Contact club held its regular weekly meeting with luncheon on Monday, this time meeting at the Norwich inn, which was the last meeting for the season until the first of September.

In the absence of President E. O. Rodier, the meeting was presided over by Vice President Abner Schwartz, with Fred Geer at the piano, and the speaker was Dr. E. S. Burdsall, superintendent of Norwich state hospital, who gave an instructive address upon "Methods of Treatment at the State Hospital to Relieve Mental Suffering." There are about 2,400 patients at the state hospital.

An increase in the admission rate of correctional institutions has been noticed in the last ten years. It has been figured by some to approximate 250 to 300 per cent, whether this is correct or not I am not sure. Seven years ago the statistician of department of commerce issued a statement in the Journal of the American Medical association concerning the number of individuals confined in federal, state, city and county institutions for defectives, dependent, criminals, juvenile delinquents, epileptics, dotards, dependent and neglected children, and the insane to Jan. 1, 1923 and concluded that out of the total population in the United States at that time 900,000 persons were dependent on the various communities in the United States for support. In Connecticut statistics has been compiled crediting the state with 7,000 or more individuals confined in hospitals erected to treat the nervous and insane.

About forty to forty-five millions of dollars is spent annually for the care of the insane in the United States.

More than three millions of dollars is spent yearly for their care in Connecticut. The Norwich State hospital requested of the legislature an appropriation of $1,400,000 to cover maintenance for 2,400 patients from July 1, 1925 to June 30, 1927. This amount did not include renovations, repairs, new buildings, improvement of grounds, purchases for fire protection, etc. To cover all the items mentioned above, a request for a total amount of $1,697,000 was made, most of which was appropriated. In April, 1927, the legislature appropriated the amount of $1,550,400 for an additional two years to take care of the insane in our hospital, $69,600 less than was requested.

Dr. James L. McCartney in his article on Mental Hygiene written for the benefit of the public, states that the rate of admission to institutions amounts to 75,000 persons annually. One out of every 21 persons in the general populace have or will have been at some time a patient in an institution for mental cases if not given proper mental hygiene to forestall mental illness. He says this is more graphic when we realize that one out of every seven families shows a history of insanity. One million out of twenty-four million children now in our schools are destined to insanity unless mental hygiene is applied. He very encouragingly adds that at least one-half of the mental disease is preventable. Its program calls for the erection of protective measures many years before the mental disease may be expected to develop. He hopes to accomplish with the aid of mental hygiene all that is anticipated. More than fifty millions of dollars of dollars are spent annually for the care of the insane in the institutions. In order to feed the 2,400 patients at the Norwich State hospital the granaries must supply us daily with 8 1-2 barrels of flour, the slaughter house must provide us daily with 1,100 pounds of meat, our dairy must furnish us with 1100-1800 quarters of milk and approximately 85 pounds of butter; our scullery must prepare 12 to 13 bushels of potatoes and the coffee and tea growers must supply us with at least 62 pounds of coffee and 30 pounds of tea and the coal minues must furnish us in zero weather with at least 45 tons of bituminous coal daily. The state is to make additional provisions for taking care of the insane and feeble-minded in the new state hospital which is being erected in Fairfield county.

The admission rate of the Norwich State hospital approximates 70 to 90-108 patients a month. The relative frequency of the various types of psychosis approximates senile dementia 13 per cent, general paralysis 10 per cent, toxic psychosis 9 per cent, manic depressive psychosis 10 per cent, dementia praecox 32 per cent, other psychoses including melancholia, epilepsy with psychosis, paranoid condition and psychoneurosis 26 per cent.

Recovery rate in most of the state hospitals today with our modern methods of treatment has risen to a much more promising percentage and I feel there is still a greater future for the state hospital in bringing about recovery than ever before, and certainly with the mental hygiene movement enforced and the cooperation received from lay people, mental abnormality can be reduced very decidedly. Ten years ago the recovery rate in the state hospitals amounted to about 25 per cent; today it is estimated at 30 to 40 per cent. In some state institutions an even greater percentage rate is claimed. I would say, conservatively, that approximately 25 per cent of our cases recover and as many as 35 per cent improve sufficiently to again return to their homes.

General Routine.

The general routine treatment of mental and neuropsychiatric cases in the Norwich State hospital consists of psychology, psychiatry, surgery, medicine, occupational therapy and recreation. We endeavor to impress upon the attendants the importance of looking upon the patient as an actual sufferer and worthy of the greatest consideration and most humane type of treatment. On admission we endeavor to establish in the patient a feeling that he is entering the hospital for care and not necessarily for a long period of confinement behind closed bars and within solid walls. We endeavor to win his confidence by kindness and try to manifest it in the way he is received. He is placed in a modern psychopathic building with an infirmary ward with an ample corps of attendants to adminster to his needs. Immediately on admission his valuables are considered and he is requested to give them up for safe keeping and advised that they will be restored when he leaves the hospital. All dangerous instruments, of course, are taken from him in order to prevent self-injury or homicide. He is given a tub bath and placed in a clean and comfortable bed; food is administered abundantly, a selected menu if he desires it; he immediately receives a physician's attention. His eliminative organs are immediately made to function. A simple enema is administered, soon after, if indicated, a mild purge is given. If rest in bed seems advisable he remains to exercise at leisure. The majority of the cases, however, are taken out in groups and are walked about the grounds. Efforts are made to establish amusement such as can be obtained from dances, baseball, games, moving pictures, visits to the fair grounds, etc. Special efforts are made to keep the patient sufficiently long to make treatment effective. On the other hand, unnecessary confinement is guarded against to prevent institutionalizing. In the event of the patient's parole from the hospital relatives are advised of his exact mental and physical status in order that effective and proper treatment can be given by the neuropsychiatric clinic in the neighborhood. Relatives are advised to keep in touch with the superintendent by writing and through our social workers so that we may be familiar with the patient's progress. If his mental condition does not warrant discharge at the end of six or twelve months, relatives are requested to return him or he is sent for before expiration of the parole period. Each individual, of course, must be studied carefully and in addition to giving the above consideration, must be specialized with. This applies to the various types of psychoses, neuropsychiatric conditions, alcohol, drug, inebriate cases and general paralysis.

Abortive and prophylactic measures to be considered are education of the mother and father of their obligation to their posterity, physically, intellectually and morally. A healthy body and brain are necessary to beget a robust physique and a sound mind. High spiritual ideals are more likely to be inate in the offspring if they are present in the parent. Much of the crime today is traceable to diseased brains and bodies. That which exists in the parent is very likely to be dominant in the son and daughter. It is not unusual for the wife of an alcoholic to give birth to an epileptic, a drug addict mother a marasmic baby. It is not unusual for a syphilitic to transfer that disease to his offspring when it evidences itself in the form of juvenile general paralysis or mental defectiveness, and the afflicted in time becomes a social problem. Men of wealth should be as willing to donate money for the establishment of mental and venereal clinics as well as contribute to libraries. The object of the Harrison act cannot be considered condemned with all of its objections. It is a factor in eliminating the wholesale distribution of drugs and aids in combating narcomania. Eliminate alcoholism and we will foster the birth of more healthy babies and relieve the community of more epileptics and feebleminded than we can imagine. The therapeutics of labor cannot be denied. Dr. F. L. Hoffman in compiling statistics found that Bayonne, N. J., an industrial city, had fewer suicides than Washington, D. C. Intensive labor, however, unquestionably proves detrimental. The high-speed-five-days-a-week-shop with two days of idleness may appear to accomplish more for the employer and give the employe more rest but much of this leisure time might later on be spent in a sanatorium. Peaceful, unfatiguing occupation is more to be desired, as it will be more conducive to health by relieving mental tension and physical exhaustion. Unemployment unquestionably is conducive to immorality. More neuropsychiatric clinics must be established and supported so that mental disease may be detected and dealt with early in its incipiency. Most social problems are the result of improperly balanced mental mechanism. Good reading matter must be made available for our young people. Such books as "Thrift, Duty, Self-Help," by Samuel Smiles and the "Eternal Building" by Lemon to inculcate logic and stimulate the development of will power and mold character. And I know no better rule or set of rules to prevent insanity than the Ten Commandments. The man or woman who follows the advice given in these verses will certainly be doing his part to ward off physical and mental disease. It appears to me to cover everything in the category of life that is conducive to sane living.

RETIRES AS MATRON AT JOHNSON HOME

Having faithfully served the Johnson Home as matron for the past eight years and three months, Mrs. May Rollins left that institution Monday afternoon. Although Mrs. Rollins' plans are somewhat unsettled, she has decided, however, to take a very much needed rest, and is to spend some time at the home of her sister, Mrs. H. A. Mack, of Boston.

The Johnson Home, since its opening in September, 1906, has had five matrons, Mrs. Rollins' term of service having more than doubled others there. The first matron, Mrs. Erastus Gardner, filled that responsibility prior to the administration of Mrs. James Miner, who was succeeded for only a brief time by a Miss Spaulding. The fourth in line, Mrs. Harriet Taylor, was succeeded by Mrs. Rollins, who came to the home on fine recommendation, April 1, 1922.

Mrs. Benjamin Lewis, who has for many years served as chairman of the house committee for the welfare of Johnson Home, was influential in securing Mrs. Rollins' services as, up to and including her administration. Mrs. Lewis has been empowered to engage all of the matrons. When Home chapter of the King's Daughters first started, Mrs. Lewis was one of the original five women who met in the home of the late Mrs. William H. Cardwell. Home chapter has grown each year in number, until now it has a membership of more than 100. Mrs. Lewis has been for several years and still is the only active member of Home chapter, of the original five, since it was first organized.

For Burial in Southbridge

The body of Mrs. Lester Green, whose funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the home of her sister, Mrs. Clarence Luther, No. 28 Regina street, was taken to Springfield Monday by Undertakers Cummings and Ring for cremation. Burial of the ashes will be in the family lot in Southbridge, Mass.

INVITING MAYOR ROBBINS TO NORWICH, ENGLAND

The 1300th anniversary of the founding of the diocese of Norwich, England, is to be held there on Aug. 13 and an invitation has been sent to Mayor Lee Roy Robbins through the dean of Norwich, but Mayor Robbins does not expect to attend the anniversary celebration.

May I bring to your notice the approaching celebration of the thirteen hundredth anniversary of the foundation of this diocese. The first bishop, Felix, was consecrated or at any rate commissioned by Honorius, archbishop of Canterbury, in 630, the headquarters of the see being at Dunwich on the coast of Suffolk. In 673 another see was founded at Elmham, but later the two were united, and in 1075 the bishop's seat was transferred to Thetford. In 1091 Herbert de Losinga was appointed bishop, and three years afterward, he migrated to Norwich. The great cathedral church was begun by him in 1096, and consecrated in 1101. The present diocesan is the 65th bishop of Norwich, but there have been more than 100 bishops of East Anglia. In antiquity the diocese is surpassed in England only by Canterbury, London, Rochester and York.

The bishop and the dean and chapter are cooperating to make this celebration worthy of the occasion. The chief services in the cathedral church have been fixed for Wednesday, Aug. 13, 1930, and the archbishop of Canterbury has promised to be present. Provisional acceptances have been received from nine other archbishops and from about 100 bishops. There will be a choral celebration of the holy communion at 11 o'clock. The afternoon service will be at 3 o'clock, at which the bishop of the diocese will preach.

On behalf of the dean and chapter I send you a cordial invitation to be present on this unique occasion. If you are able to accept will you please say if you be accompanied by any one. The bishop of Norwich and Mrs. Pollock are kindly asking all guests to a garden party after the afternoon service. Other details will be sent later.

HONORED BY WEDDING ANNIVERSARY AT ADAMS

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Godek of 125 Hickory street returned Monday from a week end trip to Adams, Mass., by way of the Mohawk trail. They were guests of honor at a reception held there for their silver wedding anniversary at the home of Mrs. Godek's sister, Mrs. Valentine Bienek. About a hundred guests were present. Tables were set in the beautiful garden and a delightful dinner was enjoyed by those present.

Later in the afternoon swimming and other sports were enjoyed by some while dancing continued to a late hour. Many relatives and friends were present from different cities though most were from Adams.

JUNE RAINFALL SMALL BUT WATER SUPPLY HOLDS UP

The month of June had the small rainfall of 1.97 inches, according to the measurements taken at the water department office.

The supply of water in the reservoirs, however, is holding up well, as Deep River reservoir was at full pond last Saturday, Fairview reservoir was 6 1-2 inches above full pond last Tuesday and Stony Brook reservoir was 11 inches below full pond the same day.

After being bare two years, hills in the Big Bend section of Texas now are green with grass, the result of heavy rains.

DIVORCE DENIED BY JUDGE ALLYN L. BROWN

A divorce sought by Homer H. Flowers of New London from Blanche Senay Flowers, formerly of New London, is denied by Judge Allyn L. Brown in a decision handed down and filed with Clerk John H. Walker today. The couple was married March 1, 1922, and desertion was alleged since 1925.

In a memorandum of decision, Judge Brown says:

The above case was heard as an uncontested case on June 6th. The original writ was issued under date of Dec. 20, 1928, and returnable on the first Tuesday of January, 1929, alleging in a cause of action on the ground of adultery. On Feb. 1, 1930, an amendment was filed alleging desertion by the defendant on Aug. 1, 1925.

The evidence disclosed that on Jan. 3, 1926, the plaintiff, who is a petty officer in the U. S. navy, left New London, where he was living in a rented apartment with his wife, for the annual southern cruise called for by his duty and that on Feb. 26, 1926, the defendant abandoned the home where he has left her, and has never returned to live with him.

Upon the evidence presented, it would appear that the plaintiff now has a meritorious cause of action on the ground of desertion.

As suggested to counsel, however, at the time when the case was heard, inasmuch as the cause of action for desertion was not completed when the writ and complaint were issued, the court cannot render judgment in favor of the plaintiff on this ground. The ground of adultery was abandoned.

The court took the papers to give counsel an opportunity to submit any authority warranting a judgment on the ground sought under the circumstances. Inasmuch as none has been furnished, I assume that counsel has not succeeded in finding any authority to warrant his contention.

SHARP, SHOOTING PAINS IN BACK DISAPPEARED

Kidneys Too, Function Normally, Since Man Took Bon-Tone.

MR. ROBERT YORKSTON

There is no reason why anyone should suffer with such ailments as stomach trouble, kidney, liver, or bowel disorders. Bon-Tone may be expected to do away with all these troubles in a short time. Made up of 14 of Mother Nature's roots, leaves, barks, and berries, it is a wonderful herbal remedy and body builder.

Mr. Robert Yorkston, of 25 Edward street, Highwood, Conn., who is a member of the Expressmen's Union, states:

"For about two years I suffered from a general rundown condition. I was tired all the time. My back gave me an awful lot of trouble. The least little exertion would cause sharp, shooting pains in my back; and when I stooped over, I thought I'd never be able to straighten up again. When I went to bed at night I would hardly get to sleep, it seemed, before I'd have to get up on account of my kidneys. Often I'd be up four or five times in a night. In the morning I could hardly get out of bed—I just felt as though I hadn't had any rest at all, as though I had been up all night.

"Friends recommended Bon-Tone to me, and it sure has done the trick. I have now taken six bottles of this remedy; and that tired feeling is all gone, and I get up in the morning feeling as strong as I've ever been, I go to bed nights and get my rest, and it's very seldom that I have to get up. It gives me great pleasure to recommend Bon-Tone to anyone as the most wonderful medicine I've ever taken."

Learn more about this wonderful herbal tonic, and what it is doing for other sufferers. Have a talk with the Bon-Tone Man, at Smith's Pharmacy, in Norwich, Conn.

This tonic is also for sale by all leading druggists everywhere.

SENATE RAISES PENSION RATES FOR WAR VETS

World War Relief Bill Adopted Following Passage of Amendment Which Increases Disability Pension Rates From $40 Monthly Maximum Provided By House Bill to $60 Maximum As Allowed Spanish War Veterans — Vote On Amendment to Increase Rates Was 37 to 26—Change Forces Bill Into Conference.

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—The new World war veterans relief measure was passed today by the senate after the democrats had succeeded in raising the disability pension rates above the level provided by the house bill bearing the administration's approval.

This change in the house measure, which was voted 37 to 26, forces the bill into conference for adjustment of differences. There were hints of another presidential veto if the increased rates were allowed and administration supporters were seeking a way tonight to reach a compromise.

Overriding the Hoover forces on the increase, the senate showed its irritable mood in the closing hours of debate. It refused to enter an agreement to vote tomorrow on the bill and then proceeded to vote tonight. Vice President Curtis was taken to task for ordering the bill passed after a shout of ayes and the senate then proceeded to have a record vote. It was a day of sharp words.

The record vote on passed of the legislation was 56 to 11.

Senators Walsh of Massachusetts and Conally of Texas, democratic members of the finance committee, sponsored the higher pension rates. Their schedule would give World war veterans the same allowed Spanish war veterans, with a maximum of $60 a month for permanent total disability.

The new bill, passed by the house after President Hoover had vetoed the general disability compensation measure, allows World war veterans who can not prove their disability is service connected to collect government compensation nevertheless.

There was every indication tonight that the house would disagree to the higher rate level and would accept the offer of the senate for a conference. However, congressional leaders were confident of quick agreement on a compromise.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, also succeeded in adding by a vote of 36 to 27, an amendment to allow veterans who contracted venereal disease while in service and who are suffering disability as a result to collect the pension. Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania who led the fight for the administration in behalf of the house measure vigorously protested this.

Senator Cutting, republican, New Mexico, who had threatened to force a roll call vote on the original vetoed veterans relief measure recently passed by the senate 66 to 6, withdrew his motion after the senate increased the pension rates.

He was shouted down, however, in an attempt to extend from 1925 to 1930 the period within which disabilities might be presumed to have had service origin.

The New Mexico senator was successful with an amendment to bring tubercular patients within the benefits of the measure without requiring them to prove an "active" case.

Those voting against the bill on final passage were all republicans: Bingham, Borah, Fess, Goldsborough, Hastings, Hebert, Metcalf, Moses, Sullivan, Vandenberg and Walcott.

The roll call on the Walsh-Connally amendment raising the pension rates showed nine republicans with one farmer-labor senator, Shipstead, Minnesota, and 27 democrats for and 26 republicans against.

Senators Lafollette, republican, Wisconsin; Cutting, Barkley, democrat, Kentucky and George, democrat, Georgia, led the final hours of debate, centering their pleas on the amendment for an increase in the pension rates. They belittled predictions of the administration of a treasury deficit and assailed the attitude of President Hoover toward veterans legislation.

Senator Reed estimated the senate bill would cost more than $58,000,000 the first year as compared to $31,000,000 provided by the house. Senator Walsh disputed Reed's figures, although he agreed it would be more expensive than the house bill.

REFUSES INJUNCTION AGAINST RECALL ELECTION

DETROIT, July 1—(AP)—Detroit's mayoralty recall movement assumed the proportions of a supreme court case today as Circuit Judge Arthur Webster refused to grant an injunction against an election for the removal of Mayor Charles Bowles.

Defeated in their lower court battle, the administration forces tonight were preparing to carry their case to the Michigan supreme court in an effort to obtain a reversal of Judge Webster's decision.

Judge Webster held that he had no right to interfere with the election, that the reasons for the recall appeared to conform to the reuirements of the statute and that he could not go behind the face of the recall petitions to investigate alleged frauds.

Counsel for the mayor's group indicated that they would file an appeal immediately. Judge Webster granted a three-day stay in the proceedings for this purpose.

Should the supreme court uphold the lower tribunal, Richard W. Reading, city clerk, said he would call a recall election within 30 days as provided by law.

ONE DAY FLIGHT TEXAS TO MAINE

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—A oneday flight from Texas to Maine, will be attempted tomorrow to test the mobility of the army air corps for sudden hostilities, an announcement today said.

The flight, announced here by the Curtiss-Wright corporation, will be attempted by Lieut. Yantis H. (Buck) Taylor, flying instructor in advanced pursuit training in the army air corps school at Kelly Field, Texas. He plans to take off early in the morning at the Mexican border at Laredo, Tex., and fly to the Portland, Me., airport, the army's most northern field designated for military use on emergency.

The distance from Laredo to Portland on the proposed route is approximately 2100 miles.

ADMITS PROHIBITION IS DIFFICULT PROBLEM

PHILADELPHIA, July 1—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander John D. Pennington, U. S. N., retired, taking charge of the Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware area as prohibition administrator under the new order of things, today said he did not believe that congress in passing the prohibition act intended that federal officers should be the "village cops."

Commander Pennington succeeds Samuel O. Wynne, who has been appointed supervisor of alcohol permits under the bureau of industrial alcohol for the Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware district.

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO RELIEVE UNEMPLOYMENT

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—The Wagner bill for advance planning and regulated construction of public work in times of business depression was amended today and passed by the house.

The measure would authorize $150,000,000 for public works in times of depression.

It contemplates that public works shall be planned in detail so that in times of depression actual construction could be launched upon at once.

Immediately following passage of the public works bill, the house began consideration of a companion measure to provide an index of employment.

SCANT RESPECT FOR LAW SAYS BRIDGEPORT PASTOR

BOURNEMOUTH, England, July 1.—(AP)—Dr. William Horace Day, pastor of the United Congregational church of Bridgeport, Conn., tonight told the opening session of the Fifth World Congregational conclave that "despite prohibition in America, lawlessness abounds as it should not."

Dr. Day, moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches of America from 1917 to 1919, and for four years president of the American Missionary association said that in America "there is quantity production in laws, but scant respect for the law.

"Last year 30,000 new laws were passed," he said. Dr. Day believed there was a spirit in America that might be described as "the new heathenism of force," he felt it was the business of Congregationalists to combat it, because it was "as fierce, as subtle and as tremendous an urge from below, as had ever assailed the spirit of man."

The danger in America, he held, came from the rich, powerful and prosperous and the Congregationalists must be sure to build into the structure of the country the Puritan principles that came out of England.

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—Progress was reported today by representatives of anthracite operators and miners who are conferring in New York city on a new wage and working agreement to take the place of the four year old contract expiring August 31.

With her daughter, Irene, beside her, Mrs. Hunter went up in a 21-passenger Curtiss Condor, as a guest of Casey Jones, official observer for the National Aeronautical association, and exchanged signals with the boys.

PARIS, July 1.—(AP)—Resolutions urging European nations to end their tariff wars, to proclaim the economic interdependence of the peoples of the world and to seek a remedy for the agricultural crisis in Europe, were adopted today at the final session of the European Customs' Union association.

PARIS, July 1—(AP)—Pierre Etienne Flandin, French minister of commerce, today told the Associated Press that France relies upon the American sense of fairness for an equitable adjustment of tariffs.

France has complete confidence in the "sense and equity of justice in the United States" in connection with tariff "as in all other international questions," the commerce minister asserted.

PUBLIC DEBT REDUCED $746,000,000 PAST YEAR

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—President Hoover's first full fiscal year in office was completed last midnight with a surplus of $184,000,000 in the treasury and a reduction of $746,000,000 in the gross public debt.

Secretary Mellon announced today that total receipts for the 12 months had amounted to $4,178,000,000 while expenditures were $3,994,000,000. For the year previous receipts were $4,033,000,0000 while expenditures were $3,848,000,000.

Mr. Mellon said at the close of the 1930 fiscal year last night the total gross debt was $16,185,000,000 as compared with $16,931,000,000 on June 30, 1929.

In announcing the surplus the secretary said $76,000,000 was due to debtor nations making their June 15 payment on their war debts in cash instead of in United States securities. The surplus also was increased, he pointed out, by abnormal customs receipts due to withdrawals of imports in anticipation of tariff legislation.

Income taxes provided the greater amount of the revenue for the year, producing a total of $2,411,000,000 as compared with $2,331,000,000 the previous year. The increase was made in face of the stock market collapse and the one per cent reduction on normal and corporation incomes.

FOUR THOUSAND PARADE AT NEGRO COMMUNIST'S FUNERAL

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—Escorting the body of Alfred Luro, Negro communist, killed during a demonstration last Friday, four thousand Negroes and whites marched through Harlem today.

To the tune of the "Internationale," and with the raised fists of communism, they paraded for almost 50 blocks through the Negro district without a single instance of disorder.

Uniformed police were conspicuously absent but many plain clothes men mingled in the crowd and an inspector, a captain, a sergeant and two patrolmen walked at the head of the parade. Just as the first marchers reached the dispersing point at 110th street and Fifth avenue, where it was feared an over-enthusiastic demonstration might be staged, a thunder storm broke and the crowd rushed for subways and other cover.

Luro's body was then taken on for burial in Queens across the East river. His death was attributed by communists to police clubbing. Police, however, said that a paving block had accidentally fallen off a roof and struck him on the head.

NEW DRY ADMINISTRATOR RAIDS SEVEN SPEAKEASIES

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—Andrew McCampbell signalized his advent as prohibition administrator for this district today by raiding seven speakeasies, seizing two truckloads of liquor and tracing another to its source of supply.

Mr. McCampbell, who has been enforcing the liquor laws of the country in various capacities since 1927, announced on taking office this morning that he saw no reason why New York couldn't be made as dry as any other part of the country.

He said his hands were not tied by Washington, as his resigned predecessor, Major Maurice Campbell, had charged his were, and he also took sharp issue with Major Campbell's statement that the prohibition law could not be enforced.

MIDSHIPMAN DEAD FROM SELF INFLICTED WOUNDS

PARIS, July 1—(AP)—Midshipman Francis H. Worthington, aged 19, of Grover, Colo., died at the Hotel Dieu hospital today of self-inflicted gunshot wounds. He was attached to the battleship squadron that has been visiting Cherbourg on the midshipmen's summer practice cruise.

Police said the midshipman Worthington shot himself yesterday at his hotel.

He left a vague and rambling letter saying he found life no longer worth living, and that he was haunted by the idea his mind was likely to give way.

SILES STILL A REFUGEE AT BRAZILIAN LEGATION

LA PAZ, July 1—(AP)—Former President Hernando Siles, whose regime was overthrown by a revolution last week, was still a refugee in the Brazilian legation today, but is expected to leave Bolivia secretly under safe conduct either tonight or tomorrow.

Dry Forces Reveal Alleged Rum Ring

CLEVELAN[illegible] [illegible]ly 1—(AP)—Federal authori[illegible] [illegible]ealed an alleged internation[illegible] [illegible]leg and whiskey smuggling [illegible]zation, that extended its tent[illegible] [illegible]m Cleveland as far as Kingsville, [illegible]., McKeesport, Pa., and Fernandina, [illegible]a., when secret indictments were returned here today naming ten men and charging 52 overt acts.

Word of the indictments came on the arrest here of "Gentleman Danny" Coughlin, by Paul Hanson, special federal investigator. Coughlin was previously arrested last spring as he was unloading a boatful of alleged champagne near Vermilion, Ohio.

He was taken before Federal Judge Samuel West today and pleaded not guilty to a charge of conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition and smuggling laws. Bail was set at $7,500.

Federal investigators also are seeking Thomas Courtney, said to be a partner of Coughlin, who recently jumped an $8,500 bond in federal court in Toledo. He is believed to be in Canada and directing operations from that point, agents said.

Coughlin is now under $10,000 bond in Toledo pending appeal of a three-year sentence. He was released on $1,000 bond on a rum running charge at Pittsburgh and his total bond here is now $15,000.

SHARPLY OPPOSING VIEWS ON BANK TAXATION

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 1—(AP)—Sharply opposing views on bank taxation were presented to the National Governors' conference today by spokesmen for the banks and the state banwking bodies(FT—WIO-ETAB— taxing bodies.

Appearing for the banks was Thornton Cooke of Kansas City, chairman of the taxation committee of the American Bankers' association, and arguing the other side of the question was George H. Sullivan, state senator of Minnesota and chairman of the Association of States on Bank Taxation. Gov. Theodore E. Christianson, of Minnesota, also spoke at this morning's session, voicing a warning against what he called an "insidious trend toward centralization" in government and "the practice of offering federal subsidies as a spur to state action."

Following the morning session, the governors attended a Rotary club luncheon, at which several of them spoke over a national radio broadcast, and later went on a sight-seeing trip, visiting copper mines and mills. Tonight the executives and members of their parties attended a lake shore dinner.

Declaring "the banks do not seek a preferred position with respect to taxation, Mr. Cooke urged broadening of the basis of taxation and distributing the burden as a means of meeting the increased revenue demanded by enlarged governmental responsibilities.

Banks have been over-assessed, he said, as compared with other forms of property, and he cited figures which he said showed 17.5 per cent of the net incomes of banks have been taken for taxes, against an average of 10.41 per cent of the net incomes of other corporations.

INDIA'S YOUTH JOIN BOYCOTT PROCESSION

In numerous cities and towns boy and girl students refused to attend school, protesting against the sentencing of Pandit Motilal Nehru and Sayed Mahmud at Allahabad. They organized and marched, waving tricolored nationalist flags and shouting for a boycott of British-made goods.

Twelve municipal schools closed in Bombay, as did a number of colleges. Students of Wilson college, headed by twenty girls, marched from one college to another, urging the pupils to join processions and picketing those schools where the students refused to leave classes.

The sentencing of Nehru and Mahmud to six months simple imprisonment each, which followed their arrest yesterday for their civil disobedience activities, added intensity to the "boycott week" proclaimed by Bombay nationalists against British goods.

Boycotting processions and picketing activities began yesterday, but word of the arrest of the two prominent leaders spurred congress officials to declare a two-day hartal or cessation of work.

As a result, nationalists estimated today that 80,000 workers were idle, that some 42 mills and factories were closed, and that all native theaters as well as exchanges, markets, bazaars and shops were locked.

SUIT TO RESTRAIN PROPOSED OIL MERGER

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—Testimony concerning competition between the Standard Oil company of New York and the powerful British-controlled Dutch Shell company for the trade of New England was given today at a hearing of the government's suit to restrain a proposed merger of Standard and Vacuum oil.

William J. O'Sullivan, treasurer of the Automobile Oil company, which operates in the Boston area, testified that, up to last February Socony, as Standard of New York is known, practically dictated the prices paid in New England.

Various Standard oil groups and the Dutch shell have been in competition for foreign markets and sources for some time, especially in the race for the large fields of the near east and the local phases of the fight are said to have dictated the billion dollar merger of the two American companies.

LINDBERGH BABY IS NAMED CHARLES MORROW

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—The little son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh probably will be named Charles Morrow Lindbergh after his famous father and his grandfather, Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow.

This was learned in well-informed circles today. At the same time information was obtained about the probable plans for the near future of members of the Lindbergh and Morrow families.

Naval Treaty Assailed By Admiral Beatty

Admiral of British Fleet Declares Britain Is Only Nation That Made Any Reduction.

LONDON, July 1—The navy's own viewpoint on London's part in the recent naval conference today was communicated by the admiral of the fleet, Earl Beatty, and Lord Jellicoe, wartime Sea Lord, to the house of lords in vigorous attacks upon the treaty conclusions.

Earl Beatty, who is easily England's most prominent naval figure, assailed the treaty, declaring Britain the only nation that made any disarmament or reduction and that the reduction made was so great as to render her impotent and incapable of maintaining control over her farflung empire.

The earl's denunciation of the treaty continued a reference to use of the fleet for a far eastern contingency. This was taken by observers to indicate that the home government had not overlooked the possibility of a necessity for sending warships—possibly a fleet—to India.

He said the London naval treaty had resulted in an increase of armament for other countries, the United States increase being 253,000 tons, Japan's 10 per cent of her strength and France being left without any restriction whatever. France, the speaker said, already had built three 10,000-ton cruisers, is building three more and has authorized ten others, while Italy had built 2, is building 4 and has authorized 1.

Admiral Beatty severely criticized the admiralty for formulating a naval policy that did not take into consideration the possibility, however remote, of a naval attack on the part of the United States.

"Treaties themselves," he continued, "Do not always give security and safety. I'm anxious to know the reasons which have induced the admiralty and the government to cut down the number of cruisers from 70 to 50."

Lord Beatty said it was a most "inexplicable thing" because 70 cruisers until recently had been declared by the admiralty to be an irreducible minimum for its needs.

Earl Beatty said he could not believe any body of statesmen in the country could deliberately sign away Great Britain's heritage or that it was possible that naval experts should give advice which would render the service to which they belonged incapable of performing its duties.

CAMPBELL'S DRY LAW CHARGES GO UNANSWERED

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—The nation's most discussed law enforcement problem went into the keeping of the department of justice today amid a calm that was not jarred by the denunciation of the dry law by Maurice Campbell, retiring prohibition administrator for New York city.

While the charges by Campbell went unanswered except for a crisp statement from Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury, they gave rise to a demand in the house for an investigation. Representative Celler, democrat, New York, introduced a resolution to empower the house judiciary committee to investigate prohibition enforcement in the office of the New York administrator for the past three years.

Lowman, who has been executive officer in charge of enforcement, said if Campbell had let politicians prevent him from enforcing the law Campbell alone was at fault.

The treasury declined to go further in answering the statement issued in New York last night and the general attitude of officials was that the treasury no longer had anything to do with prohibition enforcement and did not wish to become involved in a controversy with a former official.

Celler said Campbell had given up his post under "conditions that indicate great laxity in the enforcement of the Volstead act and the interference by New York republican politicians in the enforcement of that act."

Celler's resolution said "the enforced resignation of the said Campbell follows the raiding of the Ritz-Carlton hotel and the Central Park Casino, favorite rendezvous of the fashionable and the wealthy."

Campbell resigned in preference to being transferred to Boston.

THREE SERIOUSLY INJURED IN EVACUATION DISORDERS

KAISERSLAUTERN, Germany July 1—(AP)—What little life remained in the separatist movement in the Rhineland today was jeered, thumped and burned out of it by German citizens of several towns. The most disorders caused by evening up old scores with the adherents of a rhenish republic occurred here where three persons were seriously injured and the home of one was burned.

While Breslau and Mayence liberation ceremonies wound up early today with reprisals against separatists and violence occurred, the police here for more than an hour were wholly unable to cope with the situation.

One shop was stoned and the shop and home of another victim suffered a similar fate. It was at the third story flat of a man named Knoblock that the republicans got out of hand and started the trouble that gave the Hessian Guards, local authorities and the fire brigade, a busy hour.

Knobloch, at one time a member of the separatist tribunal, was found in his home. When the intruders burst in he held them at bay for an instant with a revolver until he was knocked down and dispossessed of his weapon. The mob then went through his house like a cyclone hurling everything, even a piano, through the windows into the street.

HOUSE ADOPTS UNIFIED BORDER PATROL BILL

Vote In Favor of Hudson Measure Was 181 to 56—Is Designed to Carry Out One of President Hoover's Recommendations to Strengthen Law Enforcement—Would Consolidate Immigration and Customs Service Patrols Under the Treasury Department.

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—Overriding stubborn opposition from Great Lakes state representatives, the house today approved another law enforcement proposal of President Hoover by passing a bill creating a unified border patrol.

The vote was 181 to 56.

The measure now goes to the senate, but favorable action there at this session is doubtful.

It is designed to prevent smuggling of aliens, liquor and merchandise by making entry illegal except at points to be designated by the president.

Patrols of the immigration and customs service would be consolidated and placed under an assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of coast guard affairs. The new patrol would be on a civil service status.

Before passage it was amended to give small pleasure craft and boats plying on the Great Lakes which do not under existing law have to report to customs officers the same privileges they now have.

Under another amendment the civil service status of the 1,500 men in the existing patrols would not be lost in the new organization, which is to be increased to 2,500.

It was the fourth of the major proposals of the Hoover law enforcement commission recommended to congress by the chief executive. Two of them, transfer of dry enforcement to the justice department, and expansion of the federal prison system, have been enacted, but the plan to authorize juryless trials before United States commissioners is pending in the senate.

The New Yorker said it would create an "armed force on the border in peacetime" and would result in establishing a new class of criminals because, he added, it creates a new crime.

Clancy said the legislation was "half baked" and that it repealed valuable navigation laws.

FIVE MORE GANGSTERS HELD AS MURDER SUSPECTS

CHICAGO, July 1—(AP)—The trail of the assassins of Jake Lingle, whose death started a war on gangland, today had reached Los Angeles, where Frankie Foster, reputed owner of the assassin's pistol, and four other Chicago gangsters were under arrest as suspects in the slaying June 9 of the Chicago Tribune crime reporter.

The five fugitive gunmen were captured by Los Angeles police and two Chicago detectives in raids on two apartments last night, almost at the same time that 16 other suspects were caught by Chicago police in raids on gang headquarters here.

Arrested on the coast with Foster were Marvin Apter, alias Hart; Frankie Fischer, George Davis and Herman Walters. Hart, Fischer and Davis were described as gang gunmen and Walters was said to be a brewmaster for one of the gangs. Los Angeles police said their raids fell short of capturing everyone they sought. Most of the gangsters were identified with the North Side George "Bugs" Moran mob, bearing much of the blame for cutting short Lingle's underworld assignments. It was considered probable that among those who evaded the roundup were "Bugs" himself and Leo Mongoven, both of whom have been missing from their usual haunts for some time, even before the slaying of Lingle.

MOVE TO ASSURE FUNDS FOR ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, July 1.—(AP)—A precautionary program to assure funds for the continuation of the Hoover law enforcement commission and its investigations was formulated today by house administration followers in preparation for a contest over an appropriation of $250,000 for the organization's expenses in the new fiscal year.

A resolution was approved late today by the house rules committee to authorize the commission to continue its studies into prohibition and all other law enforcement, and administration forces were confident of favorable action by the house tomorrow when the second deficiency bill is submitted for action on senate amendments.

An item of $250,000 for the commission was stricken from the deficiency bill on a point of order raised by Representative LaGuardia, republican New York, on the ground that the commission was not authorized for a second year. When the measure went to the senate, an item of $50,000 and a reappropriation of $88,000 of unexpended funds, was inserted with the proviso that the commission confine its studies to prohibition enforcement.

The senate today agreed to the conference report on the deficiency bill, carrying about $73,000,000 for contingencies in government operation, but 16 amendments, including the appropriation for the Wickersham commission, still were in disagreement.

The conference report will be submitted to the house tomorrow, and, if a point of order is raised against the Wickersham allotment of $250,000 to be recommended by the house appropriations committee, Acting Chairman Purnell of the rules committee will offer the resolution to continue the life of the commission, which technically expired today, and to provide $250,000 and the unexpended balance, for the fiscal year 1931.

It will be brought up under special legislative status to assure early action.

Chairman Wood of the house appropriations committee predicted favorable action by the house and senate. Wood said it was to be regretted that "an attempt has been made to slap the administration" by not providing the funds "recommended by the budget bureau with the approval of President Hoover."

"FROZEN" ASSETS CAUSE BANK TO CLOSE DOORS

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 1—(AP)—Closing of the Title and Trust company of Western Pennsylvania at Connellsville was announced today by the state department of banking.

The department will attempt to interest new capital in the bank in the hope of reopening it and protecting the depositors.

The action of the department was attributed to the severe slump which has struck the western Pennsylvania bituminous regions. Connellsville is in the heart of the soft coal fields.

There was $3,000,000 in deposits in the bank at the time of closing.

CORONER FINDS BLANCHARD DEATH NOT DUE TO ASSAULT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 1—County Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson made known his finding today in the inquest on the death of Joseph A. Blanchard of this city in which he sets forth that death was not caused by the criminal act or carelessness of any other person or persons. Blanchard died in St. Joseph's hospital here June 3 and later that night three local young men were taken into custody in the belief that an assault committed by them on the person of Blanchard two months prior to death, may have been the cause of death. The trio consisted of Arthur Roberts, 21, Napoleon Arton, 16, and Phillipe St. Hilaire, 22. The three had been arraigned in police court in March when they were charged with assault on Blanchard. Each pleaded guilty and received a fine of $5 and costs. Blanchard, who started on a drinking party with the young men, was alleged to have been beaten up in a series of three encounters with members of the trio. Shortly after having been taken into custody the night of Blanchard's death, the three youths were released without bonds.

Coroner Bill held his inquest here June 6. His finding issued today gives the cause of death as leptomeningitis (etiology undetermined.)

The finding follows: "The undersigned coroner within and for the county of Windham having received notice that Joseph A. Blanchard had died in St. Joseph's hospital in the city of Willimantic, on the 3rd day of June, 1930, and having reason to suspect that said death might have been caused by the criminal act or carelessness of some other person or persons, ordered an autopsy to be made upon said body by Louis I. Mason, medical examiner for the town of Windham. I viewed the body of said deceased and on the 6th day of June, 1930, I held an inquest as to the cause and manner of said death at the city court room in said city of Willimantic.

"From the testimony taken at said inquest and the report of said autopsy I find that said Joseph A. Blanchard died in St. Joseph's hospital on said 3rd day of June, 1930, from leptomeningitis (etiology undetermined). I further find that said death was not caused by the criminal act or carelessness of any other person or persons. I delivered the body of said deceased to his relatives for burial. I file with this finding a copy of testimony taken at said inquest. Dated at Danielson this 30th day of June, 1930. Arthur G. Bill, Coroner for Windham County."

COURT GRANTS CONTINUANCE IN CASE OF SHORR

WILLIMANTIC, July 1—Solomon Shorr, 29, of 1166 Chapel street, New Haven, where he has a police record of 18 arrests, asked for a continuance of his case so that he might secure counsel when arraigned in police court this morning, charged with being a pickpocket. Judge Frank H. Foss acceded to the request and continued the case until Thursday morning, July 3, fixing the bonds at $2,000. Shorr did not plead today to the complaint as read by Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher and charging the accused with theft from the person on two counts, taking a wallet from John Mijcher and a sum of money from Andrew Ples. The police failed, at least temporarily today, to link Shorr as the pickpocket who took $1,000 in bills from the pocket of Kenneth Kuchinia, meat market proprietor, several weeks ago, when Kuchinia failed to identify Shorr.

During the session of court Frank Lis of this city was charged with operating a car without a license. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs. It was when the Lis car figured in a collision on lower Main street Saturday night that a crowd gathered about the scene of the accident and the pickpocket got to work.

WAR WAS INDIRECT CAUSE OF DEATH OF E. J. PLANKEY

DANIELSON, July 1.—Edward J. Plankey, 42, dead at his home in Wauregan, was a veteran of the World war and his experiences in the great struggle in France are held responsible for the breaking down of his health and his untimely passing. Mr. Plankey, who had lived the greater part of his life in Wauregan, was born in Jay, N. Y., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Plankey.

When he left Wauregan to do military service for his country he was a powerfully built young man. He saw extremely hard service overseas in the midst of some of the hardest campaigning by American troops. Being gassed is believed to be responsible for the breaking down of his health, which has been failing for a long time, and of late he has been but a mere shadow of his former self.

Mr. Plankey came to Danielson last Saturday and was taken suddenly ill here. His condition became rapidly worse, indicating the end.

Surviving relatives are his sister, Miss Josephine Plankey, with whom he made his home, three other sisters, Mrs. Romeo Maynard, Mrs. Joseph Brodeur, Mrs. Walter Diviney, and three brothers, Arthur Eli and Napoleon. Though in failing health Mr. Plankey worked in the mill at Wauregan as usual until very recently.

The body of Miss Mary Elizabeth Brown, 28, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Faber Brown of Brooklyn was brought here last night by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy from Hartford, where the young woman died yesterday at the home of one of her sisters, Mrs. Thomas Foster. In addition to her parents Miss Brown leaves the following sisters: Mrs. Howard Davis, Mrs. Patrick Weaver, both of Jewett City, Mrs. G. Rene Caron, Danielson, Mrs. Thomas Foster, Hartford. There is also a brother, J. Lewis Brown, of Port Jervis, N. Y., and a half-brother, Michael Morin of Goodyear.

A group of Danielson boys will leave here Wednesday morning for a fortnight at Camp Woodstock at Black pond, and will remain there enjoying and learning from all the activities that will be scheduled for them by the County Y. M. C. A. organizations that are sponsors of the camp. The local party will be made up of Walter Shippee, John E. Howard, Earl Holt, M. P. Dowe, Lucius Williams and Nedfin Robertsen.

Duplicating an expedition they made last summer Judge Joseph Smith, Selectman Henry Bessette, George Despathy, all of Moosup, and Fred F. Maynard, a Wauregan business man, will leave Saturday morning for a week's fishing trip to the Racquet river region of New York state.

Spearman, all of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. George Pilling and son, Richard, of New Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Guinard of Suncook, N. H., and Mrs. Priscilla Reeves of Hartford. Mrs. Reeves' daughter Miss Blanche Reeves returned with Mr. and Mrs. Guinard for a two weeks visit in various sections of Maine and New Hampshire.

Tonight Miss Albina Heroux of Riverview left here for New York, to sail Wednesday on the steamship America for a three months' tour of Europe. Miss Heroux will visit in France, Germany, Austria and Italy. Her plans include attendance at the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

This morning, John W. Albro of Brooklyn, at a justice's court in that town, was fined $25 and costs for reckless driving. Albro's machine smashed into the Brindamour filling station on the West Side yesterday morning in seeking to avoid collision with a machine operated by Henry Weaver, Brooklyn, who was driving out of the station. Damage done to filling equipment at the Brindamour place runs into a very considerable sum of money.

Eight large trucks and three small ones will make up the convoy of the Service battery at Niantic. The first of these trucks, three of them, will get away from here Thursday morning, going to Danbury to pick up baggage of the units of the 192nd field artillery that are stationed in that city and thence to proceed to Niantic. The main body of the battery, under command of Captain Gordon J. Gale will leave here for camp early on the morning of the Fourth. The last of the members to get away for Niantic will leave here Saturday. The Service battery goes as an advance detachment.

Fireworks! Plenty of them, all kinds all prices, of the best qualities, new stocks and at prices within your reach. D. Blumenthal, Town Hall building.—adv.

It is now Lieut. Oscar B. Cook of the Service battery, 192nd field artillery, a promotion from sergeant in the local outfit. Lieut. Cook will leave here for the annual encampment at Niantic this week for his first tour of field duty as an officer.

All deposits made in our savings department this week will draw interest from July 1, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. Save regularly and watch your account grow. The Danielson Trust company.—adv.

Mrs. Joseph Natorski, wife of the proprietor of the Danielson inn, continues to improve after a recent critical injury, and is able to be about her apartment.

The primary, junior and intermediate-senior departments of the Westfield Congregational church school are closed for the summer season—until the first Sunday in September.

SEVERAL SENTENCED TO JAIL BY JUDGE GEISSLER

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 1—Jail sentences and fines were meted out this morning by Judge M. H. Geissler, presiding over a session of city court in which disposition was made of five cases. Richard Murdock of Pomfret pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Louis Brenek of Jewett City ran his car amuck last evening while passing through the main streets of the city. He was arrested by Sergt. A. J. Sponcey and Patrolman Durand on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. When presented in court this morning Brenek denied the allegation of the officers and entered a plea of not guilty. He requested a continuation of his case in order that he might retain counsel. Judge Geissler granted the motion and set Thursday as a date for the hearing.

The third presentation consisted of a trio of Polish residents who were arraigned on charges of intoxication and breach of peace. Judge M. H. Geissler awarded a $10 fine to one, a 90 day jail sentence to the second and a 30 day sentence to the third.

Lionel H. Charron of South Main street, delegate of the Putnam lodge No. 574 B. P. O. Elks, to the grand lodge convention to be held in Atlantic City next week, left this morning on the first leg of his journey to the convention city. C., and after a tour of the city visiting places of interest will continue to Atlantic City, arriving there in time for the opening session of the convention which will take place on Monday, July 9. As soon as the transfer of deeds pertaining to the ownership of the Larned farm is completed more information concerning the movement for a Putnam airport will be available for publication.

A fine of $50 and costs was the lot of Archille Bourdia of North Grosvenordale, when found guilty of a charge of operating under the influence of liquor following his arraignment before Justice Percy P. HIGHWAYS OF ROSES

At various points along the line of the New Haven road, particularly in the western end of Connecticut and at certain station and junction plots, efforts have been made to make the grounds attractive by the planting of flowers. Many an interested station agent has accomplished excellent results and gained the admiring eye of many patrons of the road. From New York east, at this season of the year, the right of way is abloom with roses which cannot fail to attract attention and gain admiration. There were the days when similar interest was being shown at stations along the Norwich & Worcester branch of the New Haven road, but that has disappeared. The fact is that there are no passenger trains today from which patrons might view such efforts at beautification. But well-kept station grounds and blossom-filled banks alongside a railroad line never fail to create favorable comment.

This is, of course, not so different from the general policy of highway beautification which is being carried out by the highway department of this state. Evidences of it are to be seen along most every trunk line where roads have been straightened or certain plots have come into possession of the state which have been seeded down and shrubs, roses and other plants set out.

This method of treatment prompts the query that if it is a good thing for railroad lines and state road systems, why isn't it worth thinking about as a means of increasing the attractiveness of the highways that enter the Rose of New England? It is not a new idea. It has been suggested before, but the opportunity to carry it out where opportunity permits, individually or through organized effort, is just as good as ever.

Norwich might well do much more than it has done to emphasize the name which it bears. It is fully realized that it was not from the flowers that it produced that it was so named, but there is no reason why it should not make more of such a feature in connection therewith. Banks and hedges of roses on the various highways entering the city would present an attraction which people would go miles to see. It is done elsewhere with fine results. Why not in Norwich?

ADVICE ABOUT THE FOURTH

Some good advice is being offered at this time concerning the observance of the Fourth of July. It is advice that not only should be carefully considered by Young America, but which should get the thoughtful attention of parents.

Those who maintain that much of the failure to observe safety and sanity in connection with the celebration of the Fourth is due to the failure of parents to know what their children are doing and put a restraining hand thereon, for the welfare of the youngsters as well as for the protection of others and of property, are doubtless calling attention to a situation which needs it. Where there is a lack of parental oversight, a failure to exercise due responsibility, serious consequences are invited.

There is no getting away from the fact that much is done by Young America about which the parents know nothing. Much would never be sanctioned by them, and yet there is the need of anticipating those very things. Such advice as is offered is for the most part based upon past experiences. It reflects the lessons of other years. It is a reminder that what has happened in past years can and should be prevented this year.

The safe and sane movement has done wonders in reducing the fatalities and accidents. It has helped materially in preventing fires, but there is opportunity for further prevention of the undesirable and unwanted things which too often go with the celebration of the nation's birthday.

Parental oversight should not be confined by any means to the Fourth. It is the means of controlling deplorable conditions every day in the year and there are reasons for believing that the lack of it is responsible for much that saddens and appalls in connection with occurrences which feature so much of every day's news.

KEEP COMMISSION AT WORK

The matter of providing for the continuance of the law enforcement commission has been forced to wait for the closing days of the congressional session. The effort to block an adequate appropriation has been responsible and it is unfortunate that such a move has been made.

It is probable that there is a difference of opinion as to the methods that have been followed by the special commission. The leader of the opposition is one of the conspicuous drys and because the commission has dealt with enforcement beyond the field of prohibition is the cause of it. Senator Glass thinks the commission should have confined itself to the study of prohibition enforcement and through his efforts the senate refused to follow the house in providing the desired $250,000 for the continuation of the work. He would restrict the commission to the study of prohibition and reduce the amount provided. That would, if followed, stop the inquiry into the broader field of law enforcement, where there is unquestionably need for plenty of study and reform.

To block the commission's work in this respect would have a detrimental effect. It would sooner or later disclose that it would amount to little or nothing unless law enforcement in general got consideration. It would serve to block the real purpose of the inquiry. This cannot fail to be realized by the law-makers and was the reason why the president indicated that if congress did not provide for the continuance of the work as started it would be carried along through funds privately subscribed.

The indications point very strongly to the fact that the Glass move was simply another of those efforts put forth for the embarrassment of the administration.

In its work, the commission has been aware of the breakdown of the law. It was pointed out by the president that such a situation prevailed. If there are defects in the administration of justice in this country, there is no better time for finding it out than right now. With the work begun, there should be no other purpose than to see it through. It is to be realized that prohibition is one of the things which was to be studied. The commission is made up of individuals thoroughly capable to carry out the purpose for which the commission was named. It is dealing with no easy task. The stupendous task cannot be accomplished in a minute and there should be no thought of interrupting it until something definite has been accomplished.

FLYING RECORDS

While we are still admiring the accomplishment of Captain Kingsford-Smith and his crew in the Southern Cross, we cannot overlook the flight that has been made by Roger Q. Williams and his crew in their round-trip flight to Bermuda. They did not fly quite as far as did the aviators who came west over the Atlantic, for their distance was only 1,600 miles, and they did not face the same conditions as the Southern Cross's crew, but there is no reason to suppose that had their flight been straight away they could not have gone the additional distance that would have equalled the distance covered between Ireland and Newfoundland. They encountered decidedly different problems, but they accomplished their object in a remarkably short time.

Another record air accomplishment that is still unfinished is that by the Hunter brothers in their endurance flight in Illinois. They have long since passed the record established last year at St. Louis when Jackson and O'Brien remained in the air just short of 421 hours, and are now engaged in pushing the limit so far ahead that there is no telling how long those who break their endurance record will have to remain in the air. They are not only exceeding expectations, but they are achieving their objective by the use of a second-hand plane, one which received much mechanical attention before it was put into use and which has been getting constant attention since the flight began. Yet it is still in the air and going strong. It seems to be only a question how long the brothers are satisfied to remain in their cramped quarters and stand the handicaps which go with the maintenance of such a flight.

What they have already accomplished has been made possible by the refueling process. Without it there would have been no chance of their remaining in the air any such time. They have received not only fuel, but food, parts, clothing and, in fact, most anything they have needed that would prolong their stay in the air. It creates the impression that it will not be long before aviators can remain indefinitely in the air.

SOUTHEASTERN CONNECTICUT

While other sections of New England are calling attention to their recreational advantages, it is gratifying to note that organizations in communities along the shore line of New London county are setting forth the advantages of this end of Connecticut. These deal with the seashore attractions which are particularly appealing. There is no question but there are recreational areas with a decided appeal. They are recognized already by many. Artists flock to them for some of their enviable work. Vacationers find plenty of charm in fishing, boating, bathing and motoring, and it is well that wide-spread public attention should be called to them for the additional business which may develop in those localities which are prepared and willing to receive those looking for a vacation ground.

Back from the shores, it is to be mentioned there are various lakes which are considered highly desirable for summer camps. Development of these has made big strides in recent years and there are likewise within the country plenty of those delightful and sightly country places which have such an appeal for those who are confined to big cities for the greater part of the year and have little or no chance to get out and commune with nature at its best.

In setting forth New England as a vacation land, it is well that efforts are being put forth that will direct deserving attention to points in New London county which equal, if they do not excel, some of the other and, perhaps, better known localities. The advantage of advertising is no secret and there is no reason why the benefit of it should not be brought to this end of Connecticut as well as elsewhere.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: These are the joyful and busy days for the youngsters on vacation.

Now that we are seeing where Admiral Byrd and party have been and hearing about it, there appears to be no great rush to stake out claims there.

Mexico isn't willing that Colonel Fierro should participate in any more needless long-distance flights. Evidently Mexico appreciates the difficulty in replacing him.

The government has been offered 79 tracts of land as sites for a new federal prison. But don't think they would be given to the government; the prices range from $19,000 to $230,000.

TWENTY-FIVE REWARD

"Good-by, Jack; be good."

"I don't know about good, but I'll be lonesome."

"It's only for a week, silly. And besides, you'll have Tweetums."

"Oh, yes, Tweetums." And the young man scowled at the Pekinese he held squashed under one arm.

"But, Jack, you don't mind keeping him till I get back? You know mother won't have Tweetums in the house."

"Of course, I'll keep him," said Jeak. "Better hop abroad—The train's moving. 'By."

"Lucky the garage is empty," muttered Jack as he reached home; "just the place for this insect to howl his head off." But as Jack fumbled at the door Tweetums squeezed clear of the gripping arm and dashed through the shrubs to the street. Uttering the wild cries of the primeval hunter, Jack rushed for the gate, but when he reached the street it was destitute of Pekinese.

"Tweet—"

The name stuck in Jack's throat. "No," he decided, "not even for Jean will I run about the streets chirping 'Tweetums.' Have to use the brain instead. Police? No. Bureau of missing dogs? Ain't none. The press? There we have it. Ad with big fat reward, and Tweetums will be back in the car kennel tomorrow.

And next day the power of the press was duly vindicated when a furtive little man rang the bell.

"You the party that advertised $25 reward for a peekerneese dawg?" he asked.

"Right," said Jack. "Got him?"

"About that reward, boss?"

"It's here," said Jack. "Where did you find him?"

"Where did you lose him?"

"I picked him up right in front of this house. I got a kind heart, boss, and I see the dawg's lost. Here he is, a red colored peekerneese dawg."

"Tweetums, all right," said Jack passing over $25 and carefully decanting the dog from its basket into the cellar.

"And that's that," he chuckled "Gosh, if Jean—hello, here's another," he exclaimed, as a bullet-headed man appeared at the door.

"Yes," said Jack, "but I got him back."

"Answers to name of Tweetums?"

"Yes," blushed Jack.

"This is him," said the man, taking a red pekinese from the bag he carried. "Here, Tweetums?" he called, and the peke dashed up and licked his hand.

"That's Jean's pup," exclaimed Jack all unconscious of the bit of fried liver in the man's fist. "Another $25 but what can I do?"

"And how's Tweetums?" demanded Jean.

"Splendid," answered Jack. "I thought the little fellow might be lonely, so I got another peke to keep him company."

"You did! Jack, you're a darling! For that we'll drive home and tell mother we're engaged, and then go get Tweetums."

"Mother, we're engaged," announced Jean, "and we're going over to Jack's to get Tweetums."

"I guessed you were," said Jean's mother, "but Tweetums is in the kitchen."

"Tweetums! In the kitchen!" duetted Jack and Jean.

"Yes; a boy brought him here the day you left. Said he found him on the street and saw the address on the collar. I gave him 25—"

"Dollars?" groaned Jack.

"Cents," said Jean's mother.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 1—Having at the age of 81 "outlived all personal ambitions," he says, former Sen. Charles S. Thomas of Colorado has undertaken a crusade against "Uncle Sam, Landlord" in the eight public land states of the west.

What he has in mind is a public land state bloc in which no party line divisions will be permitted to eclipse the issue of putting both the major parties on record at their 1932 conventions for a revision of the conservation policy as it has been applied in those states since Roosevelt's day.

"Thus far our 'conservation' policy has woefully miscarried," this "grand old man" of Colorado, as Representative Taylor of that state has called him, declares in a letter to the public land state men urging such action.

And from the depths of his experience in the senate and for years since as a lawyer in interior department cases, Thomas sees no hope save in washing out partisanship. He is trying to induce democrats and republicans alike to join in framing a resolution to be presented at both party conventions.

Picturesque

The Colorado veteran is always a picturesque figure. He was that in the senate, and very apt to call a spade just that. Age has not dimmed his fire nor tempered his frankness in speech or action. It applies even to sartorial matters usually treated with great reserve.

In his senate days Thomas in winter time wore a topee well matched with his then iron-gray hair. But about the first sign of summer observers noted in the senate as the weather warmed up was the disappearance of this top covering.

The senator calmly left it at home when need for its protection and comfort in the cold winds had passed. He appeared with head naked to the breezes and let any who would comment as they liked. It was his aim to be comfortable and the topee was for that purpose, not for personal adornment.

Change

What results the octogenarian crusader may obtain from his campaign to oust Uncle Sam as the greatest landlord the world has known under the leasing policy on the public domain, would be hard to forecast.

"His erstwhile nephews of the west are now his tenants, mostly on sufferance," Senator Thomas insists. "His secretary of the interior has necessarily undergone a sinister transformation. He is now the landlord's agent, and has long since absorbed all the heartless qualities of that justly abhored character wherever he has been developed."

YOUR HEALTH

Health Comes First

By Margaret Bell, M. D., Ann Arbor, Michigan.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Yearly I become more and more impressed with the high incidence of pulmonary tuberculosis in the young women from sixteen to thirty years of age.

I am interested in the general opinion of the medical profession that this, in contrast to the proportionately low rate in man, is due to a dietary factor, for this opinion is doubtless all too often true. But within my own experience there is another equally important factor.

Pulmonary tuberculosis occurs relatively frequently in that group of young women whom either necessity or ambition has driven to work and study (in combination) at an early age. It occurs when the adolescent has taken on too heavy a load too early in development and carried on too long. We see it in colleges and universities and among other groups of students.

The technique for preventing such a frequent accident as pulmonary tuberculosis in the adolescent girl is relatively simple. In addition to avoiding direct exposure to tuberculosis, I would recommend that any young woman who plans to undertake heavy responsibilities such as study and partial self-support be thoroughly examined by her own doctor before she starts; and at yearly intervals; and in addition that she confer with her doctor as occasion may dictate. This means having a doctor in the town where she is studying, and the sort of doctor who will take sufficient time to acquaint the patient with her condition; make what recommendations he has for immediate correction of defects; and explain the advantages of certain practices with the idea that the girl will be stimulated to aspire to a life-long period of effectiveness through her knowledge of her own organic capacity and through motivated health habits that bring about and maintain her at her best.

I would stress three health habits all too generally neglected by students wholly or partly paying their own expenses:

(1) The importance of sufficient sleep and rest under proper conditions, emphasizing the advantages of good ventilation and satisfactory sleeping conditions;

(2) A fundamentally complete and well rounded diet, because the scientific application of the principles of our newer knowledge of nutrition is capable of doing as much for medicine as asepsis has done for surgery;

(3) The significance of suitable exercise and recreation in growth, development and well being.

If a girl in order to go to school has to work her way, at least partly, and cannot carry the double load and at the same time get time for adequate sleep and exercise and money for adequate food and a doctor's supervision, she would better choose another career. No college degree that involves slow suicide or even broken health is worth the price it costs

A School of Safety

Whoever goes to nature's school
Finds "Safety first" to be the rule.
—Mother West Wind.

Safety first is the most important law of life for the little people who wear feathers and fur. It is the first thing to be learned. Nothing else matters until that is learned. There is no such thing as safety for the heedless, the careless or the stupid. No, sir, there is no such thing as real safety for these. One must be heedful, careful and smart to live to old age among the little people of feathers and fur. So, usually the first thing that is taught the furred and feathered babies is to instantly heed danger signals.

Over in the Smiling Pool was a school of safety. It had two teachers and nine pupils. The two teachers were Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Muskrat. The pupils were their nine children. Peter Rabbit happened over there and it was a funny sight that Peter saw. The nine little Muskrats were swimming about where the water was shallow. A little farther out was their mother. Away over by the Big Rock was Jerry Muskrat. The instant that Peter appeared on the bank things happened. Slap! went Jerry Muskrat's tail on the water and Jerry disappeared. And then there were nine funny little slaps on the water, and nine little Muskrats disappeared. It was so surprising that Peter didn't know what to make of it. He just sat there and stared.

"How did you like that?" he inquired

Presently, up came Jerry Muskrat right beneath where Peter was sitting. How do you like that?" he inquired.

"How do I like what?" demanded Peter, looking perplexed.

"What lesson?" asked Peter, looking still more perplexed.

"Didn't you hear me slap the water with my tail?" demanded Jerry.

"Yes," replied Peter.

"Yes," replied Peter.

"And didn't you hear all the children slap the water with their tails?" persisted Jerry.

"Yes," replied Peter, "but what of it?"

"A great deal of it," retorted Jerry. "They showed you how well they had learned their lesson. Of course, you know perfectly well that that slapping of the water is the Muskrat danger signal. Mrs. Muskrat and I have been teaching the children that, no matter what they are doing, when they hear that signal they must instantly dive and hide. You saw them do it just now."

Peter nodded. "Yes, I saw it and they did it very nicely," said he. "But where are they now? I shouldn't suppose that such little fellows could stay under water so long. Indeed, I shouldn't think that Mrs. Muskrat could stay under so long."

Jerry chuckled. "Bless your heart, Peter, they're not under water," said he. "They've had their noses out ever so long. They swam over among those tussocks of grass and among the bulrushes, where they could put their noses out of water to breathe, yet not be seen. Here they all come now."

Sure enough, there was Mrs. Muskrat with the nine little Muskrats following her. They were coming out from among the bulrushes and the grassy tussocks growing near where the Laughing Brook enters the Smiling Pool. Jerry looked up at Peter and his eyes twinkled. "Safety first, Peter," said he, and slapped the water with his tail. Instantly, Mrs. Muskrat and nine little Muskrats disappeared, but not before Peter heard one big slap and nine little slaps on the water.

Little Talks on Thrift

Good Time for Personal Stock-taking

We are at the end of the beginning of the last half of the year. Business organizations at this time will be checking over their records to see what progress, if any, they have made during the half yearly period just ended. It is the time for taking stock; for looking squarely into facts.

As individuals we can do the same thing. What has the half year meant to us in accomplishment and personal upbuilding? Have we done anything during the period to improve our earning capacity, real or potential? Have we saved a little out of our earnings in the interest of future opportunities or necessities? Have we remained steadfast to habits of sensible living or have we allowed ourselves to drift into habits of extravagance or carelessness in the perservation of our health? In short, can we write down the past half year in terms of real progress or, in all truthfulness, must we set them down in what business calls "red figures"?

General economic conditions at this time are such that it behooves all of us to make the most of our time and money. The situation calls for strict attention to business upon the part of everyone. It is a time when we should eliminate waste, settle down to work, and do whatever we can within the bounds of good judgment to help restore the country to normal prosperity. One of the most propitious aspects of current times lies in the fact that people are developing more intensive thrift habits. We can not overlook the fact that we not only owe it to ourselves to do whatever we can to promote our own personal welfare but we have duties and obligations we should spend, how much of our income we should spend, how much we should save, are matters of individual circumstance but under no conditions are we ever justified in violating the practices of thrift.

Let us hope that those among the thousands who will read this message there will be many who will accept as worthy of attention the suggestions that at this half yearly period it is proper for all of us to take stock of our personal progress.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Modern Apartments.

Has New York gone Indian?

Many-storied, terraced apartment houses accommodating 1,200 or more people were erected centuries ago by the Pueblo Indians of the American southwest, says Neil M. Judd, of Washington, D. C., who will describe the rise of North America's most highly developed Indian civilization in an illustrated address before the National Education association convention meeting in Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, July 2.

These Indian apartment houses rose from a central court in a series of steps and terraces. Existing Pueblos in the southwest continue the ancient art, but modern Zuni and Hopi houses are poor specimens compared to the many-roomed, symmetrical mansions their ancestors built a thousand years ago.

Pueblo Indians of New Mexico were the master architects of the new world, declares Mr. Judd, who, as leader of National Geographic society expeditions and as curator of American archeology at the national museum, has traced the rise of the tribles from the time when they were primitive nomads about the era of Christ's birth.

Tree rings, masonry, bits of broken pottery and turquoise ornaments, comprise the difficult "literature" which National Geographic society expeditions discovered and studied, especially at the ruins of the greatest of all pueblos, Pueblo Bonito in Chaco canyon. The Pueblo Indians had no written language so the explorer had to read the dates of the building's construction, occupation and final abandonment in tree rings of beam logs. He had to learn the customs of the people from bits of pottery and objects found in the ruins and to discover their knowledge of architecture from study of remaining masonry.

The prize of the pueblo researches is a turquoise necklace found at Pueblo Bonito. It has three strands of matched beads, numbering altogether more than 2,400 beads.

NORWICH MILITARY COMPANIES WILL GO TO NIANTIC ON SATURDAY

There is activity now at the state armory on McKinley avenue with the two local companies of the 192d Field Artillery, Connecticut National Guard, in the preparations for departing on Saturday for the two weeks tour of encampment duty at Camp Trumbull, Niantic. The regiment is commanded by Col. Mogens M. Mogensen.

This will be the first camp for the regiment in this state, as in former years it has gone to Camp Devens, Mass., Camp Eustis, Va., and at Tobyhanna, Pa. It is expected that most of the training period will be spent in solving tactical problems, each problem extending over two days.

Sunday, July 13, will be a special day at camp as the regiment will celebrate its organization anniversary with an historical pageant.

The two Norwich units of the regiment are Battery B and First Battalion headquarters. Other companies are in New London, Danielson, Danbury and Stamford, making a total of about 700 men who will be in camp.

Orders are for the two Norwich companies to leave the armory here Saturday about 7:30 a. m., d. s. t. The convoy which will go over the road from here to Niantic will consist of four tractor-drawn howitzers, four tractor-drawn caissons, a reel cart, instrument caisson, several trucks, a rolling kitchen and a water cart.

An advance detail in charge of Lieut. White, which will consist of the kitchen in charge of Sergeant Malcolm, and another detail to put up tents, will leave the armory earlier in the morning. As the tractors make only about four miles an hour on the road, it will probably be after the middle of the afternoon before the companies reach Niantic. The kitchen detail is to prepare a meal for dinner at Niantic and bring it back to meet the companies at some point along the line of march.

Battery B has its full complement of 65 men and is officered by Capt. Meredith Lee, 1st Lieut. Harry W. House and 2nd Lieut. Andrew M. White. First Battalion headquarters company also has its full complement of 29 men, its officers being Capt. William R. Denison and 1st Lieut. Carl M. Young. First Lieut. Ulmer M. Jewett of the battalion staff also joins the regiment at camp.

STORRS FACULTY GIVES APPROVAL TO ADMINISTRATION OF PRESIDENT WORKS

STORRS, July 1.—(AP)—The administration of Dr. Alan W. Works, who recently resigned as president of Connecticut Agricultural college, was endorsed today by the faculty of the college at a special meeting.

Dr. Works, who will leave the college on Aug. 1, said in a formal statement issued with the announcement of his resignation that he was not in sympathy with the state's policy of emphasizing the agricultural aspects of the college curriculum at the expense of the humanities. He also said at the time that the state's political system was such that he could not expect to see his policies realized within the near future.

In addition to endorsing Dr. Works' administration, the faculty today expressed the hope that the next head of the college would continue the program begun by the resigned president.

Approval of Dr. Works' program was contained in a letter which the faculty voted to send to him. The letter read, in part:

"We deeply regret the early and abrupt termination of your administration. Before you leave us we desire to express our approval of what you have already accomplished and our earnest hope that your successor will be chosen with the intent that he shall in his own way carry forward his work with energy in continuing the progressive policies which you have outlined. This we feel is of tremendous importance; what you have done must not be undone.

"We have rejoiced in your open-minded and unbiased consideration of the problems of the college, your willingness to discuss any and all questions which we cared to bring to you, and your fearless and explicit presentation of your own opinion and plan. We approve your practice of meeting directly the members of the staff in departmental conference; we are grateful for your wise decision to make new appointments after consulting us who might in any way be concerned.

"No one could have been more definitely committed to the view that the responsibility for determining the scope of the institution lies with the people of the state; none more insistent that the money appropriated should be wisely and economically expended—these points have naturally had our support, for they seem to us matters of common honesty.

"We have seen with enthusiasm your determination to fight anything, whether in the internal management or external relationship of the college, which threatened to subordinate the interest of education to administrative inertia or political expediency.

"Your active efforts toward remedying the deficiencies of our library, your plan for making the curricula more flexible and better adjusted to the varying needs of the individual—these and other changes are examples of what must continue here if the college and those who work in it are to attain their greatest usefulness to the public."

Dr. Works will return to the University of Chicago in the fall as head of the department of higher education.

LUCIER OUTPITCHES NEVINS IN MOUND DUEL IN CITY LEAGUE

The game at the campus last night was an official league contest and what's more it was a good one, in fact the best of the year. Despite the talk of one team being unable to play and yarns of exhibition contests filling the air, the Royals and Italians showed as scheduled and in one of the sweetest pitching duels ever seen here in twilight ball, Lefty Lucier outhurled Eddie Nevins, giving the Italians a 1 to 0 verdict.

The two boys were very tight with their hits, Lefty giving three and Nevins two. The former, however, struck out eight against Eddie's four and did not give a walk while the Royal artist free ticketed one.

The lone run of the game came in the second inning and was the result of neatly executed squeeze play. Yerrington opened the inning with a walk and on Dorsey's two base drive to right went all the way to third. Gauthier struck out and Pete Tombari, the senior member of the family, came to bat. After taking a strike Pete laid the second pitched ball down the first base line and Yerrington romped home unmolested.

Bargnesi closed the inning, going out, Cummings to Koziersky.

The Royals threatened but once during the entire game, putting men on second and third in the first inning with none away. Koziersky, in the leadoff position got on when Ray Yerrington juggled his easy grounder and went all the way to third when Pete Tombari threw Reardon's bunt into the first base bleachers. Reardon went to second on the heave. Lucier then bore down, striking out Burelle and Simcox after making Hamil pop to Gauthier.

Dorsey's two bagger in the second was the longest safe clout of the game, Pete Tombari of the Italians, Fontaine, Burelle and Cummings, all Royals, being the other safe hitters. The score:

Koziersky,1b	3	0	6	0	1	Arico,1b	3	0	4	0	0

Tonight's Game.

The champion Smoke Shop team, which a week ago won its first victory of the season at the expense of the Italians after losing to the Thermos Bottlers and Polish Citizens, gets into action again tonight, opposing the Ideals at the campus.

Having shaken clear of the jinx, which camped on their trail with the opening of the season, the Smokers are confident that they will make it two straight tonight and move closer to the top of the league ladder.

Although they have yet to win their first game, the Ideals are a real dangerous team and are apt to cause the West Siders plenty of trouble. Manager Bernard has promised to have all of his men on hand for the game and will send Buck Shahan, Montville speed atist, to the hill for the first time. Magnan will be the probable Smoker starter.

MASTRO WINS VERDICT OVER TAYLOR IN 10 RDS.

DETROIT, July 1—(AP)—Earl Mastro, Chicago featherweight, won a referee's decision over Bud Taylor, of Terre Haute, Ind., in a ten round bout at the Michigan state fair grounds tonight. Mastro weighed 124; Taylor 125.

It was a clean cut victory.

Mastro's speedy two-fisted attack had Taylor puzzled throughout most of the rounds and the Chicago youngster was able to keep out of the way of most of Taylor's powerful swings. There were no knockdowns.

In the third round Taylor was warned by Referee Elmer (Slim) McClelland after a blow which the official thought was low. Another of Taylor's blows appeared low in the fourth but Mastro disregarded it as he continued his attack on the veteran's head, using both hands.

In the later rounds Taylor tried to assume the offensive but Mastro easily eluded his attacks.

NORWICH TEAMS HAVE BETTER OF NEW LONDON

Another test, the fifth of the season, by the way, of the brand of baseball played in Norwich and New London, will be made Fourth of July afternoon at Mercer field when the J. B. Martin team of this city meets the New London Kaceys, leaders of the New London City league. So far, Norwich has won three of the four tests.

The first came when the Greeneville A. C. with Lefty Lucier pitching, blanked the Fort Trumbull Stars. Then Greeneville was beaten by the Boys club in New London only to turn the trick in the return game in this city. Last Sunday the Italian club trimmed the Fort Trumbull Stars. In the meantime, the Martinmen had taken the measure of the Kaceys, inflicting the only defeat of the season on this team that is making a runaway of the New London league race.

These victories being turned in by the senior teams are helping to heal some of the wounds caused by the two Bulkeley victories over N. F. A. the past season.

AMATEURS FURNISH PLENTY OF ACTION AT DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 1.—Amateur boxers figuring in eight bouts tonight in the first outdoor card ever held here, demonstrated that they furnish more action than professionals usually do. Threatening weather kept the attendance down at the new North street arena but those who were on hand got their money's worth and more from the show.

In the first bout, Kid Brouillard, of Danielson, gained a decision over Danny Roy, of Worcester, in a bout that was very even. Roy weighed in at 101, Brouillard at 101½. Leo Paradise, of Moosup, lost to Ray Landry, of Danielson, by a knockout, after two minutes and 40 seconds of the first round. It was a slugging match. Landry weighed 126 and Paradise 124.

Kid Forstier of North Grosvenordale won after a flash exhibition against John Scott, of Worcester, in a bout that lasted only 2 minutes, and 4 seconds of the first round. It was a whirlwind while it lasted. Scott went down for part of a count and got up, but was so near gone that the referee stopped the affair. Weights were Forstier 112½ and Scott 111.

Kid Frisco, of Webster, got a decision over Larry Wakely, of Moosup, after two minutes and 40 seconds of the second round. This shaped up as a fine and fast bout until Wakely began to take a licking and began pulling "stunts" that were reminiscent of Gus Sonnenberg's flying tackles. The referee stopped the affair in the second round. The weights were: Frisco 121½, Wakely 130½. The decision went to Frisco.

Big Boy Cote, Moosup, lost to Ernesft Jully, Danielson, in the midst of the second round when Cote indicated to the referee, Frankie Portell, of Hartford, that he had enough of the affair after a fast mixup.

It was announced from the ring that another card of amateur bouts will be held in two weeks.

MUCH INTEREST IN WAUREGAN OLD TIMERS GAME

WAUREGAN, July 1.—Big league ball may have its followers, but for pure enjoyment there is nothing to equal a meeting of Old-Timers. And remember this is to be a real game, with live players, square umpires, newly rolled diamond, and all that is essential for fast play. When Jewett City of 1900, and the Wauregan Grays of the same year meet on the Fourth for an old home day there will be hundreds on hand to cheer and condone. Outfield flies will be taken care of by Pete Raymond, Bill Gagnon and Henry Leach for the Grays, and by Shea, Raff and Robertson for the City; infield bunts and grounders by Farrell, Smith, Fields and Hogan for the Grays; and by Watt, Williams, Ritchie and Willis for the City; Burns will pitch and Fields catch for the local team, with Moore and Robinson as battery for the City.

Every old time ball player in the county is invited to be on hand at 10 a. m., to enjoy the fun. Fitchville A. C. and the present Grays will hold the limelight in the afternoon, while dancing will prevail among the lovers of harmony. The committee in charge deserve much credit for this excellent opportunity to enjoy the Fourth.

MASSIE MILLER OFF FOR NATIONAL GOLF TOURNAMTNT

Massie B. Miller, professional at the Norwich Golf club, left early this morning by automobile for Minneapolis where he will compete in the National open golf tournament, the biggest golfing event of the season. Mr. Miller will be accompanied as far as Indianapolis by Miss Geraldine Enos, who will stay with Mr. Miller's parents while he is at the tournament.

Massie finished in 19th place in the 1929 open at the Winged Foot club at Mamaroneck last year and did not have to qualify for the tournament at Interlachen this year. The first round will be played on July 10th with the second round on the 11th and the final 36 holes on the 12th.

Stewart Outpoints Sparks

CHICAGO, July 1—(AP)—Jackie Stewart, 123, Louisville, Ky., outpointed Ward Sparks, 120 1-2, Detroit, in an eight round match tonight. In another eight rounder, Patsy Pollock, Winnipeg, Canada, outpointed Frankie Burns, Milwaukee.

The Gods of Fistiana have spoken. —there is no foul. So ruled the New York boxing commission yesterday.

What a jolt it must have given the good old Marquis of Queensberry, in his peaceful sleep, to have these czars of boxing tumble one of the traditions into the dust.

The commission has declared that hereafter there will be no fouls in the ring, and every boxer must protect himself with enough paraphenalia to assure his safety.

This decree of the boxing gods bids fair to revolutionize the supposedly honorable sport of fisticuffs. But at the same time it will give the horde of suckers a run for their money.

You can buy your tickets to see a couple of palookas box and be assured that you may see anything from simple assault to mayhem and murder.

Under the old regime the regulation ring attire was trunks and shoes but now it may include a suit of armor, bullet-proof vests, baseball shin-guards, hobnail shoes, and the commission may rule later that six-shooters and hand-grenades are permissible protective equipment.

With the abolishment of the foul a boxer can kick his opponent in the shins, bite his ears, and otherwise assault him in the name of sport. And if the opponent goes down in agony a heartless referee will count him out.

And they bar bull fighting as cruel sport in this country. The only pastime where we supposed there were no fouls was in that playful little game of wrestling.

But the boxers have brought it on themselves and now they'll have to take their medicine. Anyway the fans are going to get something for their money.

We see where Sparta is going to build an airport in honor of the Hunter boys. If they start now they may get it completed by the time the boys are ready to land and dedicate it that way.

BROUILLARD MAIN BOUT AT WESTERLY TONIGHT

The St. Michael's Council, K. of C., No. 2497, will run their fourth outdoor boxing show of the season at their open air arena on Stillman avenue, Westerly tonight. Six bouts have been arranged for the card including an 8 round final, two six round semi-finals and three four round preliminaries.

The main bout will feature Dynamite Lou Brouillard of Worcester, and Rudy Marshall of Waterbury. These boys, two of the most promising welters in New England will clash for the second time tonight, but what the outcome of their fight will be is not known, as they engaged in one of the most hectic battles ever seen in Waterbury before their first fight had to be stopped because of a bad cut over Marshall's eye.

Teddy Hayes of Stamford will be stacked against a tough one when he clashes with Freddie Slade of Fall River.

Julio Rossi and Sid Taylor of the Coast Guard will clash in the other semi-final. Rossi is enjoying his best year since he started fighting, and in his last start turned in a very creditable performance in defeating Billy Euelle. Taylor a veteran of many battles is a smart boy with a kick in either hand, and he will give Rossi plenty to worry about in their bout.

In the curtain raiser Young Rochette will meet his most experienced rival when he meets Young Reese of Fall River. In his first three pro fights Rochette defeated three Westerly boys but he will have to travel to beat the clever Fall River boy.

Young Sposato and Phil Gingerella will be making their pro debuts on this card, Gingerella is drawing a big assignment in his bout, when he meets Young Mangual of New London.

Young Sposato and George Anderstars of New London will meet in the third four rounder. Both boys are willing mixers, and the odds are against this bout going the full four rounds. Anderstars has had many pro fights, while tonight's engagement will be only the second for Sposato.

DECISION GIVES BUCKLEY ESTATE TO 14 HEIRS

Three of the 17 people to whom Judge Arthur B. Calkins of the New London probate court gave a share in the estate of Daniel D. Buckley, late of New London, are cut out by a decision handed down by Judge Allyn L. Brown on an appeal from probate of the will. The appeal is denied. The appellants were William Buckley and Lawrence Buckley, who came here from Ireland to claim the full estate, alleging that they were cousins of Mr. Buckley. The estate was appraised at $33,590.60.

The probate court distributed the estate between 17 heirs (2nd cousins) while Judge Brown gives it to only 14 as follows: Lizzie Skinner Allen of Oakland, Calif.; Kate Skinner Gittere of Stockton, Calif.; Margaret Roberts Wright of San Francisco, Calif.; Mary Alice Roberts of Stockton, Calif.; Horace Skinner of Stockton, Calif.; Julia O'Keefe Cronin of Stockton, Calif.; Arthur O'Keefe, David O'Keefe, Jeremiah O'Keefe, Phillip O'Connell, James O'Connell, Elizabeth O'Connell Johnson, Jennie O'Connell Moore and Michael O'Connell, all of Stockton, Calif.

The three heirs who Judge Calkins gave a share, but which Judge Brown does not include in the distribution of the estate are Francis McDonnald Quinlan of Westerly, R. I.; Patrick McDonnald of Lindsay, Ontario, Can., and Catherine Morrison of Pawcatuck, Conn., executrix of the estate of Elizabeth McDonnald Morrison, late of Pawcatuck, Stonington, deceased.

Judge Brown in his memorandum of decision says:

This is an appeal from a decree of the probate court for the district of New London, ascertaining and finding the heirs and distributees, and ordering the distribution thereto, of the estate of Daniel D. Buckley, who died in New London intestate, Dec. 4, 1926.

Although a considerable mass of evidence, comprised of various certificates, affidavits and depositions, was submitted during the trial, all claimed of some significance as bearing upon the relationship between the various parties hereto and the intestate, it appears that the sole controverted question of fact is whether or not Patrick Buckley, the intestate's father, was the son of the appellants' great uncle, John Buckley. In support of their contention that such was the fact, the appellants rely upon the affidavit of the appellant Lawrence Buckley, to the effect that this is so "to the best of 'his' information and belief."

Per contra the appellees rely upon the undertaker's certificate issued upon the death of the intestate's father, Patrick Buckley, setting forth that his father's name was "Michael Buckley." In the light of the evidence above recited and upon all of the evidence in the case, it is my conclusion that the intestate's father was not the son of the appellants' great uncle, John Buckley. Upon this finding the appellants cannot prevail upon this appeal and are entitled to no distributive share of the estate of the intestate.

However, were a contrary conclusion reached upon the issue above referred to, still the appellants could not prevail. Their status in so far as their degree of consanguinity to the intestate is concerned would be identical with that of the appellees Quinland, McDonnald and Morrison. All of these parties are second counsels of the intestate, and are one degree further removed as next of kin than the other appellees who are children of the first cousins. In determining such status the rule of civil law is to be applied as provided in Chapter 146 of the public acts of 1921.

"Every possible case is determined readily by adding together the number of generations between the person in question and the common ancestor of himself and the decedent, and between the decedent and such ancestor."

The application of the rule which is so accurately, precisely and authoritatively stated, determines that the appellees Lizzie Skinner Allen, Kate Skinner Gittere, Margaret Roberts Wright, Mary Alice Roberts, Horace Skinner, Julia O'Keefe Cronin, Arthur O'Keefe, David O'Keefe, Jeremiah O'Keefe, Philip O'Connell, James O'Connell, Elizabeth O'Connell Johnson, Jennie O'Connell Moore, and Michael O'Connell are the next of kin of the intestate in the fifth degree removed, and that the appellants and the other appellees are such in the sixth degree removed. And see: 9 R. C. L. 39, paragraph 23 for explicit authority to the same effect. The authorities cited in this paragraph would seem to make clear that the appellants' contention that inasmuch as all the parties are "cousins," the finding of an ancestor common to all of them is an essential preliminary to the application of the rule called for by the statute, is without merit.

Since this is a preceding de novo in this court, the decree appealed from is ordered set aside, and a decree may be entered finding the 14 persons named in the preceding paragraph to be the heirs and distributes of the estate of the intestate Daniel D. Buckley and ordering the distribution of his estate to them in equal shares.

TERRACING OF FARM LAND HALTS OKLAHOMA EROSION

Work is under way in virtually every county under the direction of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college and county farm agents, says Harry B. Cordell, president of the state board of agriculture.

Holding that terracing is the only method of reclaiming land which is washing and will not now raise good crops, the last legislature stressed the importance of the work by passing almost unanimously a bill providing $10,000 with which to carry on a campaign among farmers.

A similar amount of money was appropriated by the federal depratment of agriculture and it is being expended now by Oklahoma A. and M. college.

NEW YORK COMMISSION DECIDES TO DO AWAY WITH THE FOUL RULING

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—The New York State Athletic commission solved the foul problem today. It decided there was no such animal.

Listening to the pleas of Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, and Young Al Singer, the "Bronx Beauty" who will battle him for the crown here July 17, the solemn fathers decided upon the most drastic action in its history to curb the curse that has fallen upon major fisticuffs. Singer and Mandell wanted a ruling that would prevent their match ending in a foul.

The commission, harassed by the growth of the foul plague and already the sponsors of the "Baumes" law of life suspension for a fourth low blow offender, decided to eliminate fouls entirely. Boxers will devise their own implements of protection, gain the approval of the commission, and then go into battle with the knowledge in mind that no matter what happens, no matter where the leather lands on their anatomies, there can be no claim of foul.

The commission wrote the following clause into Singer's and Mandell's contracts for the match:

"The parties of the first and second part agree to equip themselves with an abdominal guard of their own selection, the type to be approved by the commission, which will obviate the necessity of any foul claim being made during the contest. It is expressly understood that this contest is not to terminate by a foul as a protector selected by the boxers is in their own opinion sufficient protection to withstand any so-called low or illegal blow which might temporarily incapacitate either or both parties."

Satisfied then that what sauce for Singer and Mandel was also meat and drink for the rest of the profession, the commission decided to apply the same ruling to all fighters. The same clause will be written into all future fight contracts submitted to the commission. All fighters claiming foul in the future shall be promptly counted out.

The new ruling supplants a commission edict that failed utterly in its purpose of eliminating fouls. The solemn fathers voted to suspend a first offender for thirty days, a second offender sixty days, a third violator six months and a four-timer for life. The fouling fighter was to be paid only on the basis of the number of rounds completed. Then the commission waived this rule for the heavyweight title quarrel between Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey which ended in a foul and ruined the efficacy of the regulation.

Fouls have brought to an untimely ending a half dozen big matches here in the past few months. Phil Scott and Otto Von Porat started the vogue which continued through light heavyweight tilts between Larry Johnson and Maxie Rosenbloom, Johnson and Pete Latzo, among others, and wound up with Sharkey's fouling of Schmeling for the heavyweight title. In the meantime a cry of foul pervaded Sharkey's victory over Scott in Miami and just recently George Godfrey sunk Primo Canera with a low one in Philadelphia.

FITZSIMMONS PROVES MASTER OF LEAGUE LEADING CUBS

CHICAGO, July 1—(AP)—Fred Fitzsimmons checked the hitting of the Cubs in the second game of their series with the New York Giants today, holding them to eight hits and giving New York a 7 to 5 victory. All of Chicago's runs came on homers, two by Kiki Cuyler and one by Hack Wilson.

The Giants drove out 13 hits, including a homer by Travis Jackson, and sent Guy Bush to the showers in the fifth inning. Bob Osborn and Bud Teachout followed on the mound for Chicago and allowed only two runs, one of which Bush put on base.

Wilson's homer was his 23rd of the season, giving him the undisputed National league lead. Cuyler's total is twelve. The score:

ROYAL WELCOME PLANNED FOR WORLD'S BEST GOLFER

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—By train and by airplane, up from the land where the golfers grow, came 250 beaming Georgians today to see Atlanta's most prominent citizen get a Broadway welcome.

On the excursion steamer Mandalay they'll go down the bay tomorrow and watch Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., British amateur and open golf champion, taken from the Liner Europa aboard New York city's welcoming yacht, the Macom.

Up "The Trail of Glory" where the ticker-tape flies, from the Battery to the city hall, they will follow him to stand cheering in the background while Mayor James J. Walker tells him that New York is proud of him, too.

And then—after New York gets through with him—they'll take young Bobby over to the Hotel Vanderbilt tomorrow night for the kind of welcome-home dinner that only one's home folks know how to give.

"Tell him I can whistle now."

MISS JACOBS ELIMINATED BUT MRS. MOODY WINS

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 1—(AP)—The unexpected downfall of Helen Jacobs, America's second ranking tennis player, at the hands of Cecilie Aussem of Germany featured play in the British championships today but failed to prevent the United States from landing two of its representatives in the semi-final round of the women's singles.

Miss Jacobs, sadly off her game and lacking in stamina, was eliminated in the quarter-finals in straight sets to the tune of 6-2, 6-1, as the little German star stuck to her guns, played steady tennis and allowed the American to beat herself.

As though to make up for Miss Jacob's defeat, Elizabeth Ryan, veteran Californian player who makes her home in England, came through to the semi-finals along with the defending champion, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, Fraulein Aussem and Madame Rene Mathieu, who holds Suzanne Lenglen's old place as the first ranking feminine player of France.

ALLENTOWN WINS FIRST HALF OF E. L. CHAMPIONSHIP

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 1—(AP)—Manager Joe Bush's Allentown Buffaloes won the first half championship of the Eastern league today, defeating Bridgeport's Bears, 7 to 4. The victory marked Allentown's 14th win in the last 16 games played by the team, the two contests lost by the Buffaloes in that spurt being extra inning games.

Today's victory gave Allentown 50 victories and 34 defeats for the first half of the season.

Norman Plitt, bespectacled right hander, started the game for Allentown, but when Bridgeport knotted the score in the 8th on Chief Nason's triple he was lifted in favor of Eddie Pipgras, who finished out the game and got credit for his second victory in two days.

Spike Hunter started on the mound for the Bears, but was knocked out in the eighth inning. "Bullet Joe" Bush's triple sewing up the game for Allentown.

BERTAZZOLO FRACTURES HIS THUMB IN TRAINING

BOSTON, July 1—(AP)—Riccardo Bertazzolo, giant Italian heavyweight, was forced to call off two bouts today after he fractured his left thumb while training for his contest with Tom Heeney, of New Zealand here next Monday. The other match was with Otto Von Porat in Chicago on July 16. Bertazzolo will be out of action for at least six weeks.

Meanwhile, Eddie Mack, Argonne A. A. promoter, has opened negotiations for a suitable opponent for Heeney. He expects to get either Ernie Schaaf, Joe Monte, Jack Gagnon or Marty Gallagher.

A-N Team To Be Strong.

Mr. Editor: After seeing the write-up in Tuesday's Bulletin, the manager of the J. B. Martin team thinks that his team will be too strong for the Army and Navy team. All I have to say is that he had better strengthen his own team instead of giving advice to me. I will have a pitcher who will easily hold his "hard hitters" as he calls them. As for strengthening my outfield—well, I have a harder hitting and better fielding outfit in Lacroix, Greene and Finn than Manager Murphy will ever be able to produce. In reply to Manager Murphy, I repeat the old saying, "Brag is a good old dog but Hold Fast is better."

RODERICK MOLLEUR,
Manager.

Nebo-Terris Bout Postponed

CARDS SCORE ELEVEN TIMES IN THIRD INNING

ST. LOUIS, July 1—(AP)—The Cardinals piled up eleven runs against Brooklyn in the third inning today and gave the Robins a 15-7 trouncing in the first game of their series. Watson Clark, who started for Brooklyn, and Dudley and Elliott were pounded for nine hits in the big inning and three errors helped give the Cardinals a commanding lead.

Jess Haines pitched well for St. Loius and held the Robins well in hand although he gave eleven hits. The only serious Brooklyn blow was Johnny Frederick's home run with two on base in the ninth inning.

The defeat kept the Robins from moving back into first place ahead of the Chicago Cubs, who lost to New York. The score:

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

Beginning today patrons of the Palace theatre will be given a rare treat, a treat that will also be offered on Thursday and Friday, for this popular Norwich theatre is offering a double feature program which is the last word in suspense, romance and variety.

The first of these pictures is "Sweet Mama," and it is everything its name implies, and a lot more. Starting with a little group of burlesque girls huddled for warmth around a stove in the waiting room of a small town railway station, the scene sweeps into a mighty city, where one of the little actresses, Goldie, becomes enmeshed in one of the most develish plots ever hatched in the sinster underworld. This is a grand tangle of love, hate and crime, but in the end, love rides roughshod over the forces arrayed against it. The stars of this picture are Alice White, whom everybody knows, and that amazing young man, that new star of the screen, David Manners. Every girl in Norwich should see and hear David Manners. They may learn a thing of two about men from him.

The other feature is "On the Border," a racy, wholesome drama of the great southwest which stars the greatest animal hero of the screen, Rin-Tin-Tin along with the picquant and beautiful Mexican star, Armida, who is familiar to all lovers of Warner Brothers' classics. This is not an ordinary dog story in which the whole picture is given up to circus tricks of the dog. It is a pulsing flesh and blood story of real human emotions, and the reason for Rin-Tin-Tin's presence in the picture is that he is necessary to the plot.

Seldom have even Warner Brothers filmed a picture with so much appeal as is contained in this magnificent drama. Tonight the winner of Palace popularity contest will be made known from the Palace stage. This will be a gala night for the lucky girls. Be here—see the fun.

Mothers Enthusiastic Over Modern Laxative

Children like its flavor
Doctors approve its action

Unusual crossness, coated tongue, loss of appetite—mothers know how often these are signs that intestinal sluggishness is sapping the energy of their children. Wise mothers take no chances with old-fashioned cathartics. They are turning by thousands to Feen-a-mint as a safe, dependable corrective for constipation.

Children love the fresh, mint flavor of this modern chewing gum laxative which never has to be forced down unwilling throats as do old-fashioned cathartics. Mothers give it to them with the approval of their doctors because "Feen-a-mint works on the important principle of uniform internal distribution.

Because children chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While children chew this delicious bit of gum the laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage, it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint one time or decrease it the next. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the ideal health laxative to keep growing bodies regular. Get a package at any drug store.—Adv.

ACTIVE ISSUES LOST 2 TO 4 POINTS IN YESTERDAY'S MARKET

NEW YORK, July 1.—(AP)—The stock market ran out of fuel for the rally in today's late trading and landed on lower ground. Not until the leaders had been pushed 3 to 15 points above last week's lows, however, did the upward movement lose its momentum; but when the energy supplied by short covering had been expended prices soon slipped off and the close was 2 to 4 points off in the active utilities and industrials. Rails fared better, holding 1 to 5 points of larger gains made during the forenoon.

The rising trend continued in all groups throughout the earlier hours, but by early afternoon the market acted tired and bears hastened to take advantage of the dullness.

Measured by the price indices, the market lost only one-quarter of the Saturday and Monday advance. Utilities and industrials yielded about half of their gains, but the strength of the rails, which were under extensive accumulation until late afternoon, cut down the decline for the general list.

The carrier shares rose 2 to 8 points in the morning. U. S. Steel sold as high as 161 3-8, or 1 3-4 above the Monday close. Atchison crossed 214 and New York Central 160. Montgomery Ward rose a point on publication of its June sales figures, which showed an advance of 8.2 per cent over the same month last year.

Shortly after noon, however, the market appeared bought out. General Electric and Westinghouse showed signs of heaviness, and were soon joined by American Telephone, American Can, North American, Johns Manville, and other issues to which the market looks for leadership. Prices sagged steadily throughout the last hour and final quotations were around the lowest of the day. U. S. Steel finished at 156 7-8, off 2 3-4.

Banking statistics were favorable. Commercial loans made by reporting federal reserve member banks showed a gain for the second consecutive week, bringing the total increase for the fortnight to $170,000,000. Security loans decreased, while banks' investments rose substantially.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 1.—(AP)—An extensive list of rails and United States government issues profited most from the greater activity and improved tone of the bond market, today.

Some of the support came from a reinvestment demand. The last hour saw turnovers stepped up sharply and closing prices of rails were the best in several days.

Gains from 1-4 to 3-4 of a point were made by many issues in the carrier group. Convertible and warrant issues were more stable, showing a rising tendency throughout the day which some failed to hold. Secondary and speculative domestic issues still suffered from the irregularity which has marked their course for some time. Foreign bonds were firm, although activity was confined to a few issues. Prominent in the advance were Erie 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s, New York Central 3 1-2s, Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, Boston & Maine 5s, Baltimore & Ohio gold 4s, Canadian National 5s, St. Paul 5s. Among less active issues several large gains on large accumulations resulted. Lake Shore Michigan & Southern 5s rose 3-4 of a point, Louisville & Arkansas 5s gained more than a point and Southern Pacific, Oregon 4 1-2s, 1-2.

Gains of 2 1-2 points by American Telephone & Telegraph 4 1-2s, and New Haven 6s were the best of the convertibles, while Philadelphia Reading 6s lost the same amount.

BOND SALES

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—Treasury receipts for June 28 were $6,533,749.04; expenditures $6,121,274.47; balance $342,469,309.68.

The Fidelity Trust company, of New York today changed its name to the Marine Midland Trust company, of New York and increased its capital and surplus from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. The change in name was made to identify the bank more closely with the Marine Midland group of sixteen New York state banks with which it became affiliated last April.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—The more active curb market shares turned downward during the latter part of today's session, in sympathy with the new bear drive on the big board. The curb worked moderately higher during the morning, and the less active issues retained their gains, so that plus and minus signs were evenly distributed at the close.

Activity was concentrated in a handful of the electric power and natural gas issues. Electric Bond & Share was heavily traded, accounting for about 10 per cent of the day's turnover of 564,400 shares. This stock rose 2 points during the morning, getting back above 80 again, but closed at 77, off more than 2 points. United Gas new rose 1 1-4 points, then slipped back and closed unchanged.

American Super-Power was also an active feature, selling up a point, then losing its gain. American & Foreign Power warrants, American Gas & Electric and Electric Power & Light warrants lost about 2 to 4 points. Midland Natural Gas mounted more than 3 points in a few sales.

Oils were strong early in the day. Although preliminary estimates of last week's crude production indicated another upturn, the Texas Pipe Line law which went into effect recently, is expected to help matters in that state, and the situation is said to be well under control in California and Oklahoma. Gulf Oil rose more than 4 points, then lost its gain. Humble closed up 3. Houston Oil new, primarily a gas issue, lost a fraction in active trading.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 1—(AP)—Surprising scantiness of the amount of wheat delivered on July contracts both in Chicago and Liverpool gave a big jolt to wheat traders today. Sharply higher prices ensued, although this was the first day of the new crop year and ordinarily the rush of wheat from the harvest fields at this time is apt to make wheat appear over-plentiful rather than the reverse. Indications today, however, were that exporters had turned suddenly to the buying side of the market, and that growers were acting on federal farm board suggestions to hold wheat back for higher prices.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1 3-4 at 2c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 5-8 at 1 5-8c advanced, oats 3-4c off to 5-8c up, and provisions varying from 7c setback to 12c gain.

NEW YORK, July 1—(AP)—Steel ingot production for the past week, was around 64 per cent of rated capacity, against a shade better than 66 per cent in the previous week and 68 per cent two weeks ago, Dow, Jones and Company, reports. Output of the U. S. Steel corporation was a shade over 69 per cent, compared with better than 71 per cent in the preceding week and a fraction above 72 per cent two weeks ago. The report says that prospects are that for this week operations will be under 65 per cent, as it is planned to close down mills where possible during the July 4 holiday.

Holders of U. S. Steel corporation common stock on the date for the closing of the books for the March dividend totaled 129,626, an increase of 5,-487 in three months.

Inquiries among brokerage houses today indicated that very few, if any, would follow the example of Harvey Fisk and Sons, one of the older but less active houses, in discontinuing the carrying of marginal accounts. This action is regarded as merely a switching from brokerage to investment business. It is pointed out that approximately 80 per cent of the business done on the stock exchange is done on margin.

Today a great fat robin came and looked at Baby Jean
  Through the lattice of her play-yard underneath the apple tree;
Then quoth the great fat robin; "Now I think it very mean
  Not to let this baby girl out to play around with me.
I have many things of interest that a little girl could do,
  And I'm sure it must be tiresome always playing in a cage."
So the great fat robin hopped a funny hop or two—
  But he found she wasn't watching, and he flew off in a rage.

Then a buzzy bumble-bee came to look at Baby Jean
  As she sat there in the play-yard with her dollies all around;
And that bold, bad bumble-bee straightway flew between
  The lattice of her play-yard with a horrifying sound,
And he buzzed, buzzed, buzzed 'round the little girlie's head
  While he vented his opinion of a baby in a cage,
Until he found that Jean was cooing softly to herself, instead
  Of listening to his grumbling—and He flew off in a rage.

Then the Sleepy Sandman came and looked in at Baby Jean
  As she sat there playing through the drowsy afternoon,
And he called all his fairies, with their wings of silver sheen,
  And he gave them this order: "Have her sleeping very soon!"
So the sleepy-fairies tiptoed through the lattice of her yard
  As Baby Jean sat playing underneath the apple tree . . .
Jean saw them all as butterflies, with wings all silver-barred,
  And, a moment later she was sleeping just as sound as sound could be.

THE CITY'S CROWN

What makes a city great? Huge piles of stone
Heaped heavenward? Vast multitudes who dwell
Within wide circling walls? Palace and throne
And riches past the count of man to tell,
And wide domain? Nay, these are empty husk!
True glory dwells where glorious deeds are done,
Where great men rise whose names athwart the dusk
Of misty centuries gleam like the sun!
In Athens, Sparta, Florence, 'twas the soul
That was the city's bright immortal part;
The splendor of the spirit was their goal;
Their jewel, the unconquerable heart!
So may the city that I love be great Till every stone shall be articulate.
—By William Dudley Foulke.

Teacher—What a peculiar question.

Willie—Well, they'll ask me when I get home.—Boston Post.

"Well?"

"I want to get grapefruit in the public eye."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A curious little boy was watching a car being loaded at the station, and later inquired: "Why do they call it a shipment when it goes in a car and a cargo when it goes in a ship?"—Santa Fe Magazine.

"Do you think mathematics is a hard study?"

"Very.. My doctor ordered me to drink only three times a day and you can't think how often I miscalculate."—Moustique Charleroi.

Constable—Let me see your driving license.

Girl—Well, as a matter of fact, officer, I don't happen to have it on me, but if it will save you any bother I can assure you it's very much like any other jolly old driving license.—Humorist.

Orator—"On the surface things are often right, but it is when we explore the depths of things that we see the deceptions of our fellow-creatures."

So, at the suggestion of the pastor, the church began operating an oil and gasoline service station. All the profits therefrom are to be used to reduce the church debt.

SMITH HELD FOR TRIAL—TOOK SHOPPER'S PURSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 1—Thomas Smith was charged with theft. Probable cause being found, he was held in bail of $1,000 for trial at the next term of the superior court and being unable to obtain a surety on his bond was remanded to jail for trial. Smith was in a Main street store Saturday night at the same time as was Mrs. Geo. Chapman, 11 Coleman street. When Mrs. Chapman placed her purse containing $90 on a counter, while she inspected a prospective purchase Smith watched his opportunity and grabbing the wallet hastily left the store. Going to a building in the rear of the Firemen's lunch room, 231 Bank street, Smith removed the money and after leaving the purse on a table, retreated. He was seen to pocket the money, however by an employe of the restaurant and the latter informed the police. As Mrs Chapman had already reported her loss officers started a search for Smith. He was found in a North Bank street restaurant and he had $86 in his clothing when searched.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 1—The proprietors of the home-brew resorts in that section of the city, known as Fort Neck and comprising many a thirst-quenching rendezvous on Walbach, Smith and Goshen streets, have formed a combine. As a result the prices of beer were boosted yesterday as was revealed when patrons visited the resorts last night. All proprietors have agreed that in future bottled beer shall be dispensed at a price of 20 cents per bottle and wherever draught beer is sold the price will be 10 cents per glass. Heretofore the bottled beer was sold for 10 cents, while five cents was charged for the draught beer. The dealers informed patrons that the raise in prices was the result of the expense the former have been put to of late because of the numerous raids.

Before the firemen arrived the driver, together with several passing autoists succeeding in removing much of the freight on the truck to a location of safety. The fire, it is believed originated when one of the brake bands became overheated.

JAIL AND FINE WITH COSTS GIVEN FOR BRUTAL ATTACK

Arthur A. Church, stationed at the submarine base, was in the police court this morning, charged with breach of the peace and trespassing upon property of the New Haven railroad. He was defended by counsel, but Judge Daniel M. Cronin, in view of the circumstances attending Church's arrest, together with the unwarranted attack upon William C. Smith, car inspector in the employ of the railroad and residing at 73 Blydenburg avenue, sentenced the sailor to 30 days in jail and imposed a fine of $100 and costs. Church was in the vicinity of Walbach street Friday night and had been drinking. He went to where employes of the railroad park their cars and there entered Smith's auto. The owner discovered that his car was occupied and ordered Church to alight. After a harsh exchange of words, Church stepped to the ground and then tried to administer a thrashing to the car inspector. When Church was knocked down he used brutal methods, for he quickly incapacitated Smith and then fled through the railroad yard. Smith went to the railroad tower, where he made known his experience, and the office of the railroad was notified. Special Agent John Anderson and Patrolmen Braxton Hill, Arthur Feeley, Frank Philopena and George Goldberg were sent to the railroad yard and Goldberg found Church hiding in the rear of the Humphrey-Cornell Co. building, Sparyard street. BOOZE MADE AN AUTO THIEF OF ED. GOODNOW, WATERFORD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 1.—Edward Goodnow, Station 12, Waterford, was arrested this noon by Sergeant John Courtney, charged with the theft of an automobile owned by Anthony Musco, of 118 Pequot avenue. He will be in the police court tomorrow. Musco parked his Overland car in front of his residence late yesterday afternoon and about 7 o'clock when he went to use it, discovered that it had been stolen. Goodnow had entered it and driven away. During the night Goodnow went to his home and parked the car in his yard. When he awoke this morning, Goodnow decided to make amends for his act by returning the machine. When he found that the car belonged to Musco, Goodnow, accompanied by his wife went to the Musco home after the former had communicated with a member of the Musco family, stating that he desired to make arrangements for the return of the auto. The police were informed of Goodnow's intention and Sergeant Courtney, who went to the house, arrived there at the same time as did Goodnow with the result that the Waterford man was arrested. Goodnow explains his act by saying that he was intoxicated yesterday afternoon and that he did not realize that he had stolen an auto until a short time before he drove to his home. When he arrived in Waterford his wife inquired as to the owner of the auto and then information was sought as to the owner, in an endeavor to prevent Goodnow's prosecution.

BUCKINGHAM CLAIMS STORRS COLLEGE COMPLIES WITH LAW

Charges made Saturday by Dr. George Alan Works, retiring president of the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs, that the institution is not complying with federal statutes governing such institutions, are not well founded, in the opinion of S. McLean Buckingham of Watertown, state commissioner of agriculture, and an ex-officio member of the college board of trustees.

Dr. Works cited the Morrill act, which, he said, commits the state to as complete a development of extension, research, instruction in agriculture and instruction in the mechanic arts as the needs of the state require and its resources permit. The college, according to Dr. Works has been functioning in a fairly adequate manner as far as agriculture is concerned, but has not, in his opinion, met the requirements of federal and state acts as far as the mechanic arts are concerned.

Commissioner Buckingham, in expressing doubt that the college is not complying with the Morrill act, said he believed courses in the mechanic arts offered at the college might be made more attractive.

Dr. Works, according to Commissioner Buckingham, some time ago intimated to the executive committee of the trustees that the mechanic arts course at the college might be strengthened considerably to good advantage. No definite plan was placed before the trustees, according to Commissioner Buckingham. If some plan could be worked out for yielding a better return to both the state and the student, he might be inclined to favor a change, the commissioner said.

The mechanic arts course at the college is supposed to qualify the student in the engineering field in some of its several branches such as civil engineering. Dr. Albert B. Meredith, commissioner of education, said Sunday night that the courses offered by the state trade schools are not in any way parallel to those which should be offered at the college, since the trade schools are on the secondary school level.

The mechanic arts course at C. A. C. is being operated at a minimum of expense, and is just extensive enough to maintain face with the federal government and its status as a land grant college, it was said by a member of the board of trustees. As a result, when graduates come in contact with graduates of other colleges in their life work, they often find themselves handicapped in pursuing their profession, it was admitted.

That the mechanic arts course of the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs is purely a waste of money so far as practical results to the students is concerned, was the statement of another member of the board of trustees of the college Sunday night.

Bennett, Gertrude Brown, Effie Ladd and Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich. At the morning service the pastor preached on the theme: "A Nation Led By God," text Psalm 144.

CARPENTER MFG. CO. BUYS PLANT OF SILK MILL ON MECHANIC STREET

Through negotiations which were brought to a successful conclusion Tuesday, the Carpenter Manufacturing company, which has its factory on Newton street, has bought the mill property of the Schwarztenbach-Huber company on Mechanic street, which for many years has been operated as a silk mill. The Carpenter company will use the property for its own line of manufacture in shade and picture cord and hardware specialties, moving into the Mechanic street place from the Newton street property which will be disposed of, it is understood. The purchase price was not made known.

The silk mill property had not been in operation since about the first of March and negotiations for its purchase had been taken up some time ago, but had been practically dropped, it is understood, but were recently reopened through the influence of the chamber of commerce, acting through Secretary John Richardson. On Tuesday Clarence E. Carpenter and Ellis H. Thayer, treasurer and secretary respectively of the Carpenter company, went to New Haven, accompanied by Secretary Richardson of the chamber of commerce, and there met Otto Fraulicher, vice president of the Schwarztenbach-Huber Co., whose headquarters are in New Jersey. After a considerable time spent in negotiations terms were eventually reached for the purchase of the silk mill property by the Carpenter concern and papers were signed.

Treasurer Carpenter said Tuesday night that his company was very busy now, running on two shifts and would have to keep in operation up to the first of the year, so that they could not move from the Newton street factory till about that time. All the silk mill machinery in the Mechanic street place is to be taken out by the Schwartzenbach-Huber people as none of it will be available for use by the Carpenter company.

The main building of the silk mill property is a three story frame structure, 40 feet wide by 100 feet long, which will provide much more room than the Carpenter company has now, but Mr. Carpenter said he could not tell whether they would use all the floors or not. There are also two smaller brick buildings, with boiler and engine house.

It will be a source of much satisfaction to the business community that the West Side mill is to be removed from the inoperative list and is acquired by a Norwich company that has been a busy and growing concern with promise of further growth, which can be met with adequate facilities in the property it has acquired. While chamber of commerce officials have urged the importance of acquiring new industries, it is shown that they have cooperated effectively and successfully in placing one of the local well established industries in a fine new location.

WAS FORMERLY TELEPHONE EXCHANGE MANAGER HERE

George E. Stannard of West Haven, transfer clerk in the New Haven office of the Southern New England Telephone company, went on the retired list Monday, having been with the company for 48 years.

Mr. Stannard entered telephone service in May, 1882, as a day operator, that being the period when boys and not young women handled the switchboards of the company. Later he was exchange manager at Norwich, with the engineering department, and in 1895 he was transferred to the treasurer's office. In 1914 he was appointed transfer clerk of the company and has held that position since.

DIVORCE IS GRANTED FOR WIFE'S DESERTION

A former Jewett City resident, Joseph Thomas McGovern of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been given a divorce from Mary Noffie McGovern of Jewett City on the grounds of desertion, according to a decision handed down by Judge Allyn L. Brown and filed with Clerk John H. Walker of the superior court. The couple was married Aug. 25, 1924, and desertion was alleged since Feb. 9, 1926. Mrs. McGovern is to be presented at the September criminal term of the superior court on a statutory charge. She was arrested recently by the state police, charged with living with another man in Jewett City.

HAD 15 CALLS FOR FIRE DEPT. IN JUNE

The fire department responded to 15 calls in June, a decrease of 13 over the month of May, when there were 28. Eleven came in by telephone, two orally and two by bell, one of which was a false alarm from Box 37, Lafayette near Williams street. Two of the calls took the fire department over the city line for a double drowning at Occum flats and a drowning in Lebanon. The damage for the month was small.

SPECIALISTS TRYING TO SAVE DESSURREAULT'S SIGHT

Arthur J. DesSurreault of the Canterbury turnpike, Occum, who was practically blinded on June 16 when an unexpected explosion of dynamite blew a blast of gravel and dirt into his face and eyes, is now a patient at the Hartford hospital, having been removed from the W. W. Backus hospital, to which he was first taken. He is now under the care of eye specialists, who are endeavoring to save his eyesight. At first it was thought that the sight of both eyes would not be regained.

John Coffey of Occum, who was working with him on some blasting work at the Hilltop garage, had a quantity of grit thrown into his arms and legs, which kept him confined to his home. DesSurreault was attended by Dr. Leone LaPierre at the time of the accident, being taken to the Backus hospital for examination.

FINED FOR FAILING TO GRANT RIGHT OF WAY

Found guilty of a charge of failure to grant the right of way, which was substituted for the original charge of reckless driving, August Alber, 18, of R. F. D. No. 2, was fined $10 and costs in the city court Monday morning. His court bill was $28.06. He was the driver of the machine which sideswiped another operated by Andrew Hunter of Waterford at East Great Plain on June 14. His machine later crashed through the state highway fence and went over a 10-foot embankment at Ford's ice pond. One passenger in the car was slightly injured.

Middletown Man Fined

In the city court Monday morning Herbert Palmer, 23, of Middletown, was presented on a charge of failure to grant the right of way and fined $10 flat. He was the driver of one of the machines which came together at the corner of Smith and Hamilton avenues Sunday evening. The other car was operated by Christopher Troeger of No. 26 North A street, Taftville. The arrest was made by Officers Patrick Shahan and John Dunion.

While on his vacation, Mr. Cohen will take in a number of big league baseball games, especially the games in which the Brooklyn Robins appear, as this is his favorite team.

STATE CLOSES YEAR WITH $6,000,000 BALANCE ON HAND

The state of Connecticut ended a fiscal year at the close of business Monday with a balance on hand in the general fund of approximately $6,000,000, according to the estimate of Edward F. Hall, commissioner of finance and control. Exact figures on the balance were not available Monday, the most recent figures being those for the close of business June 26, which showed $6,279,694.37 in the general fund and a total balance of the combined general and highway funds of $8,684,484.23. On the corresponding date in 1929 the general fund balance was $3,540,116.28 and the combined balance was $5,924,555.72.

Of the approximately $6,000,000 balance in the general fund, only about $500,000 will really be an unencumbered balance, as of May 31 there was $5,439,912.46 unspent of appropriations made by the 1929 general assembly for the biennium which will end next June 30. This moeny will come from the balance in the general fund and will go for such projects as the new office building, the new hospital for the insane at Newtown and additions at Mansfield and other state institutions. In preparing budget estimates of income and expenditure for the present biennium, the board of finance and control estimated the income for each year of the period at $500,000 in excess of the expenditures, and, while this figure apparently is right for the year ended Monday, Commissioner Hall would make no prediction regarding the balance to be expected June 30, 1931.

Closed Superior Court Session

The superior court wound up its spring business here Monday and recessed for the summer. The court will resume sessions next September when the criminal side will conveue in this city.

HOUSE ENDORSES LAW ENFORCEMENT INQUIRY

Commission Is Voted $250,000 and a Reappropriation of $88,000 In Unexpended Funds — Resolution Adopted Authorizes Continuation of Unrestricted Law Enforce-Probe—Vote In Favor of Appropriation Was 272 to 41 —Senate May Take Final Action On Item Before Adjournment Today.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—By a substantial majority the house today endorsed the Hoover law enforcement commission's investigation into all law enforcement and voted funds for its expenses for a second year.

Administration leaders and drys on both sides, overwhelmed a group of wets, 272 to 41, and restored to the second deficiency bill $250,000 and a reappropriation of $88,000 in unexpended funds for continuation of the commission.

The item will be considered tomorrow by house and senate conferees on the deficiency measure and an agreement is expected bfore noon so the senate may take final action on the same day. Chairman Jones of the senate finance committee, has agreed to a demand by Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, for a separate vote in the senate on the item.

When the measure was first before the house the allotment was stricken out on a point of order by Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, on the ground that legal authority for the commission expired July 1. The senate allowed $50,000 for the commission's expenses provided it confined its inquiry to prohibition. President Hoover then said he would procure private funds for the commission's other work.

Republican leaders today secured adoption by the house of a resolution to authorize continuation of the commission's unrestricted law enforcement inquiry.

A motion by Chairman Wood of the house appropriations committee to increase the allotment to $250,000 and re-allot the unexpended balance then was approved.

During the brief debate, Frank J. Loesch, a member of the commission, was attacked by Representatives O'Connor and Dickstein, democrats, New York, who charged he had said the Jews and Italians were largely responsible for gangsters' organizations.

O'Connor said Loesch had made "remarks of an unscrupled gentleman" in saying that "the Jews furnish the brains and the Italians the brawn" for gangster rings.

Dickstein charged Loesch had been unfair and discriminatory in his remarks against aliens, Jews and Italians.

O'Connor, a member of the rules committee, said it was difficult to supply reasonable logic for the action of congress in supplying the fund, asserting that if it were not for prohibition there would have been no law enforcement commission and "the government would not have to spend a dollar were prohibition not in force."

GUNMAN CHARGED WITH MURDER OF LINGLE

CHICAGO, July 2—(AP)—The attempted massacre of Jack Zuta and three other gangsters ambushed by gunmen on State street in the loop last night developed new phases today in the inquiry into the assassination of Jake Lingle, Tribune reporter whose reputed "unholy alliance" with the underworld brought a bullet in his head and caused police to declare hostilities with hoodlums.

As police scrutinized motives and clews of the State street assault, a grand jury indictment was returned against Frankie Foster, gunman arrested in Los Angeles, accusing him of the Lingle slaying. George Dullard, another gangster allied with Zuta in the "Bugs" Moran gang blamed by some for killing Lingle, was released, although at the time of his arrest he was said to be the man who "put the finger on Lingle," pointing him out to the slayer.

Lieut. George Barker, former ace of the detective bureau, was suspended for acting as escort for Zuta and the three other hoodlums who were targets of the loop ambush. Barker alone fought off the gunmen, who escaped in their auto after dropping a smoke bomb. Two wild bullets from the gun play killed one man, a street car motorman, and wounded another.

Zuta and other Moran gangsters had been arrested in connection with the Lingle case, and were en route home from the police station after their release on bonds when the gunmen attacked them.

Police said they thought the gunmen sought to get Zuta and his pals as a reprisal for Lingle's death, on the theory that the Moran-Zuta crowd got Lingle as revenge for the reporter's activities in using his influence to aid the rival Al Capone gang.

This theory, however, did not dovetail with the indictment of Foster as Lingle's slayer, since Foster is reputed to have switched his alliance to the Capone outfit, deserting the Moran gang. The indictment of Foster was somewhat unexpected generally, police having said Foster was not the killed. The indicted gunman, however, had been named as the purchaser of the pistol dropped by the killer beside Lingle's body.

Foster, advices from Los Angeles said, would not oppose extradition to Chicago. He said he had a good alibi but the Chicago detectives who trailed him to the coast said "we have plenty on him."

WOMAN ESTABLISHES RECORD FOR ALTITUDE JUMPING

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., July 2—(AP)—Equipped with a device to take the task of opening her parachute from her own numbed hands, Mrs. Rita Schoemaker leaped from a plane more than 15,000 feet in the air today to establish a new woman's record for altitude jumping.

In a cabin plane the young broker's secretary who came from a Chicago home to make her way in the money marts of Manhattan, flew upward until lost to sight Higher and higher she went, until her fingers stiffened with the cold and her heart pounded in the thin air.

Then, between 15,000 and 16,000 feet up, she opened the door and walked out. A ten foot rope was secured at one end to the plane and at the other to the ring of her parachute's rip cord, so the umbrella opened without any action on her part.

She floated easily downward, rubbing her chin, which had been bruised by her belt buckle in the first precipitous plunge. She landed among the squat trees of a nursery after narrowly escaping some high tension wires. She rushed to the press room and told reporters to give all credit to her two-year-old son whom she had left in South Bend in the care of friends. The baby, presumably, had served as a spur to her ambition. A barograph carried in the plane will be sent to Washington for calibration.

KINGSFORD-SMITH LANDS AT CHICAGO FIELD

CHICAGO, July 2—(AP)—Wing Commander Kingsford-Smith in his around-the-world airplane "Southern Cross" landed at the Curtiss-Reynolds Flying field at 5 p. m. (CST) today after flying over Sky Harbor to salute the Hunter Brothers who are setting a new world record in refueling-endurance flying.

WITHHOLD COMMENT ON ITALIAN IMPORT DUTY

WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—An obstacle arose in the path of America's chief manufactured export commodity today while a cabinet officer was praising the new tariff law as one which reduced the disparity in protection that has existed between agricultural and industrial products.

Officials refrained from comment upon the Italian decree raising the import duty of automobiles between 110 and 125 per cent pending a report from agents of the commerce department. No official notice of the action had been received from the Italian government.

On Capitol hill, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan looked upon the action as subject to a double interpretation. He considered it might be either a method of forcing American manufacturers to establish plants abroad, or a retaliatory measure against the new tariff law.

The law itself was praised in a speech by Secretary Hyde over the radio as one which was a distinct gain for agriculture in that it provided increased protection for agricultural products.

The last communication that the state department had received from the Italian government dealt with agricultural rates in the measure. At that time Italy protested against rates on olive oil, canned tomatoes, tomato sauce and lemons.

PLEDGES SUPPORT TO LONDON NAVAL TREATY

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—Support of the London naval treaty by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was pledged today by William Butterworth, president of the organization, in a letter to members of the senate.

Explaining the board has reached the conclusion that the London treaty "does not jeopardize adequate defense," the letter expressed hope that it would be "ratified and made effective at an early date."

In making the letter public, Butterworth also issued a statement which said a study of the treaty from an economic viewpoint "brings to light some material advantages and also some savings in cost through the battleship holiday" by limiting maintenance and construction costs up to 1936.

"While objections by naval experts must be given due consideration," the statement concluded, "yet it would seem, in view of the relative significance of the questions at issue, that the treaty does not jeopardize adequate military preparedness and represents an important step toward effective reduction of armament and of the continuation of the leadership which the government of the United States has taken toward the establishment of enduring peace in the world."

Prison Chair Factory Destroyed By Fire

FRANKFORT, [illegible] July 2.—(AP)—Fire swept the [illegible]ort Chair company building in [illegible] stockade of the state reformatory here this afternoon, causing a loss estimated at approximately $250,000 to it and other buildings and equipment. The loss is largely covered by insurance.

The 254 prisoners employed by the chair factory, as well as 533 prisoners employed in two other buildings in the stockade, left in orderly fashion when the fire broke out and marched into the stone walls of the reformatory. There they watched the fire. Reformatory officials said they had no reports of anyone being injured or attempting to escape.

The 21 prisoners who form the reformatory fire department and scores of other prisoners aided the Frankfort fire department in battling the blaze.

The majority of the 2,384 prisoners in the reformatory who were not aiding in fighting the blaze sat around the court within the stone walls, laughing and joking. No signs of unrest were noted.

The fire started in a shed of the chair factory where sawdust is stored. It is believed that a spark from a passing train ignited the sawdust. The fire rapidly spread up the elevator shaft and soon engulfed the entire building.

RECOMMENDS DEVELOPMENT OF ALASKAN PAPER MILLS

WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—Asserting that coercion by two Canadian prime ministers had been responsible for a $5 a ton increase in the cost of newsprint paper, the federal trade commission recommended to the senate today development of Alaskan mills to offset a further impending price raise.

The commission report to the senate on its newsprint paper investigation cited a contract between Hearst newspapers and the International Paper Co. This contract included a price increase of about $5 a ton, and resulted from agreements between Hearst representatives, the International Paper company and Prime Ministers L. A. Taschereau of Quebec and G. Howard Ferguson of Ontario, the report said.

"The International Paper company" the commission said, "was induced to agree to an increase in price of newspaper to Hearst papers by threats of disciplinary action on the part of the prime ministers."

The commission found that although the International sells only about 20 per cent of the newsprint paper used in the United States, "other domestic manufacturers generally follow its lead in making newsprint prices."

Of the existing Canadian paper mill combine, the commission said that if such a combination operated in the United States "it would be in violation of the anti-trust laws, including the anti-trust provisions of the Wilson tariff act."

Close observation of the Canadian combination was suggested to congress "with a view to remedial action if any agency is found to exist, or is created within the United States for the enforcement of such activities as may be contrary to the anti-trust laws."

Quoting the 1921 price of $62 a ton for newsprint, the commission said the proposed Canadian increase would establish a price of $67 a ton, whereas Alaskan paper could be delivered to New Orleans through the Panama Canal for $58 and to Chicago for $64.60.

"It would seem," the report stated, "that Alaskan newsprint should compete with eastern United States and Canadian mills well up the Atlantic coast," adding a suggestion that Alaskan power sites and timber lands be developed and that the government continue its experiments with the manufacture of paper from farm waste products.

Explaining no company now operating in the eastern portion of the United States has a sufficient proportion of the business to constitute a monopoly, the commission discussed "the possible monopoly or tendency toward monopoly" of the Crown Zellerbach Corporation in Pacific States. This company's acquisition of the capital stock of the Williamette Paper company while in control of the Washington Pulp and Paper company are "subject matters of a case now being further investigated by the commission" the report said.

The International Paper company, the commission said, was the only paper manufacturer which aided publishers to "any extent" in financing newspapers, and this company now has disposed of its stock and securities in "most" of the publishing companies.

Chicago Fliers Face Injunction Suit

Litigation to Tie Up Funds Earned By World Endurance Airmen Started In the Circuit Court Yesterday.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 2—(AP)—The City of Chicago sailed smoothly along tonight, entering its fourth week of constant flight, but at the airport below several potential storms were brewing.

The trouble began when Deputy Sheriff Matt Porten arrived late today with a summons ordering all of the Hunter brothers and backers of the endurance flight to appear in circuit court July 21.

Flight managers and assistant flight managers scurried about greatly perturbed. Walter and Albert Hunter, operators of the endurance ship's refueling plane were served, as were Bernard L. Majewski, flight secretary and Wilson Herren, backer.

Sheriff Porten then turned his face skyward, watched the endurance plane glide over the field. Flight managers began protesting. But their protests were unnecessary. The sheriff quickly announced that he had no intention of serving any papers in the air.

"John and Kenneth Hunter can go on flying as long as they like," said the sheriff. "I do my work on the ground."

The crowd cheered this announcement, and the sheriff departed, declaring he would return in a few days.

The appearance of the sheriff was only the beginning of the discord, however. Rivalry between the National Broadcasting and the Columbia systems, both of which have broadcasting equipment at Sky Harbor, cropped out after a ship carrying Columbia equipment made a second unsuccessful attempt to broadcast from the endurance ship.

The National Broadcasting company promptly sent up equipment, made a contact and, officials at the field, reported, succeeded in broadcasting a few words from the flying Hunters.

"There isn't much to say up here, and there isn't much to do. We're just sailing along."

A spokesman for Columbia then announced that his system had a contract with the Hunter brothers, and that an attorney had been consulted regarding the business of enforcing it.

"The N. B. C. used the plane we brought out here to make that contact" said this spokesman. "We don't want to hog things, but such tactics don't appear right. Our contract specifics that the Hunter brothers are to talk over Columbia system first when they land. I can't understand why we failed to make contact with the ship twice today, and the other outfit did, but we'll find out why."

The endurance ship had been in the air 509 hours at 8:40 p. m. central standard time, or 89 hours ahead of the previous endurance record. A total of 103 successful contacts with the "Big Ben" refueling ship had been made. In addition three successful radio contacts had been established.

SAYS SOCONY TRIED TO DICTATE GAS PRICE

New York, July 2—(AP)—Ernest O. Howe, who has a gasoline filling station at Leominster, Mass., on the state road between Worcester and Fitchburg, testified today that officials of the Standard Oil company of New York brought pressure to bear on him to make him stop selling at a lower rate than that fixed by the company.

He was a witness in the government's suit to prevent the proposed billion dollar merger of Standard Oil of New York and the Vacuum Oil company. He said a Mr. McKenzie, Socony branch manager at Marlboro, spent a week trying to persuade him not to sell Red Cap gasoline as well as Standard oil and another three weeks trying to persuade him not to sell Socony below the prevailing price. He said McKenzie threatened to take out his Socony pumps unless he complied but that the threat had not been carried out.

Morris Levine, who has six stations in and near New Haven, Conn., said he now has a Socony contract for the sale of gasoline He said that when he operated as an independent he once reduced the retail price below that established by Socony, and was at once informed by other companies that they had no gasoline to sell him.

CLAIM NEW LAW WILL DISRUPT PRISON SYSTEMS

Hawes-Cooper Act, Limiting Handling of Prison Made Goods In Interstate Commerce, Assailed At Governors Conference—Gov. Trumbull Estimates Cost to Connecticut Would Be $600,000 Annually In Re-organization of Prison Industries—Suggests General Conference of States to Work Out Solution of Problem.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 2—(AP)—Resistance by the states to operation of the Hawes-Cooper act to limit the handling of prison made goods in interstate commerce, was demanded by several governors at their national conference, here today. The act was termed a usurpation by federal authority of the rights of the state to meet their prison problems.

Gov. John H. Trumbull, of Connecticut, suggested a general conference of states to work out a solution of the problem. Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, in terming the act an infringement upon state authority also expressed the belief that it is unconstitutional and said a court test probably would have to be made.

Probable effect of the act, which after 1934, would subject prison made goods shipped into a state to the laws of that state governing sale of such products, was described by various speakers as threatening disruption of their prison systems.

Gov. Trumbull estimated that it would cost his state $600,000 annually in reorganization of prison industries, and Gov. John Hammill, of Iowa, placed the cost to his state at a million dollars.

Gov. Norman S. Case, of Rhode Island told of plans of New England states for a survey to determine how products of their prison factories could be interchanged among the public institutions of the various states.

Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, of Missouri predicted that a complete readjustment of prison industries would be necessary.

"It would seem evident," he said, "that each state as a protective measure, must bar from its markets the prison made goods of other states, and to avoid an unconstitutional discrimination, must withdraw its own prison made goods from its own open markets. This will inevitably bring about the destruction of the prison labor contract system and the public account system."

The capital was the scene of noisy demonstrations at dawn. Shouting "Germany, wake up" large numbers of fascists roamed the streets and gave battle to communists wherever they met and recognized them.

Seventy arrests were made at Cassel, where a fascist meeting was raided by police. The members resisted efforts to disperse them with the result that hand-to-hand fighting was necessary.

Two persons were shot and seriously wounded at Neumuenster in a street fight between fascist and communist factions.

ITALY JUMPS IMPORT DUTIES ON AUTOMIBILES

ROME, July 2—(AP)—Italy's reaction to the new American tariff rates today took the form of a reprisal when, without notice, the Italian import duties on automobiles were raised between 110 and 120 per cent by royal decree.

The sudden blow at automobile imports, which went into effect on Monday but escaped notice for 24 hours, applied particularly to small cars. The decree raising the tariff was drawn up June 27. The council of ministers had met the day before without announcing any such step. King Victor Emmanuel, Premier Mussolini and other government officials immediately signed the decree. The parliament later will convert it into statutory law but today it stands as an effective barrier to commerce in foreign motor cars.

Protection of home industries, including the vast Fiat enterprise at Turin, was responsible for the action, according to Minister of Corporations Bottai, who is mainly responsible for the radical tariff. He urged its enactment in the interest of home labor.

Small automobiles, such as the American Ford, are affected most. On this class of cars the increase was from 7,000 lire to 16,000. On higher priced cars the percentage was somewhat less. One high priced car was covered with a tariff increase of 8,000 lire. The lire is worth about five cents American.

Agents of the American manufacturers discounted the explanations of domestic necessity and saw in the move retaliation against the recently inaugurated tariff laws of the United States.

Among the differences between the old and new tariff was the separation of classes. The new schedule treats pleasure cars, trucks and tractors apart and puts pleasure cars into three groups, with trucks in four.

Duties on automobile parts henceforth will be at 55 and 45 lire per hundredweight.

Chairman Leclaire stated that a survey of the number of trucks in the city indicated that but one, a somewhat dilapitated vehicle, would appear in the unusual procession.

Four bands, the Italian Citizens' band, the Clown band, a novel organization, the Boy Scouts' band and the Trade School band, will head as many divisions which are being arranged by Lieutenant James J. Lee, marshal of the parade. There will be further music by several orchestra groups and vocalists riding in trucks. This week concerns from Hartford and Providence were granted permission to take part in the parade.

The formation will be along Valley street, with the several divisions resting on the various side streets running into Valley. The line of march will cover all wards of the city, as previously announced, the addition of the entire length of Union street on the march from upper to lower Main street being the only change made to date. Other principal streets to be covered will be Pleasant, Prospect and Jackson streets.

City officials and guests in private cars with police department motorcycle escort will head the first division. Bringing up the rear of the long parade will be an amusing group of ancients and horribles. After making the loop about the city the parade will come up the entire length of Main street for dismissal at Soldiers' Memorial field.

In addition to manufacturing concerns, automobile and other sales agencies, furniture stores, lumber and coal dealers, blacksmiths, grain companies, building contractors, etc., who have entered trucks there are several social and fraternal organizations, retail merchants and individuals who have secured the use of one or more trucks for the occasion and a unique panorama of the Thread City's industrial, commercial and social life is promised in the arrangement.

In the evening the public will be treated to a band concert to be staged at Soldiers' Memorial field at eight o'clock by Gold Star post No. 1724, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The concert will be followed by a brilliant fireworks display.

The liquor cases of Patsy Dalimonte, Daniel Connell and Albert Theroux, were nolled in police court this morning on motion of Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher. The trio were charged with actual sales alleged to have been made to undercover men who worked here late in the spring. They were arrested in a series of raids staged here under the direction of Lieutenant Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson state police barracks on the evening of June 16. In the case of Theroux, the under cover man failed to identify the accused as the man who sold him liquor and in the cases of Dalimonte and Connell the court was informed that no analysis of the wine and beer taken as evidence, had been made. All three cases had been continued from previous dates.

Arthur Decelles of 13 Ives street was arraigned in police court today on a charge of fishing without a license. He pleaded guilty and was fined two dollars and costs. Judge Frank H. Foss remitting the fine. Decelles paid the costs.

Clarence Wilson of Windham was charged with embezzlement of two automobile tires and a small amount of money. At the request of his counsel, Attorney W. A. King, the case was continued until Wednesday, July 9. Wilson, who had been employed at the Sinclaire filling station on North Windham road, was arrested by a state policeman of the Stafford Springs barracks. He has claimed that he was arrested under false pretenses and has asserted that further developments would transpire in the case at the instigation of his attorney.

SEEK TEST CASE ON BATHING IN ALEXANDER LAKE

DANIELSON, July 2.—An old problem intrudes again. It is of years' standing and has to do with the prohibition of bathing in Alexander's lake, which is the source of water supply for domestic use in the village of Goodyear. The state board of health is insistent that there shall be no bathing in the lake. Each season when the quite populous summer colony assembles to occupy the cottages on the shores of the beautiful body of water, complaints begin to come in that bathing again is being indulged in.

Already this season state officers have been making inspections of the lake from time to time in an effort to apprehend bathers. While they may possibly not care particularly for the assignment, it is a part of their duty and they go about it diligently and faithfully.

It would seem desirable, in the minds of a great many people here and in nearby communities, that a test case should be developed and the entire question reviewed by the courts. In the past the Goodyear Mills has opposed bathing in the lake, on the ground that the water supply of the village built about the mill likely would be contaminated.

A situation similar arose a few years ago when an effort was made to stop bathing in Roseland lake in Woodstock. The water from this lake is used for domestic purposes in the city of Putnam, after passing through filters at the pumping station in Harrisville. Herbert Bowen, whose personal property interests, with those of his family, were large in Roseland park, on one side of the lake, combatted the restriction successfully, and bathing in the lake still continues during the warm weather season.

Whether or not a test case in the courts would result in a similar favorable decision at Alexander's lake is something a great many people would like to know about. It may be that circumstances in the Roseland lake case were different from what they might be in an Alexander's lake case, and it now appears that the only way to find out is to put the matter up to the courts for decision.

Score of Drivers Arrested

Today state officers continued their crusade against out-of-the-state truck drivers operating vehicles not equipped in accordance with the motor vehicle laws of Connecticut. Nearly a score of truck operators, in addition to the seven ordered to court yesterday, had been rounded up by 4 o'clock this afternoon, and the officers were still on the job. There will be plenty of business for the town court Thursday morning.

It has been noted recently that operators of other than Connecticut registered trucks have been bringing them into this state minus reflectors and mirrors and, therefore, contrary to law. That this condition may be relieved and the danger of accidents reduced, the state officers have gone into action.

In checking over the trucks it is not unusual for the officers to find that the operator is without a driver's license and then an additional charge is filed.

During the course of today's operations an overloaded truck was encountered. This vehicle, owned by John Garceau of Providence and operated by William Colgan of Cranston, was found to be carrying a load of 7,500 pounds, three-quarters of a ton over the maximum allowed load of 6,000 pounds. The driver was ordered to court.

At this morning's session of the town court six of the drivers held yesterday for operating improperly equipped trucks were fined $1 and costs.

The case of Napoleon Morrissette of Ocean Grove, Mass., charged with coasting a truck down hill, has been continued to Saturday. He is at liberty under bonds of $100.

WAUREGAN GRAYS HAD MIGHTY FINE RECORD

Here is the prospective lineup for the Old Timers' baseball game at Wauregan on the morning of the Fourth, when the original Wauregan Grays will engage their ancient rivals, the famed Jewett City team of the 1901-03 period, in a contest: Grays—John Fields, Fitchville, catcher; Eddie Burns, Wauregan, pitcher; Edward Farrell, Wauregan, first; Ernie Smith, Norwich Town, second; Tim Fields, Manchester, N. H., short; Walter Hogan, Pawtucket, third; Peter Raymond, Wauregan; Bill Gagnon, Pawtucket; Henry Leach, Wauregan, fielders. Their old manager, Jerry Doyle, will be in charge of them. Jewett City—George Robertsen, Danielson, catcher; Morgan Moore, Hudson, N. Y., pitcher; Joseph Watt, Groton; A. W. Williams, Danielson; Billy Ritchie, Gordon Willis, Ted Shea, Billy Raill, Billy Robinson, all of Jewett City. Their old manager, Charles Connell of Norwich, will direct their efforts.

Dusty old record books show that during the 1901 season Wauregan won two games played between these teams by the respective scores of 8-7, 3-2. A 14-13, 11-inning contest was won by Jewett City. The following year Wauregan won three more, 7-6, 10-4, 13-12. It was in that year that Wauregan probably reached the top of its form and Jewett City was fast developing to reach its greatest heights during the succeeding two years, when Wauregan was slowing up a bit. However, Wauregan did get another 9-3 victory over Jewett City in 1903. In 1901 the Grays won 10 games and lost 1, while in 1902 they won 13, lost 1 and tied 1. The 1903 season, a short one for them, shows 7 games won and 1 lost. Only 3 games were lost in three years.

Teams played included Taftville, Danielson, Putnam, Norwich, Baltic, Moosup, North Grosvenordale, Manville, Woonsocket, Mechanicsville, Southbridge and the Slater A. A. of Webster, in addition to their great Jewett City rivals.

Motor traffic was so heavy through Danielson today as to indicate that the holiday outpouring of those who are going somewhere for the Fourth was underway.

Numbers of local followers of the boxing game went to Westerly this evening to see Dynamite Lou Brouillard, a local boy who has made a great record, in action in one of the bouts.

Special offer, for children only. Buy fireworks at Blumenthal's with Red Arrow money; $100 in Red Arrow money buys $1. worth of fireworks.—adv.

Judge W. F. Woodward entered the Day Kimball hospital today for treatment of an injury to his knee, hurt while he was standing on a box that tipped over while he was removing a window in the cellar at his home on Broad street.

State officers of the Danielson barracks will patrol the trunk line highways radiating out of Danielson over the holiday period, and there will be prompt checking of any reckless driving or other violations of the motor vehicle laws.

Banks here will follow their usual custom of closing all day on the Fourth, giving those who are employed in them a full holiday.

Employes of the Goodyear Mills are having their annual vacation this week and meanwhile a periodical inventory is being made at the plant, where operations will be resumed next Monday morning.

PUTNAM

LOCAL CONCERN AWARDED SEWER PIPE CONTRACT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 2—The water drain pipe on Arch street is being installed under the direction of Supt. of Streets Frederick Dumas according to a report made at the council meeting Tuesday evening. Members of the street department maintainence force are laying the chain of pipe. The John O. Fox company, lumber company of this city was awarded the contract for supplying the piping material, they being the lowest bidders. Three firms submitted bids on the project. They were, the Whipple and Gilpatric Coal company, whose figure was $1.38 a foot; the Wheaton Building and Lumber company $1.27 (less 2 per cent); and the John O. Fox company, bidding at a flat price of $1.25 a foot. Chairman of the highway committee, Alderman Eugene Migneault informed the council that the Fox company had been awarded the contract. The action was ratified.

Only one building permit was granted last evening, when John Laska was given permission to erect a garage on land adjoining his property on South Meadow street.

Napoleon Lapointe of Gilman street, a local contractor will supply the curbing to be used in the city's sidewalk building and street improvement campaign which will be underway within a few weeks. Alderman Migneault of the highway committee, announced that he had received bids from three reliable contractors, which were opened and were as follows: Joseph Betera Co., of Woonsocket, R. I., curbing to be supplied at a price of 95c a foot; John P. Sabin of Putnam, curbing to be supplied at a price of 79c a foot; Napoleon Lapointe, to whom the contract was awarded agreed to supply the curbing stone at a price of 75c a foot.

Alderman Breault of the property committee, reported that the recreation quarters of the central fire station can be furnished and a new floor laid at an estimated cost of $100. The council approved of the proposed expenditure and will have the firemens' quarters repaired and equipped with new furniture at an early date.

Upon the motion of Alderman Robert T. Chadwick of the street lighting committee, globe shades on all of the 400 candlepower street lamps in the business section are to be removed for a period of one week as an experiment to determine whether or not, more light would be obtained. Mr. Chadwick said, from his observations, it would appear that the shades collect considerable foreign matter which tends to shut out much of the light. Ralph E. Thurston, general manager of the local office of the Connecticut Light and Power company, voiced no strenuous objection to the recommendation of Mr. Chadwick, but said that the globes on the illuminants were designed by engineers of illuminating research, to spread the light with even distribution. He inferred that he would be glad to oblige the city by removing the globes, since it would save the light company time and expense of cleaning out the refuse which collects in them regularly. Mr. Thurston agreed with the alderman that much more direct light would be obtained with the globes removed from the light standards, but in his opinion the brilliancy would not diffuse the light evenly and would have a dazzling and blinding effect upon persons coming in contact with the lights.

A new light will be installed on the post directly in front of the Bugbee corporation store on the corner of Front and Main streets. The council acted favorably on this motion which was submitted by Alderman Chadwick. When lights in the windows of the business houses are out, hazardous conditions exist on this corner which will be eliminated only through the additional illuminating of that section, Mr. Chadwick said.

The inauguration and strict adherence to a code of building and zoning laws is the only method by which the city can lessen its ever increasing fire hazards, Chief Ralph E. Thurston of the fire department told the council last evening when the subject of building permits came to the attention of the aldermanic body. Chief Thurston scored the deplorable conditions brought about by the erecting of five stall garages in the residential sections. The chief said his observations reveal that a vast percentage of the garages are built of wood and in most instances at points which are not safe distances from houses and other structures. To more clearly bring home his points of view, and impress more vividly on the minds of the councilors the grave dangers that exist in the continued permitting of the erection of garages in the residential sections, Chief Thurston cited the recent disasters by fire in the cities of Nashua, N. H., and Charleston, Mass., where the cause of the conflagrations were traced directly to violations or the absence of building ordinances and zoning acts. Mr. Thurston intimated that he had attended the annual convention of the New England Association of Fire Chiefs which was held last month in Rutland, Vermont. He told of the revisal and enactment of a new code of building ethics. He said that he would be furnished with copies of the approved laws shortly and that he ardently hoped the council would accept, digest and incorporate them in the laws and ordinances of the city charter.

Mayor Richard said that he shared the opinion of Chief Thurston with regard to the enactment of a building code for the city and promised to cooperate with him in an effort to adjust conditions satisfactorily.

Alexander Varbedian, a shoe merchant was awarded a contract for supplying the fire department with 17 rubber coats and 8 pairs of boots. Mr. Varbedian was low bidder on the proposition with his figures of $5.75 for each coat and $3.73 for each pair of boots. Four of the city's leading merchants submitted prices. A motion for adjournment was entertained, after the council had listened to a reading of municipal expenses for the current month and voted to remand the list of accounts to the city treasurer for payment.

14 Arrests Made

The report of the police department for the month ending June 30 showed there to have been 14 arrests performed during the month. The majority of arrests were made on intoxication charges. Fines and costs collected during the month of June amounted to $662.07. Twenty-eight tramps were lodged during June, which is an unusually large number of rounders to be housed at the police station at this time of the year. Captain Dubreuil explained that men who take advantage of the free bunks in the cell house now are, "privates in the army of un-employed," and not vagrants as is supposed.

After turning over the gavel to President-elect Alexander Gilman, Suoro Nikoloff, retiring president of the Putnam Rotary club delivered an interesting and comprehensive oral report of what he had gleaned from the sessions of the international convention of Rotary, which was held last week in Chicago. Mr. Nikoloff attended the convention as a delegate from the local club. Installed in office today with President Gilman, was Arthur F. Hughes, treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank, who succeeds E. Leslie Beebe, as club secretary.

Visitors at today's luncheon were Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, Obadiah Butler, Henry Dubuc, Richard Bannigan, Henry Johnson, Herbert Pepler, H. H. Rapp, all of Danielson and Albert B. Smith of Willimantic.

One hundred sleeping cars, filling to capacity with the season's vacationists bound for the Maine woods, passed through this city last evening over the rails of the Norwich and Worcester branch of the New Haven road. The Bar Harbor special was dispatched last night in eight sections and so great was the tonnage that the New Haven's 3300 freight engines were employed to haul the long trains.

Preparations are now being made to tie up the city's 450,000 gallon reservoir on Oak hill with the new million gallon reservoir, which has been erected alongside the smaller one. The hookup is only a temporary connection and the contact is being made for the purpose of testing the new standpipe. Fire Chief R. E. Thurston, explained today that water will be pumped through the old tank and into the new one. This round-about method of filling the giant cylinder was necessitated since no pipe lines as yet have been laid to the mouth of the new tank.

It appears that Putnam will witness a quite observance of the 4th of July this year. There is no public celebration planned for, and with the Fourth falling on a Friday, providing a week-end holiday, the anniversary of America's independence will see a large number of residents leaving town to enjoy the brief vacation. Capt. A. J. Dubreuil said today that he will enhance the strength of the police force on the night before the Fourth by the assigning of special officers to duty. This precautionary measure is taken to prevent any demonstration of vandalism. Captain Dubreuil said that he looked for a quiet, safe and sane celebration.

William S. C. Aldrich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace C. Aldrich of Chapman street is visiting with his parents. Mr. Aldrich left for California three years ago and has made his residence there since.

Bernard Bulger, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bulger of Farrows street, was operated upon today at a Providence hospital. The operation was performed on his nose to correct the position of a bone which he fractured a few years ago.

A bill for boarding Haig Bayandorian, Providence man, who spent 24 days at the local police station while Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson was engaged in conducting an inquest into the death of a companion of the Providence man, was presented to the common council for payment at its July meeting Tuesday evening. Members of the finance committee when informed by Capt. Dubreuil that the man was ordered held by the county coroner, advised the council to order the bill paid and a duplicate sent to the state to have the city reimbursed. Haig, the captain said, was a light eater but it required more than a $1.00's worth of food daily to appease his appetite.

The Trudeau murder case moved swiftly to its climax today in superior court in Worcester, when the state rested and the defense had completed its plea for an acquittal. The case went to the jury this afternoon and it was expected that a verdict would be returned after a few hours deliberation.

A Massachusetts registered car cracked up on Cemetery curve at the intersection of Grove street and Killingly avenue shortly before noon today. Two occupants of the vehicle escaped uninjured. The car was going in the direction of Danielson. As it approached the curve, failing to slacken speed, it went into a skid and striking the soft shoulder of the road, crashed through the fence and plunged over the embankment. Slight damages to the car were incurred, but it was able to plow its way through the hay field below and return to the state highway. The name of the owner and driver was not obtained since, he failed to reported the mishap to the police.

The state police of Connecticut and Massachusetts have conferred and beginning today will establish patrols at the border lines in order to prevent so far as is possible, the importation of fire works and explosives illegal in Massachusetts. Cars in many instances were stopped and searched by the Massachusetts troopers, a Springfield dispatch said this afternoon.

"This New Tonic Helps Your Entire System"

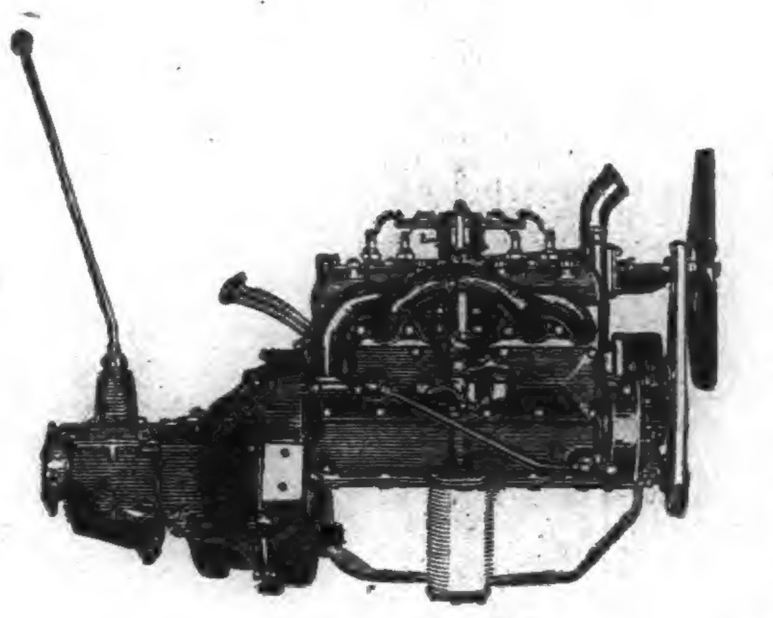
MR. H. G. HALL

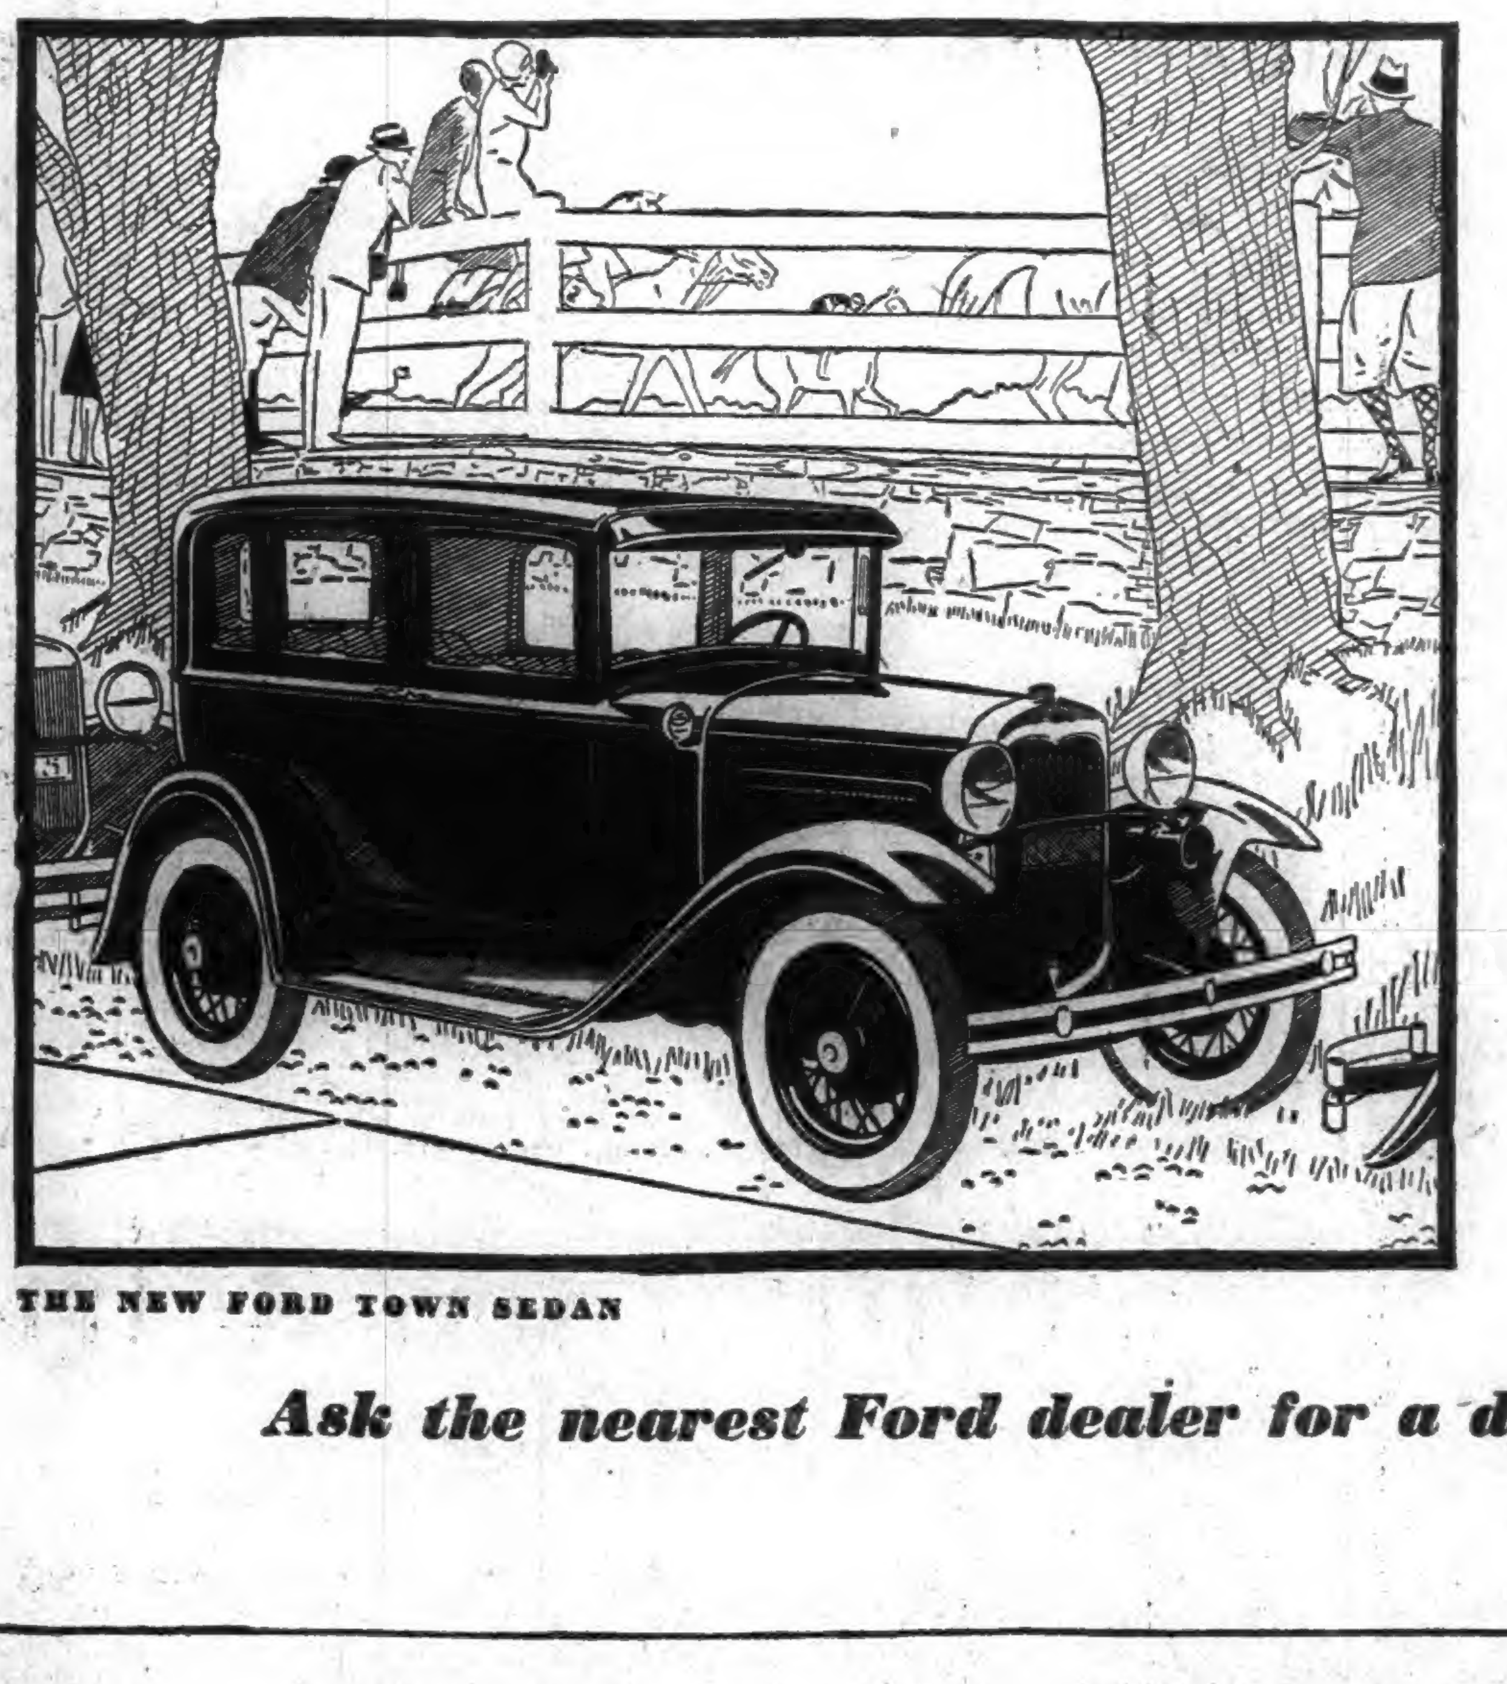
Mr. H. G. Hall of 44 Washington street, New London, Conn., states: "I am 67 years old now, and ever since I was 20 years old I'd been suffering with chronic constipation. All this time I'd been taking all kinds of laxatives—I'd take one for a while until it would no longer assist me, and then I'd have to change to something else. No matter what I used, the results were always the same—only temporary relief. My appetite suffered, too—I really didn't enjoy a mouthful that I'd eat, and nothing looked good to me.

"I happened to see a Bon-Tone ad in a Bridgeport paper one day; and reading of a case similar to mine, I got some Bon-Tone. I have now taken six bottles and my bowels are just as regular as could be desired; and I actually enjoy every mouthful of food that I eat—something that I hadn't done in years. Bon-Tone is a boon to mankind and I sincerely hope that those who read this will no longer hesitate, but will get some at once. If they do, they will never regret it. I don't think Bon-Tone is praised nearly enough. It certainly does help your entire system! I feel like a new man!"

There is a Bon-Tone Man in Norwich at Smith's Pharmacy, to tell you more about this super-tonic, that has helped thousands of sufferers. Call on him today—and get a bottle of this tonic.

Bon-Tone also for sale by all leading druggists everywhere.





THE VALUE of SOUND DESIGN

New Ford engine gives outstanding acceleration, speed and power without sacrificing reliability or economy

THE GOOD PERFORMANCE of the Ford car, so apparent on every highway, is due largely to the sound mechanical design of the engine.

It has outstanding acceleration, speed and power, yet that is only part of its value to you. Greater still is the fact that it brings you all these features without sacrificing either reliability or economy.

That is the reason the Ford car has given such satisfactory service to millions of motorists all over the world and has been chosen by so many large companies that keep accurate cost figures. In every detail of construction it has been carefully planned and made for the work it has to do.

The design of the compression chamber is an important factor in the efficiency of the Ford engine. It is built to allow free passage of gases through the valves and to thoroughly mix the fuel by producing turbulence within the cylinders during compression. The spark thus flashes quickly through the whole fuel charge, resulting in quieter and more effective engine performance.

Other factors are the direct gravity gasoline feed, the specially designed carburetor, the new hot-spot manifold, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves of larger diameter, statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft and flywheel, simplicity of the electrical, cooling, lubrication, and fuel systems and accuracy in manufacturing.

THE PRICE OF HIGHWAY SPEED

It has been repeatedly maintained that one of the great contributors to highway accidents has been speed. Cars are driven at such a rate that it is impossible to control them in case of an emergency, in case the other fellow does the unexpected, in case something breaks. And yet, in spite of the terrible increase in the number of highway fatalities and accidents and the steady increase in the number of motor vehicles, there is an insistence upon more speed. It is speed instead of more caution that is being urged, and as the result each year is disclosing more persons killed and injured.

An interesting disclosure in this respect has just been made in Rhode Island. In that state there has been the demand for more speed. Auto drivers have been required to drive at the rate of 35 miles an hour at the least. They have been threatened with attention from the state police if they lagged. It was claimed that it was necessary in order to relieve congestion and keep all traffic moving at that speed so that there would be less passing. In other words, all had to go faster to accommodate the speedsters. And yet the faster they drove the faster they were expected to drive.

Rhode Island became appalled at the large highway toll, believed it could and should be checked. It has studied the situation and found that the average speed in November of last year was 36 miles an hour. In the last three months of this year it has been 25 1-2 miles. The fatalities for the first six months of 1929 were 55 and for the some period this year 41, a reduction of 14 through less speed.

As the result of these disclosures, the Providence Journal declares that the solution of the problem that is perplexing the country is less speed, and it insists that "renewed and redoubled efforts are needed to perpetuate and increase the sense of personal responsibility that has been achieved. For we have not done all we can. We have merely made a beginning and proved the case."

Such proof should have its good effect not only in Rhode Island but in other states. It is high time to get over the idea that the slower and safe driver has got to be berated and arrested because he isn't speeding. It is time for safer driving and Rhode Island has been showing that it can be done with fine results.

Congested highways will be referred to as still presenting a problem, but even that can be relieved by the building of roads which will distribute the traffic, permit it to travel on more than one road and reach the same destination. It is time to give consideration to something beside the main trunk lines where congestion exists because there is no alternate route. Break up the heavy traffic on the main routes by developing the cross roads and giving the motorist a chance to get away from the congestion and there will be less demand for speed, greater safety for all and fewer deaths and accidents.

Let other states profit by Rhode Island's demonstration.

THE LOSS OF AN EYE

Fourth of July hasn't arrived as yet but some of those accidents that go with its celebration have.

Waterbury reports a Monday occurrence where a 12-year-old boy was aiding the explosion of a firecracker when it unexpectedly blew up in his face and the report from the hospital to which he was taken was that he would possibly lose the sight in one eye.

This is one of the deplorable prices that is paid by careless celebrators, whether it happens to be on the nation's birthday or in advance. It is one of those accidents which efforts have been made to prevent through establishing restrictions for the use of explosives.

The longer the period during which the use of Fourth of July explosives covers, the greater the chance for just such accidents, the bigger opportunity for needless fires and the greater annoyance for those who are sick or in no condition to tolerate the noise.

Such accidents as that which occurred in Waterbury are liable to happen anywhere. It is what might occur under a safe and sane observance of the Fourth if there is a carelessness displayed in the use of crackers and other explosives, and it serves to emphasize the important of abiding by the restrictions for the day's celebration and, even then, participating in it in a manner that will lead to the prevention instead of the encouragement of such affairs.

The loss of an eye is going to be a serious handicap to that Waterbury boy. It is a tremendous price to pay for insistence upon early celebrating and upon a disregard for the care that should go with all phases of the observance. It is one of those lessons that should have been anticipated, but just what effect it will have upon the youth of Waterbury and their parents is a question. It nevertheless calls for giving heed to the many excellent warnings.

GET A HIGH COURT DECISION

It is to be hoped that the case of D. C. MacIntosh, involving his application to become a citizen of the United States, will be carried to the United States supreme court.

When he sought to become a citizen of this country, where he has resided for some time, there was no question as to his ability to qualify. The obstacle encountered was revealed when he declared his unwillingness to take the oath of allegiance, or that part of it which provided for his bearing arms in case of war. He desired to attach a reservation to the effect that he would do so in case it was a war which he could personally approve. He wished a discrimination in his case, although in his case his age makes it apparent that he would not be called upon for service and his calling of a clergyman would furnish sufficient grounds for avoiding any service to which he might object.

One judge has maintained that an exception could not be made in his case, that the law exists for all, and it is expected that those who want to become citizens of this country will be dealt with alike when it comes to taking the oath.

Another judge has held that he ought to be permitted to take the oath with the reservation he would make, that he should be allowed to decide whether the war is justified and his service, a purely academic question in his case, allowed to hinge on his personal views. He doesn't object to all wars but he might object to some war.

As the matter stands, it would appear to be a case of making flesh of one and fish of another. It would seem to be leaving it to the individual to say whether he would stand behind his country or back up the enemy, and to give that privilege to those who are desirous of becoming citizens of this country. It should go to the highest court for a final decision.

THE YEAR'S SURPLUS

When the government's fiscal year ends there is always an interest in the amount of surplus that exists in the treasury. The desire is to have the ledger show a surplus, though it is only by determined efforts that it is accomplished at times.

When June ended, the government's books showed that it had $184,000,000 after all bills for the year were paid. It was a year in which the surplus was not expected to be large, in view of the cut which had been made in the income tax, the money which had been spent for the relief of unemployment and the drop in income which was anticipated because of decreased business activity. Thus the surplus disclosed was in excess of expectations, but there were unusual reasons for it.

When foreign governments pay on their indebtedness with cash, as they did at the June payment, it serves to swell the surplus in contrast to previous occasions when payments in government securities were made. The payments in cash will, and have by this time, found their way into channels for the reduction of the national debt, quite the same as the securities would when cancelled, but they have to show up temporarily under the surplus. In addition, there were unusual revenue returns because of the taking of huge amounts of goods out of bond in anticipation of the tariff changes, while income taxes produced larger revenue in spite of the reduction in the rate of taxation.

When a surplus results in a larger sum than was estimated it provides opportunity for a further decrease of the national debt, a reduction which is ever welcome because of the cut in the interest account and its certain effect upon taxation conditions. This means an indirect benefit to the federal taxpayer.

DRYING UP NEW YORK

New York is one of the centers where much attention has been centered over prohibition. Those who have been placed in charge of enforcement in that district have assumed their duties with confidence of fruitful results. Their accomplishments have not always measured up to their expectations. They have labored under handicaps which exist anywhere and under those which are peculiar to the big city. They have been aware of the sentiment of New York on the wet question and while certain efforts have been made to dry up the city the impression prevails that success has not been attained.

Now that a change is made in the enforcement head in that city, there are evidences that a new broom sweeps clean. The change was inaugurated by a series of raids. They followed some statements by the former administrator, who objected to his transfer to Boston, and upon resigning gave out a statement in which he attacked the conditions prevailing in New York and declared that he no longer believed that prohibition could be enforced. As the result of his experience, he no longer favors prohibition.

This hasn't disheartened the new administrator. Perhaps he takes into consideration that his predecessor speaks from the attitude of a person who is piqued because it was deemed desirable to place another on his job, but changing administrators hasn't seemed to solve the wet riddle in the metropolis. Perhaps the new administrator will be able to overcome the handicaps and obstructions which have been encountered by predecessors and force the big city to dry up. He is, at least, being given the opportunity to see what he can do and how effective his administration under the new prohibition bureau will be. More than New York will watch with interest.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Some people govern the length of their prayers by the condition of the times.

It will not be long now before the boys and birds will give the cherry trees a rest, the raids by the boys being the worst, of course.

In fighting off mobs that would lynch, Beaumont, Texas, shows more opposition to mob rule than some of that state's communities.

The demand that the celebration of the Fourth be restricted to that day is a sensible one. There is no improvement by having it distributed.

SATISFACTORY ADJUSTMENTS

Jeanne Dowling and Mary Cunningham sped down the boulevard in Jeanne's new sport roadster. The sun glistened on the bright blue finish, and Jeanne felt a justifiable glow of pride. She had just returned from college, and the car was a gift from her father. It was such an improvement over the one she had driven last summer that Jeanne was determined to keep it always as clean and unmarred as it was now.

Mary Cunningham, her classmate, was going to California for the summer, and Jeanne had insisted upon taking her to the station.

"It will be a good way to initiate the car," she had said.

"Oh, look out," she cried. Screech! Crash! Bang! Another car had slid up behind them and was jammed up against the bumper. Before Jeanne had finished assuring herself that neither she nor Mary was injured the other driver had jumped out of his car and had come around to the right side of Jeanne's car.

She prepared to annihilate him with one withering look. But her anger was considerably tempered when she saw the contrite concern on his face. He was a very good-looking young man, and when he learned that no one was hurt he looked so relieved that Jeanne did not have the heart to give vent to her feelings.

"I'm so sorry," he said. "When that little boy darted out I had to crash you or hit him."

"I am certainly glad no one was hurt," Jeanne replied. She looked ruefully down at her damaged fender.

"I think my insurance company will take care of your damage," he assured her. "My name is John Leonard. I'll write it down here and give you the name of the insurance company, too."

"That is good of you," she replied. "I'll write them about it."

"I would go down to see them personally," he suggested. "You might get better service."

"Oh, these claim adjusters are so hard boiled. I just don't like to think about talking to one of them. Dad says they are all alike." The young man smiled appreciatively.

"If you have any trouble with them let me know," he said. The crumpled fender proved to be the only damage and after they separated the cars Jeanne continued to the station with Mary. As Mary boarded her train she turned to Jeanne.

"Thanks, Jeanne, for bringing me down. I wish you luck getting your car repaired. Don't be afraid of the claim adjuster."

"I'm not thinking about him, Mary. But didn't you think that Mr. Leonard was handsome?"

The next day Jeanne went to the office of the insurance company. After waiting a few minutes she was taken into an adjoining office. She did not see the man who arose to greet her. She was staring at the sign on his desk, which read: JOHN LEONARD, CLAIM ADJUSTER.

"Oh," she gasped. "I didn't know. Why, I didn't have any idea." John Leonard smiled.

"Won't you sit down, Miss Dowling? I will try not to be too hard boiled. You see, I have my insurance with the company I work for."

"You can't begin to know how well I got along with him," replied Jeanne happily. "It was Mr. Leonard himself, and he insists on adjusting lots of other things for me besides fenders."—Exchange.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

WASHINGTON, July 2—A dozen years in congress have taught Rep. Guy Hardy of Colorado great respect for the influence of "the old boys" in congress.

The almost invariable rule of seniority committee assignments works that way. It is one of the discouraging things a newcomer faces, particularly in the house. Roars of indignation may arise from freshman now and then, but the rule goes on working just the same.

"And no one these days has the optimism to predict that it will soon be abolished," Hardy says.

Plums

Under that rule, congressional old timers get all the plums, from desirable committee posts to the first pick of offices. The juniors get what is left. It even applies to seats at committee tables with the new comers far down the line.

"And the new member meets with it at any official dinner he attends," the Coloradoan added. "He sits near the foot of the table—the older members in order of their service near the head of the table.

"Brilliancy and unusual ability, of course, count for much with a new member; but without years of service they do not get him very far."

Reckoning up what concentration of power in the hands of the oldsters means in the present house, Hardy finds this:

"Of the nine republicans who have served 10 terms—20 years or more—one is speaker, one is republican floor leader and five are chairmen of important committees.

"Drop down to the class that have served eight terms—16 years or more. We find 47 republicans. In the group are the speaker, the republican leader, 19 chairmen of committees, several chairmen of important subcommittees, eight members of the ways and means committee and five members of the appropriations committee.

"One hundred eleven republicans have served 10 years or more. Included in this group we find 40 committee chairmen out of a possible 47 and all chairmen of important subcommittees. Included also are practically all of those who will serve in this congress on conference committees."

Handbook

That last is mighty important. On big bills, he has observed, it is the conference committees that write the actual legislation.

"Members may orate and the two houses may vote, but the conferees, the old boys, bring back the language agreed upon and it will be adopted," he says.

These reflections have been set out in a sort of handbook on congress prepared by Hardy for home consumption. It contains a lot of interesting information.

Something About Deafness

By Joseph P. Kane, M. D., New York.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Did it ever occur to you what it must be like to be absolutely deaf, to be shut off from every sound in the world? Occasionally we become bored with quiet spells in our lives and feel like yelling to break the stillness, but we have no idea of what absolute silence is. During all our waking hours, in the quietest room, or on the most lonely mountain or prairie, our ears are constantly perceiving sounds, and to be entirely deaf is a terrible affliction. But there are thousands who suffer it, and often for reasons that might have been prevented.

Of the children attending institutions for the deaf, almost equal numbers are male and female. About 60 per cent were born deaf and 40 per cent acquired deafness as a result of infectious diseases. Concerning those born deaf I shall only say that a considerable percentage came from families in which there was deafness. But I want to deal particularly with those who became deaf in childhood, for by far the greater number developed it before they had reached their third year. So we must remember that up to five years of age is the most dangerous period, during which the infectious diseases have such a legacy of misery, scarlet fever and measles particularly.

Of 1192 children in one group recently studied meningitis was the cause of deafness in 209, scarlet fever in 100, measles in 97, influenza in 91, infantile paralysis in 37, syphilis in 24 and mumps in 12. In nearly all the meningitis cases and half the scarlet fever cases, the deafness followed without the slightest evidence of discharging ears, so that we know the infection attacked the nerve of hearing direct, causing a toxic inflammation. Measles is less prone to cause a running ear than scarlet fever, but when it does it is as virulent as the worst cases of scarlet fever. Measles can also cause a toxic neuritis of the auditory nerve without any discharge of the ear. Typhoid fever causes deafness without any sign of ear disease except in two cases. The deafness of twenty-four children was caused by fracture of the skull and only one had any running of the ears.

Mumps we do not consider a severe disease at all. It is looked upon as a little hard luck on account of the period of quarantine or as a joke. But mumps can kill that nerve of hearing like a shot from a gun. There is no pain in the ear or swelling or pus. The destruction of hearing which occurs in connection with mumps is always sudden. It comes out of a clear sky.

Many of these children had had their tonsils and adenoids removed, but the disease that brought on deafness had struck much deeper than anything that could be affected by those glands. Tonsils and adenoids, although a factor in producing deafness, yet hardly ever cause total loss of hearing.

From this study three things stand out quite clearly. First is the danger to little children under 5 years of age of the infectious fevers. Guard your little one against scarlet fever, measles, mumps, etc., with all the care humanly possible. And if they do contract them, put them to bed and keep them there till all danger is past. Second, about 80 per cent of acquired deafness is not associated with discharging ears, which many people expect as a definite danger signal. Third, the suppurating diseases of the middle ear, while often causing a degree of deafness, usually do not go so far as to require a child to be placed in an institution. So although they should be cared for, if they occur, by a physician accustomed to dealing with them, they are not potentially as dangerous as some of the better known diseases which many foolish parents still think "every child should have and get them over with."

The Signal Passed Along

Obedience without delay
You'll find to be the muskrat way.
—Jerry Muskrat.

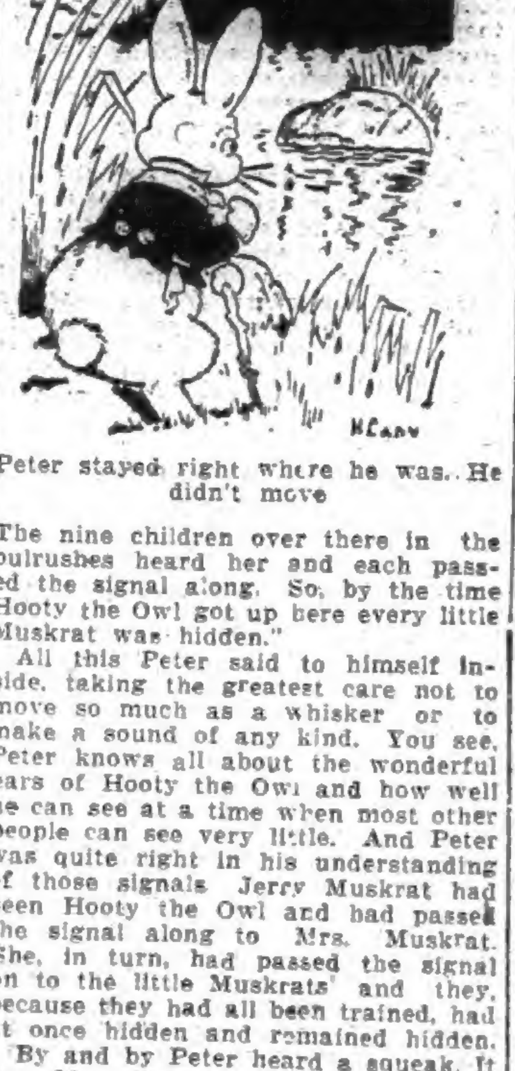
Peter Rabbit spent a lot of time around the Smiling Pool. You see, Peter was greatly interested in the school there, for really there was a school in the Smiling Pool. There were two teachers,—Jerry Muskrat and Mrs Muskrat. Nine little Muskrats went to that school. Of course, they didn't call it a school. But after all any place where you learn lessons is a school and those little Muskrats were being taught lessons every day.

It was surprising how fast they grew. It was quite necessary that they should learn as fast as they grew. Otherwise, they would become grown up without being really fitted to take care of themselves. Peter, just from watching, got so that he understood some of the signals. He was over there just at dusk one evening. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the Purple Hills and the Black Shadows had crept across the Green Meadows and over the Smiling Pool. It was all very calm and quiet and shadowy there. Presently the first little star came peeping out and was reflected in the water.

Nowhere could Peter see anything of the Muskrats. Jerry wasn't to be seen; Mrs. Muskrat wasn't to be seen; none of the little Muskrats were to be seen. After a while Peter began to wonder where they were. It was just such a night as Muskrats love. Could it be that something had happened to one or more of the family and the rest were in hiding? Peter tried to be patient. However, patience does not hold out forever and at last Peter made up his mind that he would go over in the Green Forest for a while.

Peter was just about to start along when he heard clearly, but faintly a sound which he recognized. It was the sound made by a flat tail being slapped on the water. The sound came from down the Laughing Brook below the Smiling Pool. Immediately the sound was repeated but was much louder. This time it came from back of the Big Rock in the Smiling Pool. And then right away came a whole series of little slaps. They were not so loud, because they were made by small tails. These slaps came from in among the bulrushes at the upper end of the Smiling Pool. After that all was still. Yes, sir, all was still.

Peter sat right where he was. He didn't move. In a moment or two it seemed as if a shadow—a flying shadow—passed across the Smiling Pool. Peter held his breath. Inside he was saying, "That was Hooty the Owl. Jerry Muskrat must have seen him and gave the signal down there in the Laughing Brook. Mrs. Muskrat over there behind the Big Rock heard the signal and passed it along.



Peter stayed right where he was. He didn't move

The nine children over there in the bulrushes heard her and each passed the signal along. So, by the time Hooty the Owl got up here every little Muskrat was hidden."

All this Peter said to himself inside, taking the greatest care not to move so much as a whisker or to make a sound of any kind. You see, Peter knows all about the wonderful ears of Hooty the Owl and how well he can see at a time when most other people can see very little. And Peter was quite right in his understanding of those signals. Jerry Muskrat had seen Hooty the Owl and had passed the signal along to Mrs. Muskrat. She, in turn, had passed the signal on to the little Muskrats and they, because they had all been trained, had at once hidden and remained hidden.

By and by Peter heard a squeak. It was Mrs. Muskrat. It was answered by a number of little squeaks. These were from the little Muskrats. Their mother had told them that the danger was past.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

First Waterspout Moving Picture

An airplane has flown rings around a waterspout, permitting the recording of the first still and motion pictures ever made from the air of this awe-inspiring phenomenon.

The photographs of the twisting column of water and vapor were made between Miami and Havana by the seaplane survey party of the National Geographic society which is making a comprehensive aerial study of the geographic features and weather conditions along the east coast flying routes between North and South America.

Frederick Simpich, in charge of the party, describes the unusual experience in a communication to the society's headquarters.

"Roaring across the sea from Key West to Cuba," he writes, "the giant flying boat 'Argentina' was almost in sight of Havana when a heavy rain squall suddenly blew up to starboard. Pilot Hawkins, to avoid the angry black cloud, veered to port. Then, to our amazement, there quickly dropped from the north end of the storm cloud the thin, writhing black column of a waterspout. In a few seconds, as we watched, it grew to a black, whirling corkscrew at least 600 feet high and probably 50 feet or more in diameter.

"At first glimpse of the ominous natural phenomenon Jacob Gayer, staff photographer, and Captain Albert W. Stevens, noted army parachute jumper and aerial picture man, seized cameras and made for open ports. Calling Pilot Hawkins through his speaking tube, Stevens asked him to circle the spout, approaching as closely as safety would permit.

"A sinister, frightful-looking monster the spout had now become, like a giant factory chimney linking the heavens with the sea. Then, as it grew in size and whirled and twisted, it took the shape and appearance of a great snake, spray and mist rising in clouds from where its tail lashed the sea. Yet its writhing edges were as clean-cut as a broad black ribbon.

"All day the sky had been overcast, the sea calm, the air supercharged with moisture. It was from a particularly black, lowlying cloud that the great spout had developed; and, as we flew round and round it, Gayner and Stevens made a series of pictures. First they shot the straight, dark descending line that marked the monster's formation; then its great twisting black bulk; and, finally, a long, grayish snakelike arm that swung off at 45 degrees—its lower end now whipped out into thinning water-stands like the frayed tail of a colossal horse. By my watch, it was exactly seven minutes from the time the spout first formed until it faded into the black depths of the moving squall. Twenty years ago my tramp steamer in the China seas ran from a waterspout. Now, in a plane that could fly 127 miles an hour, we impudently played tag with one—and took its picture!

"Whizzing over Moro Castle we landed in Havana harbor in a tropical downpour, to find crowds of Subans in sheltered places along the waterfront excitedly discussing the 'cyclone.' 'The only way to stop one,' said an excited customs inspector, 'is to shoot it!'

"But for this amazing prank of Nature, our air cruise from Washington down to Havana was without adventure. Down the Potomac the ship had flown, past Arlington and Mount Vernon basking in a Sunday morning sun. Above the battle fleet at Hampton Roads, past Norfolk and out to sea—with the so-called Great Dismal Swamp stretching far to the west. A vast, dark blue and mysterious waste it is, seen from the air, with here and there what seems to be cleared and cultivated areas.

"Towns, lighthouses, islands, rivers and estuaries slipped before the watchful eyes of our cameras. Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Jacksonville, lay along the path of the ambitious aerial survey which began at Anacostia naval base and will end in the Argentine.

"South of Miami came the flat, empty Florida coast, with its myriad mangrove keyes and shallows—where water is by turn green, blue and milky white. Below us birds went busily about their fishing; porpoise schools broke water here and there. And, by looking closely when the plane flew low, one might see fish, big and little, feeding about the reefs.

"Following the overseas railway that spans the island out to Key West, we banked and turned to 'shoot' a passenger train. From the locomotive cab and open car windows friendly people waved to us, and by jets of white steam we knew the engineer was whistling a salute.

"Over Key West we circled to give cameramen a chance to record the pictorial geography of this singular city, where big fat old guns wallow lazily behind grass-grown forts. Then off, to Havana. To my joy, I had found I could smoke Manila cigars—even whilst the big flying boat bucked and cavorted—without getting airsick. But, somehow, the cigar went out when we saw that water spout."

Stories That Recall Others

His Business.

Archibald, visiting his aunt, who lives on a public highway, was conversing with a pedestrian loitering near the [illegible]. The aunt growing suspicious of the stranger called the lad into the house and said:

"What is the business of the young man you were talking with?"

"Hitch-hiking," replied the animated lad.

Relatives.

Benny, age eight, had attended a family reunion and was the most interested of all the guests. He heard his mother later telling a friend about the gathering. "And all our in-laws were there, too," she said.

Next day Benny was assigned to entertain a caller, president of the club mother belongs to, while his mother slipped into another dress.

Benny drew on all his powers of description in telling her about the family reunion. "And all our out-laws were there, too," he said proudly.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The O. K. Tool Company, Inc., Shelton

The O. K. Tool Holder company, Inc., was organized in 1901 to supply a system of cutting tools to the metal trade under a new plan which had been conceived as more practical and economical. Starting with but one employee it has grown steadily until at present it employs upwards of 150.

When the original O. K. tools were made they were of tool steel but later high speed steel revolutionized the then standard methods of cutting metal. This distinctive advantage was applied to O. K. tools and later development made possible the O. K. milling cutters with inserted high speed blades, using the O. K. method of locking which had been used for single point heretofore.

In 1915 the name of the company was changed to The O. K. Tool company, Inc.

At present the company manufactures single point tools for lathes, planers, boring mills, shapers and all "Standard" machines as well as milling cutters for all general purposes. Its business being about equally divided between the single point and multiple type.

In 1925 the company was re-organized to permit of broader expansion and to more generally work in co-operation with its customers through a service organization supervised by the engineering department which was inaugurated under the guidance of Ralph R. Weddell.

The plant includes a modern forge and machine shop and heat-treating department which is under the direct supervision of Russell S. Young, metallurgist.

Within the past few months the company has extended its plant approximately 8,000 square feet and now occupies about 35,000 square feet.

The officers are Frank J. Nevins, president and acting sales manager, Frederick J. Wilson, treasurer and secretary, and Ole Severson, assistant treasurer.

WOOD LOTS HELP CREDIT OF MISSISSIPPI FARMERS

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—If a Mississippi farmer desires a loan from his bank, it will help if he tells the banker the size of his woodlot and the age ofthe trees thereon.

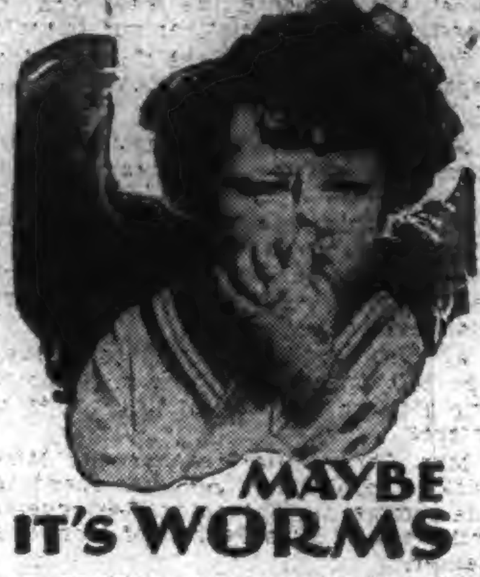
At least that is the way the Mississippi Forest Service hands out information to farmers who own one-third of the forest areo in the state.

Because federal land banks, consider timber a liquid asset, Mississippis are urged to protect their woodlots not only to assure "good returns but to provide the assets that will be the deciding point in securing a loan to carry the farmer through critical periods.

Favors Wood For Cowbarns

MANHATTAN, Kan.—(AP)— Professor Fred Fenton of the state agricultural college favors the use of wood in the construction of cowbarns. Low insulating value, he says, makes hollow tilt impractical except in mild climates.

NOSE PICKING?



MAYBE IT'S WORMS

DON'T be misled into thinking this is "just a habit". Often it is not a habit at all, but is due to worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Among other symptoms are: grinding the teeth, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, causes of general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present. Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

BROUILLARD WINS UNPOPULAR VERDICT OVER RUDY MARSHALL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 2.—Lou Brouillard of Danielson won a very unpopular decision over Rudy Marshall of Waterbury in the eight-round feature of the Kacey card here tonight. Marshall was a willing boy and slugged and punched with the Danielson lad as long as Brouillard wanted to. Marshall had a left hand that jabbed and cut Brouillard's face considerably and with his right he pounded the stomach. Marshall dropped the first round but easily outpointed Brouillard in the second, third, fourth and sixth rounds, and again in the seventh. Brouillard finished with a rally in the eighth to take the verdict of Referee Conway.

Young Manguel of New London knocked out Phil Gingerella of Westerly in the first round. In the first minute Manguel floored the Westerly boy for a nine count and then a minute later toppled him over for the full count. While it lasted plenty of gloves were thrown.

Young Teddy Hayes, a colored boy from Stamford, took a hard-fought bout from Freddie Slade of Warren, R. I., in six rounds. Slade was cut on the forehead in the third round but continued the fight.

Julio Rossi of Westerly slugged his way to a decision over Sid Taylor of New London in the third six-rounder.

Young Sposato of Westerly won the verdict over George Anderstars of New London in what was more or less of a comedy bout of four rounds.

In the opener Young Rochette beat Johnny Reese of Newport in a fast go.

CHARBONNEAU DECLARES HE STILL IS COUNTY COMMISSIONER CANDIDATE

Announcement made Wednesday that the three republican members of the board of water commissioners of the city, Charles A. Hagberg, John M. Swahn and John H. Sherman, considered that George M. Charbonneau had been eliminated as a candidate for the vacancy on the board of county commissioners drew prompt rejoinder from Mr. Charbonneau Wednesday night.

Mr. Charbonneau declares that he is still a candidate for the place and the only elimination that has taken place has been in the minds of the republican members of the water board.

At the organization meeting of the water board last week, Mr. Charbonneau was elected water department superintendent, because of which the republican members hold the opinion that he has been eliminated as a county commissioner candidate and they have endorsed Mrs. Edwin W Higgins for the place, sending a statement to that effect to the governor.

In a signed statement, Mr. Charbonneau made his position clear as follows:

I am still a candidate for the appointment of county commissioner and will continue in the race until the finish. The statement issued by the republican members of the board of water commissioners, and published in Wednesday evening's paper, to the effect that I have eliminated myself as a candidate by accepting the appointment of superintendent of the water department is misleading. I have not eliminated myself and do not intend to.

If the governor sees fit to appoint me to the board of county commissioners, my plans will be subject to any change I may see fit to make.

The only elimination of myself as a candidate for county commissioner is in the minds of the republican members of the water board, regardless of any statement they may make to the contrary.

GEORGE M. CHARBONNEAU.

The action taken by the republican members of the water board was shown in the following which was forwarded Wednesday to the acting governor, bearing the date of June 30:

"We, the republican members of the board of water commissioners, indorse the candidacy of Mrs. E. W. Higgins for position of county commissioner. Mr. Charbonneau, having accepted the position of superintendent of the water department, thereby eliminates himself as a candidate.

"(Signed)

president.
"JOHN W. SWAHN,
"JOHN H. SHERMAN."

Mr. Charbonneau has held the position of deputy collector of internal revenue, but has presented his resignation, effective on July 15. No successor to him is to be appointed, it is understood, and the internal revenue office here will be discontinued.

CORONER MAKES FINDING THAT CLEARS KENDALL

William C. Kendall of this city, driver of the automobile striking Helen Nawrocki, 6, late of Yantic and fatally injured on June 25, is free from criminal liability in the case according to a finding by Coroner Edward G. McKay.

In his finding the coroner says:

The above mentioned collision occurred on the main road from Norwich to Colchester. This road is surfaced with bituminous macadam and is about 20 feet wide. It runs generally in a north and south direction and there is a grade running from the south toward the north for a distance of about 200 yards. A dirt road leading to Wawecus Hill intersects the main road near the top of the above mentioned grade. This latter road intersects from the west. There are houses and buildings on both sides of the road near the vicinity of the collision.

About 5.15 p. m., on June 25th, 1930, said William Kendall was operating his automobile northerly on the above mentioned highway. He was on his way to a church supper that was being held in the town of Bozrah. As he was driving up the slope of the hill, he passed or he was passing an empty hay wagon, which was being driven in a southerly direction along the main highway. There were a number of children on the east side of the road and Mr. Kendall sounded his horn as a warning to these children. Just as the automobile passed the hay wagon, a child came from the west side of the road, intending to cross to the east side thereof. The automobile struck the child with the left front fender and carried her along a short way and then threw her to the ground. The automobile turned slightly to the right and came to a stop about 30 feet away from the point of contact.

The child was picked up from the middle of the road and placed in an automobile and rushed to the Backus hospital. Her injuries, however, were of a fatal nature and she expired the next day.

The child had been playing around the hay wagon during the afternoon and had been following the hay wagon down the dirt road. When the hay wagon came to the main road and turned south the child was following it. The child then started to cross the main road to the east side to join the other children. She apparently didn't see the automobile approaching, nor did she know that it was on the road. As she ran, she came into the path of the automobile and was struck.

There does not seem to be any criminal negligence in this case. The automobile from all of the evidence submitted was proceeding at a very moderate rate of speed. There does not appear to be any negligence on the part of the driver of the automobile that would amount to criminal negligence. He had his car under control and stopped it within a reasonable distance after the impact.

I am satisfied and find that the death of Helen Nawrocki was not caused by the criminal act, omission or carelessness of any other person or persons.

JULY FOURTH WINDOW AT SILBERMAN'S FURNITURE

The coming anniversary of Independence day, the Fourth of July, is given suitable recognition in a patriotic window display arranged at Silberman's furniture store, 37-41 Main street, with a loan collection home of Sedgwick post, No. 1, G. A. R. home of Sedwick post, No. 1, G. A. R.

Suitably given a key position in the exhibit is the famous oil painting, Spirit of 1776, which is suplemented by a steel engraving of the Signing of the Declaration of Independence, showing the notable band of heroes who put their signatures to that momentous document. Other pictures which bring back scenes and incidents in the life of the nation are the reception of Gen. Lafayette at Mt. Vernon by General Washington, a picture of General Grant with scenes in his career, and a picture of Andersonville prison. Busts of Lincoln and Grant are included in the exhibit.

The local side of the patriotic exhibit is covered by the display of the roster of the 18th Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, which was recruited in this city, and also the subscription list signed by prominent Norwich men of the Civil war period for the presentation of a sword to Col. Edward Harland of the 8th Connecticut. With this is shown the handsome sword in its engraved scabbard. There is also a framed copy of a poem written for the Greenville volunteers, and vivid recollections of one of the old Civil war veterans are aroused by the display of the drum used by Thomas Wormsley of Co. F., 29th colored infantry.

Other interesting articles in the exhibit include the trunk of a tree from the battlefield of Chickamauga, filled with sharpnel and rifle bullets, muskets, swords, caps and uniforms, cannon balls, canteens, drums and handcuffs.

NO CRIMINAL LIABILITY FOR GILCHRIST CHILD'S DEATH

For the death of George Gilchrist, 8, who was fatally injured on June 16, when hit by an automobile in front of his home in the town of Stonington by a machine driven by Rosario Dolce of Stonington, Coroner Edward G. McKay finds that there was no criminal responsibility attaching to anyone. In his finding given out Wednesday the coroner says:

The above mentioned collision occurred on the Boston Post road in the town of Stonington at a place known as Solomonville. It occurred specifically in front of a house occupied by the parents of the deceased. The highway at this place is 15 feet wide, surfaced with concrete. It runs generally in an easterly and westerly direction down a general slope towards the west. At the point of the collision the road dips more steeply to the west. On the north side of the highway there is located the premises occupied by the Perrin family. These premises are slightly northeast of the Gilchrist home. The Perrin house is set up higher than the road and there is a yard in front. This yard is roughly about an average of two feet higher than the highway and a retaining wall meets the shoulder of the highway about 12 feet from the northerly edge of the concrete. East of the Perrin house there is a line of trees and brush adjacent to the highway. The houses in this vicinity are sparsely placed and it is more or less of an open road. On the above mentioned date the weather was clear and the surface of the highway was dry.

The deceased George Gilchrist had been sitting on the Perrin lawn with Mrs. Perrin. Two others of the Gilchrist children had been there and had crossed the highway to their home. George's mother called him to come home and he responded immediately. He got up from the lawn and crossed diagonally to the southeast end of the wall and jumped off. He continued to run across the highway but had reached the beginning of the concrete and had passed a few steps on it when he was struck by a car coming west. The blow was a severe one and caused fatal injuries from which he died a few minutes later. The young boy was picked up from the highway and rushed to the Westerly hospital but he was beyond medical aid.

The automobile which struck the deceased had left Westerly to go to a filling station about 1000 feet west of the scene of the accident. It was being operated by the owner and he had a friend accompanying him. There was no unusual amount of traffic on the road while he was going towards the filling station. When he came to the scene of the collision a car had been preceding him and it passed by the Perrin house. Two other cars were approaching some little distance from the opposite direction. According to all of the evidence the driver of the car had little chance to avoid striking the boy. There is no evidence that the car was going at an excessive rate of speed. It was brought to a stop off the north side of the highway about 134 feet from the point of contact. There were no marks on the highway indicating the sliding of wheels.

I am satisfied and find that the death of George Gilchrist was not caused by the criminal act, omission or carelessness of any other person or persons.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC AT GARDNER LAKE

KENT CREW WINS FIRST VICTORY IN HENLEY REGATTA

HENLEY, Eng., July 2—(AP)—Both United States crews—the Princeton lightweights and the eight from Kent school—and the only South American club entry, the Canottieri Italiana of Buenos Aires, came victoriously through the preliminary heats today in the Royal Henley regatta.

All three crews turned in excellent performances despite strong headwinds which the oarsmen fought all the way down the mile and five sixteenths course on the Thames. From the spectators' viewpoint the weather was perfect with a bright sun and a clear blue sky drawing large and fashionable crowds to the river banks.

The schoolboys from Kent in Connecticut never were headed in the opening brush with the eight oared shell manned by the huskies of Sidney Sussex college of Cambridge university and finished strong, two and a half lengths ahead. Sidney Sussex was completely rowed while Kent finished snappily at a 32 stroke beat in 7 minutes, 49 seconds.

The Kent youngsters will meet the Lensbury Rowing club tomorrow in the second round. The Connecticut schoolboys have impressed water critics with their style and spirit despite the injured ankle of Bates, regular No. 4. Critics predict they will travel close to the finals. Their jazz music and the singing that emanates from their training quarters has been described as the "Spirit of American Youth."

The Princeton crew, with only three days for heavy training before the opening of the regatta today, trimmed Trickenham handily in 7 minutes, 47 seconds—two seconds faster than Kent school rowed. The 150 pounders meet Clare college of Cambridge tomorrow and victories for the United States represenatives will bring them together Friday.

NAIL TORN FROM FINGER ON BABE RUTH'S HAND

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—Babe Ruth's triumphant course toward a new home record received a serious setback today when the Babe attempted a too ambitious fielding stunt in the second game between the Yankees and the Chicago team and suffered an injury to a finger which may keep him out of the game for some time.

Ruth attempted to catch the second of three home runs hit by Carl Reynolds as it sailed into the right field bleachers just above the screen and crashed into the netting. The second finger of his left hand was caught in the wire and the nail was torn completely off it.

Barring the possibility of infection, the Babe probably will be kept out of action for several days and his ability to swing his mighty bat may be hampered for an even longer time.

Ruth can endure a small setback, however, for he hit his thirty-first homer of the year in the opening game and went still further ahead of his 1927 record. In the year he established his mark of 60, he did not hit No. 31 until July 24 while on July 2 he had but 25 homers. When he went out of the game, the Babe was 22 days and as many games ahead of his record.

NEW LEPROSY TREATMENT IS DECLARED SUCCESSFUL

ALTONA, Germany—(AP)— Successes with his treatment for leprosy in Peru and Egypt are claimed by Dr. Otto Baumann, a chemist of this city.

He announced that this drug, designated as "Obaalta 164," has been tried out in Alexandria, Egypt, by the specialist on leprosy, Dr. Strassmann, who reported a marked improvement even in advanced cases after the administration of the drug for four to five weeks. Strassmann said that after a further month's treatment leprosy could only be determined after a most careful examination.

Dr. Baumann has decided to supply all large leprosy hospitals throughout the world with his "Obaalta 164" to put it to a worldwide scientific test.

CARON ALLOWS BUT TWO HITS AS ROTARY WINS JUNIOR LOOP OPENER

The Rotary club defeated the Polish National Athletic club at the Duwell field Wednesday evening in the Junior league opener, by the score of 14 to 2.

Prior to the game, the six teams entered in the league together with members of the various organizations sponsoring teams met at the Elks home, and to the music of the Rotary club band, marched through the center of the city and over to the Duwell field, where at 6:45 o'clock, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins threw out the first ball, and the Junior twilight league was off on its third season.

The game itself was rather one-sided, the inexperienced P. N. A. C. team being no match for the veteran Rotary outfit, which is composed almost entirely of players having league experience of other years. The Polish nine, however shows promise and no doubt after playing together for a while will give a good account of themselves.

Caron, twirled for the Rotarians and had things pretty much his own way. For five innings, the Rotary pitcher did not allow a hit, and only two in the entire game. Caron fanned eleven. Petroski started for the P. N. A. C. and pitched five innings, when he was relieved by Sczesny, who finished the game. Both twirlers were hit freely, the Rotary collecting a total of twelve hits, four of which were doubles.

The Rotarians scored one run in the very first stanza, added five more in each of the second and third, then after going scoreless in the next frame, added two more in the fifth and a final tally in the sixth.

The Polish team's scoring frames were the second and fifth, scoring one run in each of these frames.

Charon led the hitters with three hits out of five attempts.

Tonight's Game

Tonight's game in the Junior twilight league at the Duwell field will be between the Elks and the Italian Young Men's club. As is well known, the Elks have had very strong teams in the Junior circuit in the past, they being the runners-up to the strong Taftville nine last year. Manager Jackie Wilson states his team this year is still better and is out to cop the pennant. The Italian club is a newcomer in the league, but it is rumored they have a very strong outfit and should give the Elks a tough battle in tonight's contest.

Game starts at 6:30 p. m. sharp.

Brown held Boston to one run until the eighth while his mates piled up a three run advantage but a rally in the eighth featured by Todt's home run with a man on base, tied the count.

WASHINGTON, July 2—(AP)—The Washington Senators moved closer to the top of the American league today by winning both ends of a doubleheader with St. Louis while Philadelphia split its twin bill with Detroit. The scores at Washington were 5 to 4, and 5 to 3.

After the Browns had gone into the lead in the twelfth inning of the first game, 4 to 3, Manush tripled and scored on a sacrifice, Judge singled and stole second to score on West's double.

Alvin Crowder chalked up his fourth win for the Senators in the second game, letting the Browns down with four hits, while he and his mates collected nine off Coffman and Kimsey. The score:

ATHLETICS DIVIDE DOUBLE PROGRAMME WITH DETROIT

PHILADELPHIA, July 2—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics and Detroit Tigers divided a double header here this afternoon, Detroit winning the first game 4 to 3 to break the champions' winning streak of five in a row. The Mackmen came back in the closer to win out behind George Earnshaw by a score 7-2.

Earl Whitehill, though relieved in the ninth inning, had all the Mackmen stopped in the first game except Al Simmons, whose three hits figured in all three of the losers' tallies. Three runs the Tigers scored off Mahaffey in the third inning gave them a lead the Athletics never overcame.

In the second fray, the Athletics clubbed Waite Hoyt, for 10 hits and five runs in six innings. Al Simmons kept up his hard hitting by whaling his seventeenth home run of the season with one aboard in the first inning. The scores:

Versailles Team Challenges

The Versailles ball club would like to book games with Plainfield, Wauregan, Montville, Willimantic, Jewett City and also would like to play a three game series with Mgr. Coullard's team of Baltic.

Mgr. Coullard does not seem anxious to play Versailles for some reason or other. Maybe he thinks we are not fast enough for his team but all he has to do is look back and count the games Baltic has beaten Versailles in the past few years. I'm sure that will make him sit up and take notice. Any team accepting challenge get in touch with,

JONES IS ACCORDED ROYAL WELCOME

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—"The Atlanta of the north and the New York of the south"—the phrase is Mayor James J. Walker's—got together today and welcomed back to his homeland the British amateur and open golf champion.

Before they were half through with him, they had that promising young Georgia lawyer, Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., fairly gasping for breath and looking about almost wildly as if for some avenue of escape.

On the steps of the city hall he tried to tell his adoring home folks and those thousands of New Yorkers who had demonstrated to him how all the world loves a golfer, how grateful he was, but he found it a tough job.

"All this has overwhelmed me," he said huskily. "It—it—put me off my game."

To the jubilant strains of "Dixie," Young Bob of Atlanta came aboard the municipal tug Macom from the Liner Europa at quarantine.

Up the harbor he came while sirens screamed, airplanes roared and swooped, and a fire tug played lacey streams of water high in the air.

And bobbing joyfully about in between, like a playful terrier, was the little tug Eugene F. Moran, carrying the president and a delegation from the Fox Hills Country club on Staten Island—the first golf club Bobby Jones saw, if he was looking, on his return home.

Through paper snow and ticker-tape, with fire crackers popping to the right and left of him, he rode up lower Broadway to the city hall, to be greeted by the mayor of New York who calls Atlanta his second home.

"Less than a week ago," said Mayor Walker, "New York welcomed a man who had brought the two poles together, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

"Today and right on this spot two poles are again brought together. The world's worst golfer greets the world's best golfer."

And the youngest bank director in Atlanta, Ga., got very red under his tan and grinned like a bashful kid.

The Europa was late, and for more than two hours the welcoming craft cruised about in the lower bay today.

Aboard the Macom were the champion's father—known as "Big Bob" down in Atlanta—his mother, Mayor and Mrs. I. N. Ragsdale of Atlanta, Major John S. Cohen, publisher of the Atlanta Journal and head of the Atlanta Bobby Jones welcome committee, John Malone, Bobby's father-in-law, who formerly was tax assessor in Atlanta, and Jess W. Sweetser, himself a former British amateur champion,

ROBINS RETURN TO FIRST PLACE BY FRACTION OF POINT

ST. LOUIS, July 2—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins returned to first place in the National league by a small fraction of a percentage point today by defeating the Cardinals, 6 to 5, in the second and final game of the series while the Chicago Cubs were losing to New York.

Jim Bottomley led the home team, hitting two home runs and driving in three Cardinal counters. Gilbert hit a homer for Brooklyn. Burleigh Grimes started on the mound for St. Louis but was put out of the game after the second inning for protesting Umpire Rigler's decision on balls and strikes. The score:

ACCOS TAKE FAST GAME FROM FISK RUBBERMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 2.—With Gromko pitching, the Accos nosed out the Fisk Rubbermen by the score of 5 to 4 in this evening's game of the Jewett City Twilight league. The sixth inning rally by the Bushmen made it look bad for the Accos, but was stopped after three men had come across the plate. Clean work in the field by both teams featured. Close decisions and fine support went to make up one of the best games of the season.

LIBERTY'S HIT WINS FOR IDEALS IN WILD EXTRA INNING GAME

After hogging the limelight all night, Nap Liberty, sterling Ideal third baseman, last night with a looping lift into the right field trees at the campus, broke up a nine-inning twilight game, gave his team its first win of the season, dragged the Smoke Shop into a tie for the cellar berth in the circuit and brought to a close one of the most hectic nights seen at the Academy this year, last year, or, in fact, any year since Methuselah was a boy. To make a long story short, Nap's ninth inning two-bagger drove Jimmy Murphy in from second base and gave the Ideals a 4-3 win over the Smokers. The deciding run was scored with two away.

What a night it was. Baseball, arguments, fights and plenty of excitement, all for a slim silver piece and, to the more conservative, for nothing.

Getting back to the ball game itself, the affair without any doubt was the best of the season, two extra innings being needed to determine a decision. Buck Shahan, former Greeneville boy, now of Montville, was on the hill for the Ideals and Magnan did duty for the O'Briens. Both hurled good ball, Buck allowing seven smacks and the Smoker nine. The latter, however, whiffed seven against Shahan's three.

In the opening frame, after the Smokers had gone out in order, the Bernard-Gilman combine went to work, scoring three runs on three hits and a base on balls.

For three full innings Shahan speedballed his way safely through the Smoke Shop hitters, but in the fourth weakened temporarily. A walk, hit batsman and two singles put the O'Briens to but one run behind the service men. Bunching hits again in the seventh the 1929 champs knotted the count.

Tonight's Game

The league-leading Polish Citizens club and runner-up Thermos Bottlers do duty at the campus tonight. To say that a good game should result is needless, inasmuch as the fans all know that right now these two clubs stand out as favorites to cop the 1930 chase. The Citizens have won two and lost none, while the Thermos has been upset but once in three starts.

Should the Cits come through they will go into the holidays with a safe lead in the chase, but should Hastedt's men win there will be more or less congestion at the top of the league ladder, three clubs being tied for the lead. The Royals and tonight's exhibitors will all be knotted.

Anxious to put tonight's game "in the bag," Bill Hastedt will in all probability use Mike Nickerson, while either Boots Greene or his brother Johnny will work for the Citizens.

REYNOLDS BATS WHITE SOX TO EVEN BREAK WITH YANKS

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—Carl Reynolds brought the Chicago White Sox back into the limelight today after they had lost the first game of a double header to the Yankees, 5 to 1, and led them to a 15 to 4 triumph in the seconds. He also equalled two records by his own batting feats.

Reynolds started the second game by hitting two homers off Charley Ruffing then added a third off Holloway in his third consecutive time at bat and the third consecutive inning. The only other player to do this was George Kelly of the Giants who performed the feat in 1923.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WAUREGAN, July 2—Parish grove, Wauregan, is all decked up for the gathering of the clans to celebrate the Fourth in good old fashioned style. Word has reached here that it will be impossible to find anybody at home in Jewett City on that day, as all the citizens are coming to root for the Charles Connell, Clan of 1930. Fireworks may be banned until the morning of the Fourth, but verbal sparks and heat fill this little burg already. Moore, of Jewett City has been throwing them at Robinson for many weeks, and as yet nothing has got away from the great catcher. Rumor says Burns and Fields have held secret practice. The Fourth will tell the story with the following teams lined up:

Wauregan Grays (1900 team)	Jewett City (1900 team)
Fields, c	c, Robinson
Burns, p	p, Moore
Farrell, 1b	1b, Watt
Smith, 2b	2b, Williams
Fields, ss	ss, Ritchie
Hogan, 3b	3b, Willis
Raymond, lf	lf, Shea
Gagnon, cf	cf, Rail
Leach, rf	rf, Robinson
Jerry Doyle, Mgr.	Chas. Connell, Mgr.

The first ball will be thrown out by some "President of Something" at 10 a. m.

AMERICA SURE OF ENGLISH TENNIS CROWNS

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 2—(AP)—America today made sure of winning the British tennis championships in both men's and women's singles by placing Big Bill Tilden, Wilmer Allison, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Elizabeth Ryan in the final round.

Thus the finals for Wimbledon's two most coveted crowns on Saturday will be All-American affairs. No foreign nation ever before has been able to monopolize both singles finals in the history of this tournament which goes back to 1877.

For the last six years the famous "Musketeers" of France won the Wimbledon crown in the men's division and five of these six times two Frenchmen battled for the honors in the final. But today the American champion, Tilden, disposed of his old rival, Jean Borotra 0-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-0, 7-5, to complete the elimination of the French stars begun on Monday when his young countryman, Wilmer Allison, upset the defending title holder Henri Cochet.

Allison himself qualified to meet Tilden in the final by stopping his young Davis Cup team mate, Brawny John Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., 6-3, 4-6 8-6, 36, 7755, in another thrilling semifinal this afternoon.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR RETURN MATCH BETWEEN SHARKEY AND SCHMELING OFF

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—Negotiations for a return bout between Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey terminated abruptly tonight, when Madison Square Garden failed to produce a release from Arthur Buelow, the German's disposed manager, satisfactory to the Schmeling interests.

Schmeling offered to give Sharkey a return bout in September a few days after he won from the Boston heavyweight on a foul provided he be given an absolute release from the managerial contract, which Buelow holds with Schmeling and which expires Oct. 13 of this year. Sharkey was so eager for another chance at the German heavyweight that he promised to secure the release and pay for it himself. The Boston gob signed today, agreeing to fulfil his promise.

The conference between lawyers representing Madison Square Garden, Buelow and Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager of choice, proved to be the stumbling block. Instead of a one paragraph, simplified release as requested by Schmeling through Jacobs, the Buelow interests presented an eight-page document that failed to come up to Jacobs' expectations.

The release offered Schmeling by Buelow was classified as a conditional release and gave Buelow the permission to sue for any rights he might think his. Jacobs immediately terminated all negotiations for the fight as his lawyers contended, that the Buelow document would only lead to unlimited litigation.

Jacobs said he would notify Schmeling, who was due to arrive in Germany today, and he would leave within a few days to join the German heavyweight in a tour of Europe. The German's manager also said that Schmeling would not take part in any fights until his contract with Buelow expires.

Pride Impels the Finest Quality

IN 1646 the shoemakers of Boston, provoked by "much bad work produced by their craft," petitioned "Ye Governor of Ye Bay Colonie" that "all boots might be alike made well." So began America's pride in Craftsmanship.

Pride in the production of the finest Quality still lives. It is the spirit upon which in 1874 at Manchester, New Hampshire, Roger G. Sullivan founded 7-20-4 —now the largest strictly hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos have been traditional with 7-20-4 since its beginning. It is the same spirit today, after fifty-six years of public confidence—which refuses to lower its standard of manufacture at the sacrifice of the finest Cigar Quality.

We cordially invite you to visit our factory

Breed Theatre.

Five new classics of melody and one riotous comedy song are introduced to the public for the first time in "Red Hot Rhythm," Pathe's new syncopation special featuring Alan Hale, which will be on view at the Breed theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

The songs, music and lyrics all of which were written by that well known team, Walter O'Keefe and Bobby Dolan, are "Red Hot Rhythm," "At Last I'm in Love," "Out of the Past," "When You're a Part of Me," "My Idea of Heaven" and "the Night that Elmer Died."

The last named, a mirth-ballad of unequalled calibre, is sung by Ilka Chase, stage and screen comedienne, while the remainder are sung by either Walter O'Keefe or Kathryn Crawford. This little musical comedy and screen favorite is particularly fetching in "My Idea of Heaven," a song and dance number in which she is supported by a bevy of fifty beautiful chorus girls.

"Red Hot Rhythm" seems to lack nothing in the way of popular and wholesome entertainment. It has a fast action story, brilliant comedy, excellent cast, beautiful chorus, absorbing drama and rich settings.

HORSE DECAPITATED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 2.—State police visiting Westerly Wednesday morning at an early hour report an automobile accident on Nooseneck Hill, Route 1A of the state highway from Westerly to Providence. During the night, near the foot of the hill, two men in a horse-drawn wagon pulled the horse into the center of the road just as an automobile was passing. The automobile struck the horse with such force as to sever the head from the horse and hurl it with such momentum against a store door by the roadside as to break down the door.

The New Haven railroad, in pursuance of plans to handle a big Fourth of July holiday traffic rush into New England, has reconditioned passenger coaches and daily for the past week has sent them to New York in long special trains in readiness for their return trip east with vacation travelers. For the present week the Pennsylvania railroad trains, making the Westerly station stop, have had baggage cars crowded to capacity with trunks and baggage to the extent that the express trains have not been able to carry it all and many pieces are reported as left over for later trains.

The concert by Westerly band, Charles O. Gavitt, director, from the band stand in Wilcox park will be omitted this week. The concerts are held Thursday nights and this week, the night before the Fourth, many of the musicians are engaged in duties at various stores which remain open for the evening.

FUNERAL

Amos F. Chester

Funeral services for Amos F. Chester, of 1 River avenue, were held Tuesday at 2 o'clock at 46 Granite street. Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector of Christ Episcopal church, read the service. Burial was in River Bend cemetery, where the committal service was also conducted by Rev. Mr. Tobin. Relatives acted as bearers.

Fourth of July Regatta

In a formal observance of Fourth of July this year in Westerly there will be two band concerts, six acts of vaudeville and $1,000 worth of night fireworks will be a feature of the Fourth of July regatta of Westerly Yacht club, according to announcement of the general committee chairmen, Godfrey Moore and Dr. John Champlin. The concerts will take place on the clubhouse grounds, Thompson's Cove, on the Pawcatuck river. The vaudeville performance will be given in the band stand immediately after the evening concert. The fireworks will begin about 10 o'clock. The regatta, which will extend through the Fourth to Saturday evening, will bring here some of the most daring and successful outboard motorboat drivers of the east.

The Westerly Yacht club conceived the regatta idea last winter and secured the support of the reorganized chamber of commerce. The cost of the two days celebration and sports is estimated at $10,000. Funds for the fireworks display are being raised by public subscription.

Under direction of the police committee of Westerly town council, Tuesday, the use of motor vehicle traffic lights at the junction of Elm, Broad and Granite streets, was resumed. The lights at High and Canal streets and Canal street and Railroad avenue were not turned on and probably will not be. Although installed a year ago, the latter lights have not been used. They were put up shortly before the present board of police commissioners entered office, and have been considered improperly located. The distance between them is short and the new commissioners, after studying the situation, decided they would cause traffic congestion rather than relieve it. It is possible that one of the lights may be transferred to the corner of Elm and Cross streets, where accidents frequently occur.

In the evening The Big Pond a three-act comedy drama was given by Frank Lane, Alice Donaldson, Barbara Pearson, Herbert Shapiro, Walter Hill and Frances Aldrich, accomplished professionals.

In the afternoon Mr. Lane was assisted by Eileen Hassler, "Red" Meady and Danny Shorey. The Children's Hour instructor will be assisted by Jean Rousseau, Margery Webster and Emma Dearnley.

Will Witness Wauregan Game

Among the many planning to go from Jewett City to Wauregan July 4th, to see the Old-Timers' baseball game, there will be none more interested than Thomas McBroom. During the times, twenty-five years ago, when rivalry was keen between the teams in these two neighboring villages, Tom was manager of the local nine, and hopes to renew his acquaintance with his doughty friends whom he well remembers.

One game which took place in the late '90's between these two famous aggregations is said to have cost close to $100.

These well remembered contests were often like a bull and a bear let loose, and for the time being at least, did not always reach an amicable settlement. The umpire, is said to have actually "taken his life in his hands."

Caught Bass By Hand

Bass fishermen were out Tuesday and Wednesday. As far as reported, first day honors go to a Polish boy, who caught a two-pounder, fishing from Hopeville bridge. The lad had a black cricket for bait and had no reel. The bass snagged in a stump near the east abutment. The small angler without hesitation jumped off the planking, clothes and all, and grabbed his prize, which he held inside his shirt as he waded to shore. A spectator fishing from a boat nearby, said the boy's clothes didn't amount to much, just a shirt and overalls. Hearing of this first catch, J. B. LeClaire offers three prizes—For the heaviest large-mouth bass, a South Bend reel, for the second in size, a 2 battery jack lantern. For the largest small mouth bass, a fish creel.

Last year, in Griswold waters, 17 bass were caught weighing over 3 pounds, one that weighed 4 pounds 2 oz., and one whale, only a little short of 5 pounds. Doc Wallace caught five one Sunday morning in less than an hour that tipped the beam at 13 pounds flat.

Some of the through motor traffic drivers are mistaking the new cement highway through the borough for a speedway. Indications are that a few hold-ups for reckless driving are about due.

The grounds of the new Jewett City Savings bank are being beautified by Japanese barberry hedges.

"I tried other remedies but they were not successful. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it there was an improvement. I purchased more and within a month was completely healed, after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment." MOLDED BRAKE LINING

The Firestone Cowdrey is the only brake-testing machine used and recommended by automobile factories and assembly plants throughout the world, because of its proven serviceability and accuracy.

Merely equalizing brakes isn't enough. Two wheel brake methods on four wheel brake cars are impossible. You must have the right amount of brake force at each wheel and the correct total brake force for the weight of the car, in order to stop quickly and without skidding. These are the demands of modern traffic conditions.

FINDING ODD THINGS A HABIT WITH LUCKY GRANT

Angus Grant was digging out a monster stone in his back yard, which took quite a while. It was hot and the perspiration was rolling off of him in drops big as golf balls. It took five hours before the stone was out its hole and something was shining as the sun hit it. Lucky Angus picked it up, also cleaned it up and found it was a glass button with three holes all ready to sew on your wall paper vest.

That is the first time a glass button was heard of in the fishing village. It was down about six feet in the ground. It might have been lost off the hackman's coat who drove the open air hack at the railroad station long before Henry Ford automobiles made a hit in North America. Or did it come from a Sunday dress worn by some young lady? No one knows how it got down so deep in the ground; so Angus still has the only glass button in the Indian down. He claims he will keep it as a lucky piece to him and will carry that button at all times in his upper vest pocket.

Mr. Grant loves to find old coins, or anything that is queer and never heard of before. He tells a story that happened when he was a boy running around in his bare feet, generally with cloth on each toe from stone bruises. This happened in St. Johns, N. F. When he was working on a large farm, where it took three hours to walk from one end to the other. He was hoeing up the Down East potatoes getting many ready for the market and he came across a monster potato that would do a family. It was called a St. John twin. Being a boy, he said "I will keep this one for fun, to show the old folks." So cutting it in two to have for supper he saw something strange. Getting it out, which took some time, it was a string of Indian beads. They seemed to be in good shape. After the sun went down and all the cows were milked Angus took the beads up in his room and shined them all up. On that string were 81 beads. He kept them for years until he came across an old Indian that lived in the next town, 30 miles away. Lucky Grant told him about the beads growing in the twin potato on his father's farm. The old Indian with the long hair told how his people used to fight on that ground and put up tents to sleep. The beads must have been lost off the neck of some squaw who never missed them until she left the land. "Well, mister, how much do you want for them?" "I don't know. They are not worth much to me, but you might want to remember your race by them, so I will give them to you." But the old Indian wanted to pay for them. Angus said "He slipped a 10 dollar bill to me—and that was a lot of money for a young fellow then. My eyes got so big to see a 10 dollar bill—but it made the old Indian happy to get back the beads over 100 years old and out of a potato!"

Leaving the Indian and going back home he told his mother and father all about it that night around the lamp. Before Angus started to come to Noank to make his home he went after round clams. It took about 20 minutes to walk from his house to the shore. After getting about 100 clams, giving his neighbors some and keeping the rest, he was opening some for the next day to have a real clam chowder. "Again by luck," he said. "I came across a clam that had something in it and it was a lady's ring, a gold one. Shining that up I could read that it came from England and was made from the best gold. My uncle told me if I went fishing I might hook a battleship or get a lobster with a suit of clothes on." This gold ring went on the finger of his sweetheart. Mr. Grant, finding those things in potatoes and clams or under ground has not kept them but he says he is going to keep the only glass button in the village.

The other day he was out for a walk and found a Canadian one cent piece 125 years old. "I gave that away to a friend who has a hope chest full of old coins, but he doesn't live here." He only was here on a short visit when Lucky Grant told him about the penny. He wanted to buy it but the finder would not take anything for it so the kind man made him a present of a new straw hat and said good-bye. Lucky Grant says he will not sell the glass button or give it away but will keep it as a pocket piece as long as he lives, for you cannot get a glass button like it in any store in America.

Keep Cool this summer with home-made iced Drinks

Sweetened to taste with Sugar

THINK of the variety of beverages you can make with tea, coffee, chocolate, lemons and other fruits. When chilled with ice, and sweetened with sugar you couldn't ask for more refreshing and taste-pleasing hot-weather drinks.

You can also make sparkling punches by adding carbonated bottled beverages to the fruit juices. These bottled drinks are always pure and delicious because they are made under most exacting standards. It pays to keep them on hand.

Cool drinks sweetened with sugar belong in the summer diet. They satisfy thirst and invigorate the system. A flavored milk drink in the late afternoon overcomes fatigue and causes one to eat the evening meal with calm enjoyment.

INSECTICIDES SHOULD BE KEPT IN SAFE PLACE

A clerk's error in selling a sulphur-arsenic insecticide instead of sulphur resulted in the death of a number of hogs and caused the dangerous illness of two persons on a farm in New York, an investigation by an official of the Food and Drug Administration, United States department of agriculture, has revealed.

The supposed sulphur was used in preparing a sulphur and molasses mixture as a home remedy for a cold. This resulted in the critical illness of one person. Then the drug was burned and the fumes were inhaled by another, also as an attempted treatment for a cold. This person became unconscious and for some days was severely ill.

Investigation by a federal food official revealed that this same sulphur had been used last fall in an attempt to cure hogs thought to be suffering from cholera. The preparation was mixed with the feed of 60 hogs, and a majority died. It was thought at the time that the deaths were due to cholera.

The sulphur used in the three cases was analyzed by the Food and Drug Administration and was found to contain arsenic. Fearing that others would buy this same product and use it as sulphur, the food officials traced it to its source.

Investigation showed that the mixture supposed to be sulphur, had been bought at an implement store. This store had a bag of sulphur and also a bag of sulphur-arsenic insecticide. Both were in a dark attic. A clerk had sold the poisonous mixture thinking it was sulphur.

Officials of the Food and Drug Administration point out three errors in the situation. A poison should never be kept where it may be mistaken for a non-poisonous product. Sulphur is not recognized by modern veterinary science as a cure for hog cholera. Modern medical science does not consider sulphur effective in the treatment of colds either as a mixture of sulphur and molasses or as sulphur fumes.

FARM AND HOME WEEK IN AUGUST AT STORRS

The program of the 1930 Farm and Home Week of the Connecticut Agricultural college will follow the same general lines as that of 1929. The dates of this year's gathering are August 4 to 9.

The morning sessions will feature a series of lectures amounting to four-day courses, covering the most significant recent developments in the fields of agriculture and home making. These courses aim to make it possible for the intelligent farmer, home maker, or worker in the agricultural profession to keep abreast of the times. They are soundly scientific as well as practical.

Some of the best leaders of thought in the rural field in the country have been invited to address the general afternoon sessions.

In the latter part of each afternoon will come contests, exhibitions and other features combining fun and education. The evening programs will include music, a reading hour and special entertainments.

Children's week, which made a beginning last year as a means of caring for the children of through-the-week visitors from 8 to 5 daily, will be very much developed this year. Miss Brugger of Maryland, one of the leaders in her field in the country, has been engaged as general director, as well as to give lectures on child development. With Miss Brugger will be associated a specialist in charge of the play school, while several members of the college faculty will be in charge of special activities.

The agricultural leaders conference which made a splendid beginning last year in centering the best thought of the state on its rural problems, will be continued this year, meeting August 7 and 8, and possibly August 9.

Separate meetings of farmers whose interests center around poultry, dairy, fruit growing and sheep raising will be held, with addresses by outstanding men in those fields.

Many college departments will have specially prepared exhibits and numerous inspection tours and demonstrations will be scheduled.

Altogether the week should again offer to the farm people an opportunity for a vacation that combines recreation, education, and inspiration.

EGG PLANTS EASY TO GROW

The egg plant is a luxury vegetable, always commanding a good price in the market but one that may be grown in the home garden with only a little care. This care is to see that its growth is not interrupted by drought. Half a dozen plants will yield all the "eggs" the average family will want. Get plants from seedhouses or truck gardeners now and set them out two feet apart. The egg plant makes a heavy spreading growth and needs plenty of room to develop. Two or three good sized well developed eggs to a plant is a good season's crop.

Give the egg plant a rich, mellow soil with a continuous supply of moisture. Under these conditions it will develop rapidly into a wide spreading plant with large leaves. the blossoms will appear in the axils of the branches and the eggs will start developing in midsummer to be harvested in August and September. It is too late to attempt successfully to raise plants from seeds so the plants which have been given an early start by dealers should be ordered. They are in stock now and can be procured very cheaply.

The standard varieties are Black Beauty and New York Improved. There is little to choose between them, one variety doing better in one locality than the other which can only be determined by trial. They are of similar quality.

The cooking of this vegetable, long a delicacy abroad but not so well known in American menus. There are a number of recipes for stuffing egg plant, many of them containing so many highly seasoned materials that the taste of the egg plant, very delicate, is lost. Stuffing the egg plant with its own meat chopped fine, mixed with bread crumbs and seasoned with a little onion juice is one of the methods employed by those who like the flavor of the plant.

The standard way is to dip slices in batter and fry them, thus preserving the flavor. The egg should be sliced, salted, and put under a weight for an hour before cooking, washing off the salt before dipping in the batter.

It may also be cut in half and baked in the shell being served with melted butter.

Try a few egg plants this summer as a novelty in the garden if you have never grown them before. They offer a fine variety in the menu at a time when new vegetables are scarce.

PLANTING FOR BABY BEANS

The fashion of serving "baby" vegetables which has developed a greater appreciation of many garden products might well be extended to string beans. The "baby" bean is merely the string bean gathered when about half the size usually used. The little beans are very tender and without suspicions of strings which may develop in the mature bean. These baby string beans are often served under the French name of haricots.

The green pod varieties are the best for the "baby" bean crop and the seed should be planted now. This will enable you to gather "baby" and mature podded string beans at the same time. String beans can be planted well into July with the certainty of a good crop. It is the best of follow crops for earlier vegetables as it is sure to produce.

Beans like warm rich soil but you can plant them in almost any situation except deep shade and gather a reasonably good crop of beans, the crop increasing in proportion to the favorableness of the soil in which they are grown.

There are at least a dozen kinds each of green and wax pod string beans and all are excellent. The stringless green pod is the standard type in the green varieties and planted in thousands of gardens. The wax types show a greater variety in general planting, gardeners having their preferences between the round and flatpod wax.

The planting of string beans in rows instead of hills is becoming a general practice, spacing the individual plants about six inches apart. Greater production for the space used is obtained by the method and the work of hilling up is reduced to a minimum compared with the old-fashioned method of growing beans in hills. It is a simple matter to draw the soil up along the row or to turn it up with a wheel hoe.

It is well known that beans should not be worked when wet with dew or rain. Contact with the vines at this time promotes rust and is the cause of the disfigured pods so frequently seen in some home gardens where this precaution is either not understood or forgotten. Don't walk through the bean patch when the vines are wet if you don't want to spoil a lot of pods.

PERPETUATE FORESTS BY SELECTIVE LOGGING

Forests that last indefinitely and sawmills sawing up these forests without ever running out of logs are pictured by the forest service, United States department of agriculture, in reporting the results of a study of selective logging in the northern hardwoods of the lake states.

The key to perpetual timber production is selective logging, the forest service states, which means a partial cutting of the forest involving judicious selection of trees to be felled, so as to perpetuate and improve the forest and at the same time maintain or increase the profit. Lumbermen in the lake states with no virgin timber in prospect for cutting after present holdings are exhausted, must choose between going out of business in a comparatively short time or taking steps to put their remaining stands on a self-perpetuating basis.

Costs of logging and milling as determined by the study indicate that in typical lake state forests trees less than 12 inches in diameter are unprofitable to convert into lumber. By taking only the trees larger than that size the lumberman obtains a better profit and at the same time leaves many thrifty trees to grow for the next cutting and reseed the bare places. In the region investigated, successive "crops" of lumber can probably be harvested on this basis every 25 years to 30 years.

Technical Bulletin No. 169, Selective Logging in the Northern Hardwoods of the Lake States, which gives the results of the study, may be procured by writing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

TRADING SLUMPED TO SMALLEST VOLUME IN PAST TWO YEARS

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—Professionals had the stock market all to themselves today, but found it hard to keep busy. Trading slumped to the smallest volume in two years, totalling only 1,231,000 shares, representing more or less routine short covering and profit-taking. The apathy was laid at the door of the impending holiday.

After opening a little higher, the market ran into selling which centered on U. S. Steel. When that stock refused to break below yesterday's close, traders were satisfied to take a conservative position and a covering movement began throughout the list. Under this influence prices rose consistently until late in the last hour when profit-taking reduced the improvement, leaving net gains of one to two points in many active shares.

A comprehensive view of the liquidation during June, was made available in the monthly figures of New York stock exchange member borrowings. This tabulation, which is broader in scope than the federal reserve loan compilation, disclosed a reduction of $1,020,120,623 in collateral borrowings last month, bringing the total down to $3,727,711,28 or nearly half of the aggregate a year ago.

The weekly reviews of the iron and steel industry seemed somewhat more optimistic. Iron Age reasoned that the holiday shutdowns of many plants would "promote the liquidation of manufactured goods in stock and clear the way for fresh purchases of materials." The periodical also reported that resistance to price pressure was becoming more determined and noted "a growing belief that the market is scraping bottom." American metal markets said that with the general rate of ingot production down to an average of about 60 per cent for the first half of July "the bad news in steel is probably all out."

Commodity prices were irregular, but wheat closed nearly a cent higher and corn was up 7-8 to 1 7-8. Cotton sagged during the early trading but recovered on short covering and made small net changes. July sugar broke into new low ground for all time at 1.22 cents a pound and the general market was 3 to 6 points off at the close.

Further indications of unsettlement in copper were seen in the offerings by a few custom smelters at 11 1-2 cents a pound, a cut of a half cent. Other custom smelters and all producers, however, continued to quote the recent price, and the reduction by the minority was generally regarded as significant.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—Professional activity in a few pool favorites barely kept trading alive in today's curb market. Total sales were 442,600 shares, the lowest for a full session in two years.

Prices were generally steady to firm. Electric Bond and Share was again an active feature. It was bid up 3 points, again crossing 80, but lost about half its gain before the close. United Gas new rose fractionally in active trading. Missouri Kansas Pipe Line gave the best account of itself in weeks, rising about 3 points to 26 1-2, then slipping back a point. It reached 36 1-4 in its rise of a few weeks ago.

A strong spot in the industrials, was Hazeltine, which shot up six points, getting above 30. The radio group generally was dull. Among the foreign issues, Marconi Wireless, dropped more than 2 points to the low of the year on declaration of a smaller dividend, and cables and wireless sagged on omission of class A and B dividends. The industrial and specialty group was generally quiescent. Deere rallied a point and Technicolor again eased. Knott corporation dropped 3 points to a new 1930 low.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 2—(AP)—Disturbed by a reported tremendous shortage in this season's French wheat crops as compared with last year, the wheat market here, went suddenly upgrade today. Cables were received indicating a yield of only 257,000,000 bushels, for 1930 showing 64,000,000 bushels reduction from the 1929 total, and standing out sharply against a 5 year average of 280,000,000 bushels. Active purchasing of wheat future deliveries here, was also stimulated by relative scantiness of primary receipts today in the United States, and by persistent advices that farmers were refusing to sell as freely as in general has been the rule at harvest.

More than overcoming early setbacks, the Chicago wheat market closed nervous at almost the day's top level, 1-2 at 1c per bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 5-8 at 3-8c advanced, oats a shade to 1-4c up, and provisions varying from 15c decline to a rise of 5c.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)— A higher price level was reached by a wide list of investment bonds in a firm market today. Trading however, was dull, and the volume dropped more than $1,000,000 from yesterday.

In some instances, impressive improvement was effected by bonds in both the domestic and foreign lists as reinvestment demand was felt. Latin American issues were especially strong among foreign bonds, and carrier issues both prime and secondary liens, and convertibles found favor in the domestic group.

Only a few first grade rails were very active and higher. Improvement was more marked among less active issues. Gains of from 1-2 to 3-4 were frequent and in a few instances the improvement exceeded a point. Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5s soared 4 points, Soo Line 5s, nearly 4 and Hocking Valley, 4 1-2s, 1 1-4. Atchison general 4s, a leading savings bank issue, duplicated their high of the year, and then sagged a half point to lower than yesterday. Several other popular prime liens eased fractionally in thin trading. The Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2, was the most active convertible bond and higher prices were the rule.

Broadway Theater

Long search for an actor with the right personality and voice to create an outstanding character in "Lummox" on the screen ended when Herbert Brenon selected William Collier, Jr., for the role of "Wally Wallenstein" in the all-talking production released by United Artists and now showing at Warner's Broadway.

The character in Fannie Hurst's novel of the husband whose shrewish wife attempts to turn him against his own mother was one of the most difficult he had ever been called upon to fill, Brenon said, and young Collier was signed only after innumerable tests had been made of Hollywood and New York leading men. "Buster" Collier was one of the first successful silent screen players to win new fame in talking pictures. He has given notable performances in several dialogue features.

In "Lummox" he is a member of a cast of well known screen and stage players that includes Winifred Westover, who has the title role; Ben Lyon, Edna Murphy, Myrtle Stedman, Clara Langsner, Dorothy Janis, Danny O'Shea, Torben Meyer, Myrta Bonillas, Cosmo Kyrle Bellew, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Bobby Ullman, Fan Bourke and Ida Darling.

Palace Theatre.

A holiday double-feature bill which combines thrills and fun will be shown at the Palace theatre today and tomorrow for the last times. On this bill are two stellar productions. One is "Sweet Mama" with none other than Alice White in the lead supported by David Manners and Kenneth Thomson. The other great production is "On the Border" which features Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonder dog of the world and Armida, petite Mexican dancer.

"Sweet Mama" is a combination of gangster melodrama and spicy inside stuff on the intimate life of chorus girls. The story opens with a group of chorus girls huddled around a stove in the railroad station of a small town. The show had flopped. The manager had no money. Goldie, one of the girls in the show, Alice White, gets a telegram from one of her girl friends back home saying that Jimmy, her sweetheart, is in jail and needs to be bailed out.

Rin-Tin-Tin has come to Norwich in a talking picture for the first time in his career. No one should miss seeing this wonderful animal who has been trained to have exceptional ability and every child in town will want to see this picture and then try the same thing on his own dog when he goes home.

"On the Level," a dramatic comedy about riveteers and racketeers with Victor McLaglen and William Harrigan, supported by Lillyan Tashman, opens Saturday at the Palace theatre where it will be shown through Tuesday of next week.

CLAIM U. S. ARMY CARRIED POTATO BUG TO FRANCE

PARIS—(AP)—America is to blame for the ravages in France, caused bby the doryphora, alias the potato-bug.

So states a bill signed by 67 deputies from the rural districts and declaring war unon the spud-devouring insects.

The bill comprises 27 articles, each of them describing some scientific and effective method of destroying the pests. Agricultural engineers and chemists are of the opinion that the doryphora will find those 27 articles tougher to chew than the luscious potato.

"Brought to France in the supplies of the American army," the bill states as an acknowledged, indisputable fact, "the doryphora was first signalled in the Gironde department within proximity of the American war camps."

The oldest name in OIL

The oil that lubricates your automobile motor and makes possible today's motor car achievements has a brief but thrilling and dramatic background.

It was less than three-quarters of a century ago that Colonel Edwin L. Drake conceived the idea that the oily fluid which occasionally seeped from the rock of Western Pennsylvania's hills could be collected in quantities by drilling into that rock. With financial backing of only two hundred dollars he set out to prove his theory. Often he was branded as wild or visionary. Many drillers refused to undertake so fanatical a venture. His equipment was crude, his methods primitive. But his perseverance won, and in August of 1859 he brought in the world's first oil well, gave birth to an industry that has changed the habits of half the civilized world.

Today sees one of the most modern oil refineries in the world located on the ground where Colonel Drake first drilled for oil. Its product, Penn Drake Oil, is a double-mileage lubricant in fact as well as in name. Buy it where you see the sign of the first oil well.

REQUIREMENTS

HE
Must be a man who will my master be,
Who will control as well as worship me:
Strong, patient, gentle, full of love and life,
Bound willy-nilly to make me his wife.
Shy, timid wooing will not win my heart;
"Nothing," he'll say, "shall keep our lives apart!"
He will insist, I'll hesitate, and then
I shall surrender to my King of Men.

At 20
HE
Must be a man who wants me for his own,
A man who's thrilled by me, by me alone,
Who has no eyes for any other girl,
But whom the thought of me sets in a whirl,
Who's good and wise and fond and brave and true,
Who'll scorn denial when he comes to woo.

At 25
HE
Must be a man, loving and kind, and true,
Industrious and saving, rather well-to-do;
Whose dearest wish all through his afterlife
Will be to make me happy as his wife.

At 30
HE
Must be a man who joy in marriage seeks;
And I must not be too coy when he speaks.

At 35
HE
Must be a man.
—Somerville Journal.

THE ROAD

Because our lives are cowardly and sly,
Because we do not dare to take or give,
Because we scowl and pass each other by,
We do not live; we do not dare to live.

We dive, each man, into his secret house,
And bolt the door, and listen in affright,
Each timid man beside a timid spouse,
With timid children huddled out of sight.
Kissing in secret, fighting secretly!
We crawl and hide like vermin in a hole,
Under the bravery of sun and sky,
We flash our meannesses of face and soul.

Let us go out and walk upon the road,
And quit for evermore the brick-built den,
And lock and key, the hidden, sly abode
That separates us from our fellow-men.

And by contagion of the sun we may
Catch at a spark from that primeval fire,
And learn that we are better than our clay,
And equal to the peaks of our desire.
—James Stephens.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Did you make the debating team?"
"N-n-no. They s-s-said I w-w-wasn't t-t-tall enough."—Jack o'Lantern.

"Mary, if you misbehave like that you will make your mother angry at you."

Little Mary—That don't scare me, she ain't my wife.—Detroit News.

"That means fight where I come from, Stranger."

"Well, why don't you fight?"

" 'Cause I ain't where I come from."Purple Cow.

"Why don't you try to keep out of jail?"

"I did, mum, but I got two months extra last time for trying to resist an officer."—Whirlwind.

"Know anything about backyard farming?"

"What is it you wish to know?"

"What's a good topsoil for broken crockery?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Visitor (looking over fraternity house)—Don't you know roller towels are against the law?

Brother—Oh, yes, but that one was put up before the law was passed.—Northwestern Purple Parrot.

The court-martial was about to open. The defendant leaned over and whispered to an officer: "How long will this affair last?"

The officer whispers back: "About two hours for me and about two years for you."—Army & Navy Journal.

The new treasurer wrote a letter, and 50 per cent of those in arrears to the church paid up; he wrote another letter and all but one paid. Finally he wrote one more and the last man sent in his check. Shortly afterward the pastor was invited to dinner at the man's home.

"You have a new treasurer at the church now, haven't you?" inquired the host.

"Yes," answered the pastor, undecided as to how his parishioners felt toward him.

"He writes a nice letter," remarked the host, "except that he can't spell."

"Is that so?" said the minister.

"Yes, he ought to be corrected on that," said the host seriously. "He spelled 'skunk' with a 'c' and had two 's's' in 'lousy.' "—Exchange.

THOS. F. MORTON, NEW LONDON, INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY BAY STATE AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 2.—Thomas F. Morton, former well-known newspaper man and residing at Station 6, Waterford, was injured this evening when struck by an automobile opposite his home, sustaining a fractured right leg and numerous lacerations of the forehead and face. He is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

Anthony Augusta, Rye road, Falmouth, Mass., driver of the automobile was arrested on a technical charge of reckless driving and furnished a surety on his bond of $500 for his appearance in Waterford town court Monday next. The case will probably be continued at that time pending Morton's recovery.

Morton, night clerk at the Hotel Winthrop, left his home to come to this city about 6:30. He had walked but a short distance when he started to cross the highway, presumably to board a bus to New London. As he made the turn to cross the road, he failed to observe the automobile being driven at an estimated speed of 35 miles, stepped in front of the swiftly moving car and was struck with great force, being hurled a distance of about 10 feet. Augusta and other drivers went to the assistance of Morton, who was carried to the side of the side of the highway. Realizing that Morton was painfully injured more particularly because he could not use his right leg, he was placed in one of the automobiles and taken to the hospital.

WHITE KEPT MONEY FOUND BY HIS SMALL SON

Harry White, painter, residing on Howard street, was arrested this morning by Detective Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh and charged with theft. The charge eminated from the finding of $160 on the Waterford circus grounds June 10, which had been stolen by a pickpocket from Michael O'Neil, Ashcraft road and former New London police officer, and then dropped by the thief when O'Neill and Sergeant John Casey, Norwich police department, seized the pickpocket. The pickpocket was released for the money was not found on his person, but was picked up by the little son of White and given to the parent. White gave his son $10 of the money and with the balance purchased a second-hand automobile. He will be given a hearing in Waterford town court next Monday.

CHILDREN WITH MATCHES MAY HAVE STARTED FIRE

NEW LONDON, July 2—A fire, presumably started by children, caused damage to the residence at 25 Brewer street, occupied by Willis C. Babcock and Fred B. Goss, this evening. The damage will not exceed $200 and is confined to the upper part of the frame dwelling. Shortly before 6:30 o'clock residents of the street observed the roof ablaze and an alarm was sent in from Box 25, corner of Bank and Tilley streets, Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and four pieces of apparatus responding. So brisk was the fire that a stream of water was necessary to subdue it. A hole was burned through the roof and the attic scorched. Children had been playing in the attic during the late afternoon and is believed had matches that started the fire.

LAWYER'S SON IGNORES LAW AND LAW'S COMMAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 2—John Shields, Crescent street, Norwich, and son of Attorney Thomas M. Shields, was arrested here this morning by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell charged with violation of the city and state automobile laws and all because Shields refused to obey a summons to appear in the police court for trial. Shields was in New London Sunday night and driving an automobile. He was observed by Officer Cockell to pass an automatic danger signal and when the autoist was stopped and interrogated, Shields was arrested, charged with a double offense for he did not possess a driver's license. Shields was ordered to explain in court Monday and this he failed to do. The case was continued until today and when Shields again failed to present himself a warrant for his arrest was issued by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer. Shields is employed on the motor launch Nelseco, running between Norwich, New London and Block Island, so that when the boat reached New London, Shields was arrested by Cockell and escorted to police headquarters. There Shields was compelled to provide a surety on his bond of $100 and he will be given a hearing in court tomorrow. Shields' bondsman is Ricardo Morgan, brother of Attorney G. Curtis Morgan.

EAST GREAT PLAIN MAN DISCHARGED BY COURT

Monica Jubrey, residing on Golden street, was charged with conducting a disorderly house and was fined $60 and costs. William Perkins and John Lovrancik, sailors and George Cross, 115 North Bank street, were charged with frequenting and Russell Morgan, East Great Plain, was also arrested being held as a witness against Mrs. Jubrey. When presented in court the cases against the frequenters were disposed of by nolle and Morgan was discharged. The arrests were made late last night when Thomas Dougherty, 32 Golden street, made complaint because of the incessant brawling and loud talk in the apartment of Mrs. Jubrey. A raiding squad in charge of Sergeant Patrick Murphy, went to the house and the entire gang was arrested.

In raids last night the police went first to the resort, 24 Goshen street, conducted by Joseph Piero and there 10 cases of home-brew beer, a small quantity of whiskey an da half dozen cases of whiskey bottles were found and seized. Piero, who has been arrested before on charges of violation of the liquor law, was taken into custody and charged on two counts of violation of the law, keeping with intent to sell and possession. In the police court this morning Piero was fined $200 and costs on each count. The raiders were Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey, Patrolmen Louis Wheeler and George McCaskey.

Another raiding squad went to the residence of Harry Scheinmann, 78 Washington street, long reputed to be a dispensary of liquor. Scheinmann and his wife have been prosecuted for liquor violation several times. Last night, however, the raiders did not find evidence upon which an arrest could be made. The last resort the raiders gave attention to was the club room of Jack Halpern, Main street, a drinking room that has been raided many times and three times within a year. The raiding force was in charge of Sergeant Samuel Hick and when the officers entered the club room Halpern and several friends were seated there, but a diligent search failed to result in liquor or beer being found.

Women Fined—Man Freed

Connie Burt, colored, proprietress of a house on Hill street frequented by blacks and whites and which has been raided numerous times, was charged in the city court today with conducting a disorderly house. Mary Washington, 35, of New York, colored and Clotilde Mason, 20, of Mobile, Ala., also colored, together with Reginald Welden, 19, marine stationed at the submarine base and white, were charged with frequenting. The Burt woman was fined $100 and costs and the Negress frequenters were fined $35 and costs each. The charge against Welden was nolled.

Flapper Wife Gets Jail Sentence

Mrs. Helen Morrison, 22, wife of Donald A. Morrison, a member of the crew of U. S. S. Lonsdale, submarine base, was charged with lascivious carriage. She was sentenced to 60 days in jail by Judge Daniel M. Cronin, but execution of the sentence was suspended. The woman and William Cooke, also a sailor stationed at the base, were arrested last Sunday by Patrolmen George Perkins and William Riordan when the pair were found occupying a room in a lodging house on Green street. Cooke the next day was in court and his case was continued until August 2nd. The arrest of the sailor and the woman resulted when Morrison, who is estranged from his wife, was informed that Mrs. Morrison and Cooke had occupied a room in the Green street house the greater part of the night. Cooke when arrested said that he was unaware that his female companion was married.

Remitted 50 of Fine

Edmund L. Goodhue, Station 12, Waterford, was charged with automobile theft. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs, but Judge Cronin ordered $50 of the fine remitted. Goodhue was intoxicated Monday afternoon and during the early evening while roaming through Pequot avenue, helped himself to the automobile owned by Anthony Musco, 113 Pequot avenue, and which was parked in front of the owner's residence. Goodhue drove for several hours inspite of the fact that he was under the influence of liquor.

Punished For Horseplay

Harry E. Russell and Harvey F. Wilson, members of the Coast Guard, were charged with intoxication. Russell was fined $15 and costs and paid, but Wilson, who was fined $25 and costs was unable to pay and went to jail. Russell and Wilson were on Crystal avenue late last night and as they passed through the avenue, the sailors obtained amusement by hurling into the street ash barrels on the curb awaiting collection of their contents by dry garbage collectors, the refuse being scattered in all directions. A resident of the avenue informed the police of the conduct of the bluejackets and the pair was arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran and Patrolman Carlos Stone.

YOUNG LOCAL TOUGHS FACING REFORMATORY

Three New London youths, who appear to have a mania for stealing, today face good chances of being committed to Cheshire reformatory, especially one, arrested last night who was charged with theft, for he already has another charge pending against him. He is Joseph Sammatara, 19, of 121 Shaw street. The other youths are Stephen Delaporta, 19, of 8 Archer court and Cornelius McCarthy, 18, of 89 Howard street. The boys were arrested last night by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith for a series of thefts at the Hotel Griswold grounds and pier June 20th.

On boat race eve the tender of the "Sally Ann, 2 a power yacht was stolen while moored at the hotel pier. Several days later the boat was found on the bank of Shaw's cove, rear of Howard street, stripped. The outboard motor had been removed and everything else of value on the boat. Sammatara and Joseph Vocalino, 19, the latter of 53 Prest street, were arrested for the theft and the loot taken from the boat was found in the cellar of the former's home. The case against Sammatara and Vocalino will be called in the police court this week.

The same night of the theft of the boat, other thefts were reported to the Groton and New London police. Among one of the victims of the crooks was Charles Lockwood, Evanstown, Ill. Lockwood was one of several autoists, who suffered the loss of bags or grips from automobiles while the cars were parked on the hotel grounds. No trace of the thieve or the plunder was obtained until a few nights ago when Sergeant Smith was driving on the Eastern Point road, he observed an auto emerge from the yard of the Atlantic Fisheries and in it was Delaporta and Joseph Mugovero, the latter another New London youth. Having knowledge of the reputation of Delaporta, Smith decided to question the former and Delaporta admitted having driven to the fisheries yard and said he left there Sammatara, who went after the stolen boat. Further questioning revealed that Delaporta, McCarthy and Sammatara also stole the bag belonging to Lockwood and after bringing the bag to New London they decided to share its contents. Whatever apparel was desired was taken by the youths and the bag was then carried to the Fog Plain road, Waterford, and secreted in a field. When Delaporta revealed the hiding place of the bag Smith went there and recovered it. The apparel in the bag when taken was valued at $300.

The youths will be presented in Groton town court next Monday.

SCRANTON MOTORIST FINED—RAN INTO IRA E. PORTER

WESTERLY, July 2—J. Warren Slocum, 25, of 819 Electric street, Scranton, Pa., was before Clerk Herbert T. Clark, acting judge, in a special session of the Third District court Wednesday night, charged with the operation of an automobile so as to endanger life and limb. He was brought before the court by State Trooper Donald E. Symonds, following an accident about 3 p. m. just east of the Brightman filling station on the Boston Post road, Charleston.

Ira E. Porter, R. F. D., Westerly, walking on the highway in the same direction was struck by the auto operated by Slocum and knocked down badly fracturing his right leg. Slocum was with a party in two other autos who had been at Narragansett and were proceeding towards Westerly. Following the accident he speeded to the cars ahead so that spectators thought he was running away. Word was sent to Westerly and Police Officer Robert Kessel was sent on his way to intercept the driver. When he arrived he found the defendant with a first aid kit endeavoring to assist the injured man, who was taken later in the ambulance to the Westerly hospital. The state trooper was called and Slocum was brought to Westerly. He testified that after he had glanced to see someone of his party asleep on the front seat with him, he looked back to the road, to see Porter in the highway ahead of him. His car was to the left of the center line and too late to avoid the accident.

He pleaded guilty and was fined $75 and costs.

Milk Bottle Caused Accident.

J. Ernest Young, 33, of 21 Summer street, employed by the South County Public Service Co., suffered painful serious injuries as the result of an automobile accident while on his way to his cottage at Misquamicut, shortly after 7 o'clock Wednesday evening. When in front of the residence of Constantine Brusa, 117 Granite street, a milk bottle on the seat beside him tipped over and as he reached for the bottle a front wheel struck a stone. He lost control of his Plymouth coach and it crashed into an electric light pole by the roadside. The lamp was knocked to the street and the car bounded back 15 feet from the pole, badly smashing the front end, throwing the driver against the steering wheel and windshield.

He was taken from the car in a dazed condition by Albert Smith, Jr., and Warren T. Sheffield. When Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called he found Young to be suffering with injuries to his chest, a cut on the back of his scalp and abrasions about the face from broken windshield glass. After receiving medical attention he was taken to his home in Misquamicut. Police fficer Charles Button was called to investigate the accident.

Third Driver Heedless.

Three automobiles figured in a collision at the junction of School and Elm streets about 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. The auto driven by Probate Judge Edward M. Burke of Westerly, stopped for a traffic light, with two cars closely following, but the last did not stop until it struck the car ahead and this, when driven against the Burke car, got a smashed radiator. Lieutenant George H. Champlin checked up on this accident.

TEN-YEAR RACE STARTED BY POPULATION 'TWINS'

MANSFIELD, Ohio—(AP)—This city and Waukegan, Ill., discovered to be the population "twins" of the United States, are on their marks for a race to last 10 years.

The chambers of commerce of the two towns, both of which were found by the census takers to have 33,434 inhabitants, will fill the cheering sections.

The coincidence of exactly equal populations startled the compilers. But recounts showed the tabulations to be correct.

The challenge to the 10-year race, to win population supremacy in the census of 1940, was issued by Waukegan officials and promptly accepted by Mansfield.

BIG WHEAT CROP REPLACES GEORGIA PEACH ORCHARD

FORT VALLEY, Ga. —(AP)— Land which five years ago supported one of the finest peach orchards of the Fort Valley belt this season produced a bumper wheat crop.

Inroads of peach disease and other enemies of Georgia orchards cut down productiveness, so the owners took the trees and turned to wheat growing.

The 675 acres produced 35 bushels to the acre with one variety of wheat, a type of corn of high yield and qual- The farm will plant 1,500 acres of wheat next year.

RESTORED HOME OF LEE TO HAVE NO FALSE NOTE

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The restored home of General Robert E. Lee will be one of a fine old Southern family of the period rather than a large museum of antiquities.

Major General DeWitt, the new quartermaster general, says the work is being vigorously carried on by the war department with every possible effort being made to get authoritative information. The department wants the restoration to capture those times when it was occupied by the Lee and Custis families.

In addition to providing for the restoration of the building proper, congress contemplated complete refurnishing and authorized acceptance of furniture donations. It has been definitely decided, General DeWitt says, to accept only genuine originals of the proper period. An accepted article will carry the donor's name.

ELLICOTTVILLE, N. Y.—(AP)—For the past 91 years a 221-year-old bronze bell has rung forth a daily summons to worship from the belfry of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church here.

Cast at Malaga, Spain, in 1708, it was for some time a part of the chimes in a Spanish monastery. During an insurrection the monastery was destroyed by fire but the bell was salvaged and brought to America with several others a ballast in the hold of a vessel which docked at New York City in 1836.

Two years later it found its way to this village.

GREENEVILLE

Word was received Wednesday of the death of Dr. Andrew J. McLaughlin, the son of Andrew McLaughlin of 127 Central avenue, who died at Providence Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Dr. McLaughlin practiced for 30 years in Providence and was a surgeon at St. Joseph's hospital in that city. He was born in Norwich, June 27, 1875, the son of Andrew and Rose McLaughlin. He was a graduate of Norman Free Academy and of Columbia university, after which he went to Providence to practice his profession. In New York city he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Loftus of North Adams, Mass. Besides his wife and father, Dr. McLaughlin is survived by one sister, Miss Mary L. McLaughlin of Central avenue, and four brothers, Frank R. McLaughlin of Prospect street, Dr. William C. McLaughlin of Danielson, Dr. Harry J. McLaughlin of Jewett City, and Attorney Charles J. McLaughlin of Hartford. Dr. McLaughlin belonged to the American College of Surgeons.

Happy Hour Patriotic Service.

A pleasant service last Sunday evening was held at the Third Baptist church, an unusually large audience being present. Several graduates of the eighth grade grammar school reproduced what they gave in the recent commencement program. Anthony Layko spoke on "America First," Miss Jennie Dombrowski recited "The Little Bird Tells," and Miss Elsie Laycock, Miss Lillian Hill and others sang in a chorus entitled "The Roses Tell of Love." The pastor, Rev. William J. Sly gave a short, practical sermon on "What It Means to Follow Jesus Christ Today." This idea of a happy hour evening service each Sunday from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock is proving popular with the increasing number who attend. Next Sunday evening a patriotic boy's camp service will be held in which some half dozen boys who attended the boys' camp at Rainbow will take part in music, songs, choruses and short speeches on "What Helps Me to Become an American Patriot." Stereopticon pictures of the camp will be shown and the following boys will speak: Lee Quinley, Leroy Sebastian, Charles Hamlin, Wayne Rathburn, Gustave Semberg and Elmer Schiene. The pastor will speak on "Patriotic Friendship."

Rev. William J. Sly, Ph. D., pastor of the Third Baptist church is attending the boys' camp at Rainbow, Conn., and teaching each day a class in "Boy Loyalties." Leroy Sebatian and Lee Quinley are at the camp enjoying swimming, nature study and the other sports and studies of the camp. They will return on Thursday. Rev. Mr. Sly will be at the camp for ten days.

FOUGHT POLICE AFTER AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Stanley M. Besade, 42, of No. 158 Mt. Pleasant street, driving a Dort touring car, crashed into and damaged a wooden fence on the Ward property at the corner of Dunham and West Thames street about 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, but did not stop to ascertain the damage occasioned and drove away. A complaint was made to police headquarters and Captain Thomas P. Murphy detailed Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officer Clifford Crary to investigate.

The driver of the car, owned by Mary Besade of No. 158 Mt. Pleasant street, was found at his home and was said to be in fighting spirits, resisting the officers when they tried to arrest him. It was discovered by the police that after Besade left the scene of the accident he drove onto Peck street, where he slid his brakes for a distance of 45 feet and narrowly escaped plowing into an embankment.

At the police station he was booked on three charges, resisting an officer, driving a machine while under the influence of liquor and evading responsibility. He is under bonds of $500 and locked up. His case will be tried in the city court this (Thursday) morning.

There is a previous record of conviction for drunken driving against Besade, it is understood.

TAFTVILLE HORRIBLES PARADE WILL FEATURE NIGHT BEFORE THE FOURTH

The only special celebration of the night before the Fourth in the town that will in any way tend to keep the local residents at home will be presented this (Thursday) evening in the village of Taftville, whose interested residents are attempting to revive this old-time affair, one that was always looked forward to with interest. The real and entertaining feature of the event will be the horribles parade, for which suitable prizes will be given the floats and horribles.

A large number of organizations in the village have already made known their intentions to enter floats, both beautiful and horrible in appearance, while individuals and sections of the village are to be represented. The Fancy Corner section, which is always well represented in such affairs, will have a float, a horrible one, that they claim will outdo anything ever seen in Taftville. A bright spot of the parade will be Coxie's army, a contribution of Peter Gallan post, Taftville.

The committee in charge announced Wednesday evening that all floats and marchers are expected to be at Taft's station about 9:30 so that the line of march can get underway promptly at 10 o'clock.

From the lower end of the village the parade will move up Norwich avenue to South B street, to Hunters avenue and Merchants avenue, down Providence street, to disband at Weller's store. George Stone, Legionnaire, is marshal and state policemen from the Groton barracks will be the escort. Members of the Taftville fire department will do traffic duty at intersections. Red fire will be provided those participating.

The Fourth of July Parade association, which is sponsoring this event, has also planned to have a band concert on the tennis court in the rear of the Taftville Congregational church on Fourth of July evening. The concert to be given from 8 to 9 o'clock by Swahn's band will be followed by dancing until 11 o'clock. The band will also provide music for dancing and will take part in the parade.

In order to have a large representation in the parade the association is again inviting all organizations and individuals who have not been previously asked to participate in the parade.

BARBERS MUST PASS EXAMINATION FOR LICENSE

Any man or woman who wants a shave or a haircut can now go into the barber shop or beauty emporium with a feeling that they will get what is coming to them and get it proper. For under a new state law all persons interested in handling the razor or the scissors must now be examined and then licensed. The first examination was held at New Haven last week. Ten passed, nine were put back for another examination after they have had more experience and ten were thrown out by the board as unquestionably inefficient to become barbers. How they are going to get the more experience doesn't matter.

The womenfolks have been protected for some years through the state board of hairdressers and cosmeticians, a high sounding title, and kept up by the board to its highest point. But lately the women got going into male barber shops and thus admittedly upset the usual routine. To take care of the ladies inefficient employes were brought in and when a mere male with a two days' growth on his face entered he was lathered and scraped to a fare-thee-well.

Finally the barbers' union got after the matter and had a bill passed whereby now everyone connected with a barber shop or an emporium of beauty must be licensed as were those taking care of the women folks. To this board all apprentices must apply before they can even scrape the face.

Barbers who had licenses before the act went into effect do not have to take the examination but anyone else who now wants to give a close shave will have to. The state board consists of Joseph Arena, chairman; Bigaio Salvatore, secretary, and Frank Bosco.

JUSTICE DISMISSES CASE AGAINST THEODORE KELSEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

MONTVILLE, July 2—The case against Theodore Kelsey of Montville Center, employed by Palmer Bros. Co., of New London, quilt manufacturers, and who was arrested by Officer Howard Lamphere after the latter and Constable Robert Kennerson visited Kelsey's home and found cloth claimed to come from the plant upon complaint of Manager Lyman, was tried before the Montville justice court this afternoon. Mr. Lyman looked over the evidence and said that the cloth did come from his plant outside of a few pieces.

George Beckwith, of Montville Center, employed by the same concern testified that the cloth belonged to him and that Mr. Kelsey boarded with him. Mr. Beckwith testified that he bought the cloth from Mr. Abel, boss of the cloth room and Mr. McLaughlin, who has charge of the shipping room. They testified that they have not sold any cloth in the past 14 months. Justice of the Peace Church dismissed the case against Theodore Kelsey, when the evidence showed that Mr. Beckwith owned the cloth, which he claimed he bought in the winter of 1928 and 1929.

APPLICATIONS EXCEED TRAINING CAMPS CAPACITY

Applications for enrolment in the citizens military training camps in the First Corps Area have been received in such large numbers during the past few weeks that the total number of applications on file exceeds the capacity of the camps.

Officials at the army base in Boston state that there is little or no probability that young men applying at this late date can be accommodated.

Saturday, July 5, has been set as the opening date for all the New England camps. On that date nearly 3,500 young men will begin their one month's instruction and recreation at Fort Adams, R. I.; Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; Fort McKinley, Maine and Camp Devens, Mass.

The entire first day will be devoted to properly equipping the trainees, assigning them to their respective units, and sports of various kinds.

Actual instruction begins on Monday, July 7th, and will continue until Saturday, August 2nd.

PLAYGROUNDS OPEN WITH RECORD ATTENDANCE

Present indications point to a record attendance at the Norwich playgrounds this season if the turnout at the opening two days is any criterion, according to Superintendent Earle E. Brigham. These two days have eclipsed the attendance of any opening days in the history of the recreation commission.

During the early part of next week the instructors are to hold a meeting when a general schedule for the season will be arranged to consist of baseball, volleyball and field hockey league and tracks field and swimming meets as in former years. Superintendent Brigham was in conference Wednesday morning with Miss Katherine Farrell, industrial work committee, drawing up a schedule of that sort of work for the season.

ADDING GREEN LIGHT TO TRAFFIC SIGNAL

The traffic light system at Shannon's corner will have four lights instead of three when repairs which are now being made are completed, which will call for one change in the movement of traffic. An additional green light is being added to the system, which at present has one green, one red and an amber light. The new green light will regulate traffic on right turns, traffic moving only when it is on. At the present time traffic can make right turns on either the green and red.

The policemen on the corner were out in the street doing traffic duty Wednesday while the operation of the signal was suspended during the changes.

BUSINESS DEPRESSION HITS THE CITY COURT

The net receipts of the city court for April, May and June were less than $850 in comparison with over $1,100 for the preceding three months, according to figures issued by Clerk John H. Barnes. The gross receipts for the quarter ending June 30 totalled $2,715.84 and the disbursements $1,872.05, leaving net receipts of $843.79, which has been turned over to City Treasurer Charles Avery.

The reason for the decrease in receipts for this quarter was laid to the present unemployment situation and business depression, according to the opinion of the police court officials.

WAS GIVEN DISCHARGE ON RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE

Charged with reckless driving James L. Osgood, 56, an employe at the Norwich state hospital, was presented in the city court Wednesday morning. He was discharged by Judge H. H. Pettis after hearing the testimony in the case. CHILD SLIGHTLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTO

The driver of the car, which is owned by James A. Kimball of No. 15 Elizabeth street, is said to have been blameless for the accident, as it was reported that the child ran directly into the path of the car. Mr. Geer stopped his car within a few feet after striking the boy, who was attended for a cut on the right side of his head by Dr. Louis T. Cassidy. The accident was investigated by Officer Clifford Crary.

FEDERAL AGENTS SEIZE 225 CASES OF HOME BREW IN NORWICH RAIDS

A squad of federal agents with the assistance of local police raided a "key" club at No. 90 Water street, upstairs, and its alleged manufactory located in a building in the rear of No. 204 West Main street, about 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and seized a large quantity of home-brew beer in cases in addition to the equipment for making the contraband. One of the LeDoux brothers, said to be Ernest, who claims ownership of both places, gave himself up after the raids, through his attorney, Thomas Shields. He will be presented before United States Commissioner Earle E. Mathewson of this city.

At the "key" club the prohibition officials found 16 cases of beer, and $51.75 in cash in the till, but no one was in sight, not even the barkeeper. A window in the clubroom, which was open, however, led the raiding officers to believe that the barkeep made a hasty retreat from the building by this exit, when he surmised that all was not as it should be. There was a bar in the place. No liquor was discovered.

The manufacturing plant gave up a much larger haul, as there 200 cases of beer were seized with a large quantity of brew mash and a big assortment of equipment used in making the home-brew variety concoction. The latter included capping machines, boilers, and other appliances. Neither the employes nor those in charge were at the place when the officers entered. Trucks were used in removing the haul.

The raiding squad comprised Chief Prohibition Enforcement Agent Stanton L. Briggs of Willimantic and Prohibition Agent Harry W. Avery of South Windham, with federal agents from Hartford and the local police.

SENATE PASSED VETERANS' RELIEF BILL LAST NIGHT

World War Pension Bill Signed By President Hoover—Senate Acceptance of Lower House Rates, As Agreed Upon In Conference Between the Two Branches, Ended Dispute—Report of Conferees Had Been Approved 342 to 3 By the House—Senate Vote Was 48 to 14—Congress Votes to Adjourn.

WASHINGTON, July 3—(AP)—Congress tonight gave to disabled veterans of the World war who can not trace their injuries and diseases to war service a pension ranging from $12 to $40 a month. Sacrificing its previous stand for higher pensions in the face of a veto warning from President Hoover, the senate voted shortly after 9 p. m. to accept the house pension rates as modified earlier in the day/by the conferees. Democrats and republican independents served notice they would continue the fight for "more adequate relief."

The vote was 48 to 14, with many of those supporting the bill saying they were doing so only because the closing hours of the session prevented carrying on the contest for a wider pension range.

Heeding the warning of the president early in the forenoon, senate conferees on the legislation acceded to house demands that they abandon their position in favor of the $10 to $60 pension rates written into the measure by senate democrats and republican independents.

Shortly after, the house approved the report 342 to 3, but the senate reverberated with long and wailing protests before the final vote was reached after nearly seven hours' debate.

The president's views on the legislation were conveyed in a leter to Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader. He said the senate amendments added to the measure "probably imply an increase in Texas" and were discriminatory.

One by one senate democrats and republican independents scored the contentions of the executive and termed the bill "legislation by threat."

Senator Watson said the senate conferees had yielded on the higher rates when it was "obvious" that there would be no veterans' legislation unless the house rates were accepted.

Senator Connally, democrat, Texas, who, with Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, led the fight for higher rates on the minority side, termed Watson's statement "cheap tactics."

"It only means he has received word from his master," the Texan asserted.

Crowded galleries, which filled as the evening wore on, witnessed the closing hours of debate and the vote, which showed 33 republicans, 14 democrats and the one farmer-labor senator, Shipstead, of Minnesota, supporting the conference agreement and six republicans and eight democrats recording against it.

VOTES $250,000 FOR ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, July 3—(AP)—By a vote of 37 to 22, the senate today gave to the Hoover law enforcement commission another $250,000 to carry on its general study of enforcement of criminal statutes.

It thereby accepted the amount requested by the president and approved by the house in place of its previous provision for only $50,000 to limit the commission's study to prohibition.

Following the senate's earlier action denying the larger fund for a continuation of the general inquiry, Mr. Hoover served notice that the broader investigation would be carried on by funds obtained from private sources if congress did not provide it.

Thirty-one republicans, five democrats and the one farmer-labor senator, Shipstead, of Minnesota, voted for the $250,000 appropriation while seventeen democrats and five republicans opposed it.

In a speech preceding the vote, Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska urged the commission to hold public sessions in the future if it expected to add "force and effect" to its recommendations for legislation. The Nebraskan said he planned to offer a resolution looking to simplification of court procedure, but had withheld it in the hope the commission would be of some help in this direction.

Aserting the nation's judicial procedure had not kept pace with civilization, Norris said court procedure should be so simplified as to bring "speedy justice" and relief of congestion on criminal court dockets.

RESOLUTION TO ADJOURN ADOPTED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, July 3—(AP)—The house waited impatiently at "rest" tonight while across the capitol plaza drill ground the senate went vigorously through the manual of debate and gave no signal that it was ready for a truce.

The house leaders after waiting for several hours for the senate to end its debate and vote on the veterans relief bill, which the house had cleared away early in the day, turned the remainder of the legislative formalities of that branch over to lieutenants and left the city.

The house received the news of the senate action on the veterans relief measure with loud cheers. After adopting an adjournment resolution which left the hour undesignated, the branch recessed.

Its members were jubilant over the approaching end of the long session.

Several efforts were made to speak but they were howled down.

Representative McKeown, democrat, Oklahoma, finally gained the floor but everything he said was howled down by yells of "Louder! Louder!"

Immediately after the conference report on the deficiency bill reached the house the branch, called into session again by Speaker Protem Mapes of Michigan, adopted it, giving final congressional action to the measure.

PRES. HOOVER SIGNS FINAL APPROPRIATION MEASURES

WASHINGTON, July 3—(AP)—Congress adjourned tonight in the fighting, snarling mood that has characterized the almost 18 months of continuous session since the advent of the Hoover administration. It ended at 10.37 p. m. with President Hoover just outside the senate chamber in the presidential room to which he came shortly before 10 p. m., to sign the last of the appropriations measures. He waited for some time while Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, flayed the Hoover farm relief and tariff policies, keystones of the administration's legislative accomplishments for the session, before the bill could be passed.

Not until the resolution of adjournment which was adopted earlier in the night by the house had finally been approved by the quarrelsome senate was there definite assurance that the close of the session which began last December was at hand.

President Hoover will call the senate back into sesion next Monday to consider ratification of the London naval agreement. While plenty of votes to assure ratification are in sight there is no certainty when the vote will be reached.

President Hoover quickly affixed his signature to the veterans relief measure in the presidential room at the capitol within a few minutes after he had received it.

After the veterans bill was disposed of, the senate quickly gave final approval to the second deficiency appropriation bill carrying emergency funds to meet newly authorized projects.

Then came the last of the appropriation bills, that providing funds for the District of Columbia. The senate and house had been in a deadlock for weeks over this bill and only at six o'clock tonight was an agreement finally reached.

The house had insisted that $9,000,000 was enough for the federal government to contribute to the upkeep of the city and had refused to consider any compramise with the senate proposal for $12,000,000. The final agreement called for $9,500,000.

With this measure finally approved Senator Watson offered the adjournment resolution just previously received from the house. A roll call was demanded but it won by a vote of 40 to 14 with nine democrats, four republicans and the lone farmer labor senator, Shipstead of Minnesota, in opposition.

WOMAN'S ARREST CAUSES CLASHES IN BOMBAY

BOMBAY, India, July 3—(AP)—The arrest today of Mrs. Perin Captain, an official of the Bombay provincial congress committee, precipitated numerous clashes which resulted in injuries to 14 congress volunteers and one native policeman.

The most serious conflict occurred late this afternoon in front of a large store, the police launching an attack to clear the busy thoroughfare of demonstrators.

Since this was the fourth day of "Boycott wek" aimed at the sale of British products, nearly all the students of colleges, high schools and lower schools had taken the day off and organized their regular boycott processions when the news was heralded that Mrs. Captain had been arrested.

With that endless streams of demonstrators appeared in all parts of the city, the manifestants carrying banners and shouting boycott slogans.

Women turned out in great numbers, one procession alone consisting of about 500, and nearly every woman either had a baby in her arms or was leading a small child.

The police headed them off by blocking the streets leading to the store and compelling them to turn in other directions.

The women's processions were followed by groups of men and boys with whom the police dealt more severely.

Another form of protest was a partial hartal, or cessation of work, in various parts of the city.

The Bombay stock exchange was one institution that closed.

Mrs. Captain was arrested in her home by a British police inspector and several native constables.

The third presidency magistrates court was crowded long before the hour set for her hearing.

The spectators strained their necks and some stood upon benches and chairs to see her enter the witness box. The case was not called, however, and in a few minutes she was led away. The crowd lingered for two hours thinking she might be brought in again.

The council of the Western India Liberal federation today issued a statement strongly condemning the emotional appeals being made to cause students to leave their institutions and plunge into the independence campaign.

Clergyman Indicted On Extortion Charge

Investment Broker Charges Hudson Clergyman and Two Lawyers Tried to O[illegible]tain $75,000 From Him.

NEW YORK, July 3—(AP)—A county grand jury today filed an indictment charging the Rev. Herbert W. Hunter of Hudson, N. Y., B. Leo Schwartz and Edward W. Drucker, lawyers, with attempted extortion. William E. Willard, New York investment broker, accused them of trying to obtain $75,000 from him.

When he was arraigned in magistrate's court June 3 to answer the charge of extortion, Hunter declared through counsel that the $75,000 involved was made up of legitimate claims, including $7,000 due as commissions on stock sales Hunter had made as a salesman for Willard; $35,000 Hunter planned to return to friends to whom he sold stock which he said proved to be worthless, and $25,000 representing damage to his reputation as the result of his handling the stock.

Hunter, the attorney said, had lost his post as a minister in a Pennsylvania town because of checks which Willard circulated and which Hunter made good.

An attorney for Willard said he conferred with Hunter's attorneys, one of whom read a statement outling Hunter's claims. The lawyer said another conference later was held in Willard's office, where two detectives were secreted. Subsequently Hunter was arrested.

The Nation's Birthday

Ring out the joy bells! Once again,
  With waving flags and rolling drums,
We greet the Nation's Birthday, when
  In glorious majesty, it comes.
Ah, days of days! Alone it stands,
  While, like a halo round it cast,
The radiant work of patriot hand,
  Shines the bright record of the past.

Among the nations of the earth,
  What land hath story like our own?
No thought of conquest marked her birth;
  No greed of power o'er was shown
By those who crossed the ocean wild,
  That they might plant upon her sod
A home for Peace and Virtue mild
  And altars rear to Freedom's God.

"QUESTION MARK" LANDS AFTER TRIAL FLIGHT

VILLACOUBLAY, France, July 3—(AP)—Captain Dieudonne Coste, France foremost airman, today took out his red breguet "Question Mark" for a trial spin of about 14 hours with a new motor embodying certain important modifications.

In preparation for his forthcoming attempt at the westward transatlantic flight from Paris to New York, he started from Le Bourget airfield at 6:52 a. m. (12:52 a. m., E. S. T.) Intending to stay up for about 15 hours. He was accompanied by Maurice Bellonte, his trusty mechanic and wireless operator.

All during the morning he cruised about France without being reported from any city or village, and when the afternoon set in his disappearance into the void of the sky roused rumors that he had actually slipped away on the great Atlantic adventure that baffled him last year.

Eventually, however, he was sighted over the Coast of Normandy, heading back toward Paris. At 9 p. m. (3 p. m., E. S. T.)

The "Question Mark" landed on the airfield here.

NOT CONSIDERED REPRISAL AGAINST TARIFF LAW

WASHINGTON, July 3—(AP)—A commerce department study of the increased tariff duty imposed by Italy has brought Secertary Lamont to the belief that the action could not properly be considered a reprisal against the new American tariff law.

Shortly after the state department had been notified officials of the promulgation of the new rates, the result of the commerce department study and a statement by Secretary Lamont were made public. Secretary Stimson declined to comment.

The commerce department found that the schedules of the Italian customs as rewritten under the latest announcement increased the charges on passenger cars by weight to a point two or three times as high as those formerly prevailing but abolished an ad valorem duty formerly imposed and consequently do not make as substantial an increase as was first feared.

"The department of commerce does not consider that the action of the Italian government in increasing tariff on automobiles and trucks is in the nature of a reprisal," Lamont said.

WASHINGTON, July 3—(AP)—After receiving a report that American missionaries had been driven through the streets of Suiping, Honan, China, with sticks, the state department announced today the American legation at Peiping had been instructed to make "urgent protests."

A report from Frank P. Lockhart, consul general at Hankow, described how Rev. Thomas I. Lee, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Deaconess Thonea Sandland, of Grygala, Minn., were paraded through the streets of Suiping and roughly handled by a local political organization.

Earlier, the department said, Lockhart had received a telegram dated June 24, from an American missionary at Sinyangchow reporting that on the morning of June 23 the missionaries had suffered indignities at Suiping

The state department said the local organizations reported as responsible for the indignities appeared to be the propaganda bureau and the local branch of the Kuomintang.

Instructions have been sent to the American legation at Peiping, the department said, that protests are to be made immediately to the highest military authorities now in control in Suiping. Further instructions have been sent, the department added, that even if Suiping is now in the hands of the northern faction, a protest should be made to Nanking, referring to the alleged responsibilities of the Kuomintang party organizations.

TWO MEN KILLED, THIRD WOUNDED IN GANG FEUD

Victims Shot By Unidentified Slayer As They Sat In Automobile In Front of Hotel In Detroit—Killer Walked Into Hotel Lobby and Lost Himself In Crowd—Police Express Belief That Shooting Was Result of Feud Between Chicago Gangsters—Foster Accused of Lingle Murder, Wanted By Detroit Police.

DETROIT, July 3—(AP)—Two men were killed and one wounded today by an unidentified slayer who shot them as they sat in an automobile in front of the La Salle hotel, then walked into the hotel lobby and lost himself in the crowd. The victims were identified as Detroit men.

The dead men were William Cannon, 28, and George Collins, 28. The wounded man is Mike Stitzel, 30.

Cannon was killed instantly. Collins died before he could be taken to a hospital.

No one interferred with the killer as he walked into the lobby and early efforts to identify him among the persons found there when police arrived were unavailing.

While all three men had Detroit addresses, police expressed the belief that the shooting had its inception in a Chicago gang feud.

Police learned that Collins and Cannon came here from Chicago only a week ago. Cannon wore a badge marked "private detective." Collins had a "special police" badge. None of the three men carried guns.

At the hospital, Stitzel told police Cannon had been friendly with a Chicago girl, whose husband had been killed recently. Cannon, he said, had been warned to keep away from her.

Stitzel said the girl was Julia Kuffel.

Stitzel refused to discuss the shooting further, but police hoped to get some information from him later. They expressed doubt of the explanation he had given thus far for the shooting.

Persons at the scene of the shooting said two men were standing at the curbing near the parked automobile in which the three men were sitting. Without warning one of the two whipped out a pistol and began shooting. Five shots, in all, were fired, all taking effect.

SOUTHERN CROSS FLIERS OFF FOR CALIFORNIA

(By the Associated Pres.)

Whirring through the skies on what may be the last trip under the guidance of the men who have flown it to worldwide glory, the giant monoplane, "Southern Cross," was speeding toward Salt Lake City last night on the first leg of its trip to Oakland, Calif.

There, according to Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith, chief of its crew, he will probably sell the sturdy tri-motored Fokker that will have carried him over two oceans and around the world.

"I hate to part with it," he admitted sadly before he took off from Curtiss-Reynolds airport at Chicago at 6:45 a. m., central standard time, Thursday. "But I'll have no more use for it. There are no more oceans to cross. I'm going to fly back to New York and then take a boat to England."

The fliers' plans had been to spend last night in Omaha, but this program evidently had been abandoned, for it was learned they were flying a straight course, which would not take them, over Omaha, and possibly not over Cheyenne. Observers along the route concluded the crew intended to go through to Salt Lake without stop.

Commander Kingsford-Smith found that 800 gallons of gasoline had been poured into the tanks when he arrived at the Chicago airport. He ordered 300 gallons dumped out.

"You know we aren't going to fly the Atlantic today," he said.

'QUAKES SHAKE EASTERN PROVINCES OF INDIA

CALCUTTA, Bengal, India, July 3—(AP)—Earthquakes shook the eastern provinces of India this morning—Bengal, Assam and Burma—causing an undetermined number of injuries and doing much damage to property.

Fragmentary reports indicated that the worst shocks occurred in Assam. In Gauhati nine heavy tremors were recorded within six minutes and slight shocks continued for some time. Many persons were injured, telegraph wires were broken and several buildings were demolished.

BODY NOT THAT OF MISSING TORONTO MILLIONAIRE

TORONTO, Ont., July 3.—(AP)—The body of an amnesia victim, once tentatively identified as that of Ambrose J. Small, missing Toronto millionaire, was positively identified today as that of Joseph Doty, who was until recently an inmate of the provincial hospital here

GANGSTER SENTENCED FOR CARRYING WEAPONS

CHICAGO, July 3—(AP)—Chicago's war on gangland, started after the assassination of Jake Lingle, Tribune crime reporter, today saw a notorious gunman sentenced to jail for carrying concealed weapons and another hoodlum pointed out as the actual slayer of Lingle. This new character in the drama is George Hurley, reputed gambler and gangster.

Newspaper investigators said Hurley's picture had been identified by a witness to Lingle's slaying as that of the killer of the reporter and led to the theory that he was allied with the Al "Scarface" Capone gang.

Hurley is understood to have been affiliated with the "Bugs" Moran gang and was connected with the Sheridan wave gambling casino protection for which, it was reported, Lingle stopped leading to his assassination.

Jack McGurn, reputed gunman for the Al Capone gang, was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $300 today for carrying a concealed weapon, but later was released on $10,000 bail pending an appeal.

KINGSFORD-SMITH ON RADIO TELEPHONE SATURDAY

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., July 3—(AP)—The General Electric company said tonight that its short wave length station near here would be used as a relay point Saturday during a radiotelephone conversation between Commander Kingsford-Smith, talking from Oakland, Calif., and his fiancee, Mary Powell, talking from Melbourne, Australia.

The Oakland station, the company said, cannot pick up the signals from Australia, but they can be picked up here and relayed to Oakland. Last week Kingsford-Smith, talking from here, held a conversation with his mother, in Sydney, Australia.

The conversation will be carried over a land wire between Sydney and Melbourne, approximately 500 miles away. It is scheduled to start about 6 a. m. e. s. t.

MAYOR OF ATLANTA FREES OVER 200 PRISONERS

ATLANTA, Ga., July 3—(AP)—More than 200 prisoners in the city jail were preparing tonight to spend the Fourth with families and friends as the result of an executive order issued by Acting Mayor J. Allen Couch today directing that they be freed at midnight.

The order was to free every prisoner possible under the laws affecting clemency by the mayor.

Explaining his action, Mr. Couch said the prisoners were not felons, but were held for minor violations of city ordinances which other persons break and pay small fines. 'There are just as many people out of jail that belong there as there are already confined," said the mayor, and added that "all my life I have wanted to do something charitable for my fellow men."

CHICAGO ENDURANCE PLANE SHOWS EFFECT OF STRAIN

CHICAGO, July 3—(AP)—Indications that the record breaking "City of Chicago" is beginning to yield to the strain of more than 331 hours were evident at Sky Harbor airport tonight. A bolt connecting the motor to the frame of the plane came loose and the engine was pumping oil.

A bolt to replace the one which had shaken loose was hurriedly taken up to the endurance fliers.

Lieutenant E. S. Moon who made a successful two-way radio contact with the "City of Chicago" at 6:01 p. m. central standard time, reported that he saw a streak of oil on the ship which he said indicated that one of the cylinders of the motor was pumping oil.

A short time later an oil soaked shirt was thrown to earth by one of the Hunter brothers.

NEW BRITAIN MOTORMAN WAS INSTANTLY KILLED

MERIDEN, July 3—(AP)—Motorman Rude of New Britain, operator of a trolley car bound from Meriden to Southington, was instantly killed late tonight when his car crashed into the rear end of an express car which was stalled near the Meriden-Southington line. Two of the six passengers aboard were slightly injured.

The express car had passed a turnout and was partly down an incline when it halted due to the slipping off of the trolley pole. The passenger car, following on its proper signal, then crashed into the express.

The Basis of This Sale

This Factory End Sale is a regular feature of our store policy, fixed in our business calendar because it renders a genuine service to the public.

In June, when prices are at a low ebb in the wholesale market—our buyers go into the market and secure merchandise that is up to our standard of requirements—and the result of our efforts is contained in this page of extraordinary values.

At the same time we clear our own stocks of goods that are of the same grade and character as the market offerings. That is the policy of the Factory End Sale—the reason why this sale excels all other sales of the year, in big savings.

Then come on the opening day of the sale—Saturday, July 5th—and get YOUR first pick. All goods go on sale Saturday and continue throughout the week following. With stocks as large as ours there is enough for many days active selling.

Read carefully this page advertisement, then make out a shopping list of the things you expect to buy—and plan to visit the entire store from floor to floor.

FORMER MAYORS TO RIDE IN TODAY'S PARADE

WILLIMANTIC, July 3.—An additional feature for the Fourth of July parade to be staged here at 9 o'clock Friday morning was announced today by Marshal James J. Lee, who stated that all of the former mayors of the city had been invited to ride at the head of the procession. These include: Herbert R. Chappell, William D. Grant, Sheriff Charles A. Gates, George W. Hickey, Oscar O. Tanner, the "first" mayor, and the present incumbent, Mayor Walter R. King.

The procession is to be led by Fred Leclaire in an official car. It was stated today that with every available motor truck in the city having already been engaged for the parade, permission had been granted several organizations and concerns to use pleasure cars. The parade will be about one and a half miles in length. Out-of-town visitors to the city may best see the procession by parking at any available point along the two-mile length of Main street, or on Prospect, Jackson or Pleasant streets. The time the parade is scheduled to get under way, 9 o'clock, is daylight saving time.

The trucks will bear industrial and commercial exhibits, several of them showing practical demonstrations of tradesmen, bands, orchestras, clowns, novel decorations and the time-honored ancients and horribles.

SHORR IS BOUND OVER TO SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 3.—Solomon Shorr of New Haven, alleged pickpocket, was arraigned in police court today on two counts of theft from the person. Judge Frank H. Foss found probable cause and bound the accused over to the next criminal term of superior court under bonds of $2,000. Shorr, who pleaded not guilty through Attorney Samuel B. Harvey, was unable to furnish the bond and was taken to the county jail at Brooklyn.

John Mijcher of 9 Lafayette street and Police Officer R. Rudolph Laramie were witnesses for the prosecution, the defense offering no testimony.

Micher testified that while he was in a crowd looking on at the scene of an accident on lower Main street last Saturday evening, he had a wallet in the left rear pocket of his trousers, the pocket being secured by a buttoned flap. He suddenly discovered that the wallet was missing and in turning around quickly he saw Shorr running from the scene to a Jordan roadster parked nearby. Mijcher said he gave chase and jumped on the running board of the car, demanding his wallet. Shorr, he said, pleaded not to be turned over to the police and handed back the purse. Shorr then drove off, another man boarding the car further up the street.

Later, Andrew Plesz discovered that somebody had taken $3.50 from his pocket while he looked on at the accident.

Policeman Laramie, who was at the scene of the accident, noticed the disturbance and saw the roadster speed away, but was quite a distance from the machine and succeeded in securing only the letter and first two numbers of the registration. Policeman William Hurley, who was investigating the accident, was successful, however, in securing the complete registration numbers, a broadcast of which subsequently led to Shorr's arrest in Killingly last Monday night by Lieutenant Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson state police barracks and Game Warden Thomas Daniels. Shorr was taken to this city by Chief of Police Thomas F. Grady and County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler and identified by Mijcher.

BARONESS VON KIEFFER TO MAKE HOME IN PUTNAM

PUTNAM, July 3—The imposing home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Reynolds on Grand View is now the home of a titled woman—The Baroness Von Kieffer.

Van loads of furniture have arrived in Putnam at intervals during the week and the home of the Baroness is slowly being decorated.

Baroness Von Kieffer is the widow of Baron Von Kieffer, a nobleman of Russian-Austrian desent. Her husband has been dead for nearly 25 years. Declining the association of society, the Baroness went to Paris where she has spent most of her life in the study of music, art and philosophy. She is a woman of prominence and is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George E. Weed.

It was inquired of Baroness Von Kieffer, why she selected Putnam for a home. The answer was that she had been looking for a country residence. At one time the name 'Putnam" in some way occurred to her. She said the name pursued her, and that she dreamed of it as suiting her ideals. She made inquiries and learning that it was a city in the state of Connecticut, the state in which her father was born, she decided to make additional inquiries.

Baroness Von Kieffer is a most interesting person. Her life has been filled with interesting experiences and during an interview she related many delightful passages to newspapermen. Baroness Von Kieffer was married in Paris. During the years of her life spent there, she maintained a studio where she painted miniatures of her friends and prominent persons. She is devoted to her music. She is an ardent student of the arts and sings in four different languages, French, Italian, German and English. Baroness Von Kieffer has been heard in concerts and musicales in numerous churches in Paris and other European cities.

She is a devotee of philosophy, both ancient and modern and for a number of years, she took the students of Max Heindle, who was leader of the Rosecrucians. Heindle selected Baroness Von Kieffer for this work.

Baroness Von Kieffer returned to New York in 1915, at the request of her parents. She opened a studio there and continued her work in the classics until the death of her parents. Since then she has resided in numerous cities, living more recently in Boston. The Baroness says her tastes are simple. "I think I am a bit old-fashioned," she said, "as I do not care for modernism," she continued. "I love the country life, and in Putnam I have found a most friendly reaction, since arriving here."

"Everyone whom I have met has been most kind and considerate. I think it is wonderful here and I certainly want to be friendly and I hope the people of Putnam will be friendly. I have a title, and because of this, people sometimes hold aloof. I don't care whether they are rich or poor, I like to meet people."

It is the aim of the Baroness to have an exhibition of some of her work. She said, if she can conveniently arrange this, she will perhaps hold the exhibit during the Christmas season.

Dispatches in Providence papers tell of the resignation on Monday of G. Bion Allen, president of the J. & P. Coats, Inc., thread manufacturers. Mr. Allen was born in East Putnam. He entered the office of the concern when a young man. His interest in the firm led to his promotion to manager of the office and his devotion to learning the manufacturing end of the business resulted in his being favored with succeeding promotions to the general managership of the large thread manufacturing company and later to the vice presidency. His appointment as president camp last year after he had served for some time as treasurer of the incorporation.

Edward W. Mullan of Chapel street has been appointed district deputy grand knight of the Knights of Columbus for this area. The appointment of Mr. Mullan was made at the sessions of the state convention held in Norwich in May, and was announced at the last meeting of the local council. Joseph Igoe, of Church street has been re-elected grand knight of the Cargill Council. Other members comprising the newly elected slate of officers are: Joseph Bove, deputy grand knight; Joseph Riley, chancellor; George Harper, warden; Camille Brodeur, recording secretary; James J. Charron, treasurer; William Desaulnier, financial secretary; Timothy J. Hannifan, inside guard; Philip Giraca and Thomas Hanley, outside guards.

Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Hermanson of Grove street, sailed Wednesday for their old home in Stockholm, Sweden. They took passage on the S. S. Kungsholm which sailed from New York.

Trudeau Found Guilty.

Southern Massachusetts newspapers carrying special editions announcing the verdict given in Worcester county court house in the Trudeau murder case, were rushed into Putnam last evening. The "scare head" headlines told of Leon A. Trudeau, Webster man, being found guilty of murder in the second degree of his 24-year-old wife, Celia Manski Trudeau, whose body was found strangled and brutally beaten on the Webster Putnam road on the morning of February 23.

Had it not been for the fact that the 53rd fire alarm of the year had registered at the Central fire station during the month of June, Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston would have been able to submit an unblemished fire record for that month. At midnight Monday, only one lonely four call showed up on the tape. This was for a fire at 190 School street on June 2.

JEWETT CITY

CHESTER LITTLEFIELD SENDS LETTER FROM CHINA

In a letter received by his mother from Chester Littlefield, who is in China as first class seaman on U. S. S. Jason, he sends a newspaper clipping, also writes more fully of a serious accident. This happened a month ago, when a junk loaded with gasoline was alongside the Jason. When opening one of the tanks with a hammer, the tank exploded and oil burned fifteen coolies on board. Four of them died. The remainder were immediately taken ashore in one of the Jason's cutters, and are under treatment at the Tsingtao Dojinkai hospital. Their burns were said to be very serious. The young man wrote that he was singed, but fortunately not burned.

Black bass fishing is getting away to a good start. William McCluggage is high man with a 4 1-2 pounder. Bass are doing strange stunts here this season; they are biting at night. A man fishing for bullheads after 9 p. m. Wednesday, in the Tadpole pond, off the railroad track, caught a good sized bass, weight not reported.

A large number of old time baseball fans are planning to be in Wauregan today (the Fourth). Some are going for the especial purpose of seeing Ed. Farrell perform on first base for the Grays. If he covers the sack in anything approaching his form of twenty-five years ago, it will be well worth the trip.

A reported scarcity in this section, which is said to be much appreciated, is the shortage in potato bugs. Times have been when the farmer raised his crop at the cost of a continual fight with these pests. The beetles used to sit on the fences surrounding the fields, with spies posted to report the appearance of a vine above the ground.

Interest in the Jewett City Twilight league increases with every game. Including the last game for this week the league standing shows:

The time is hardly to be recalled by the oldest residents when there has been as little illegal celebration, as has marked the present pre-4th days.

CHAUTAUQUA'S 2ND DAY PROVES ENJOYABLE

The second day of Chautauqua was just as enjoyable as the first. The afternoon fun by Frank Lane and feature dances by Frances Aldrina received much applause. The three-act comedy drama in the evening, Dead Man's Money, was an evening of tingling mystery relieved by frequent bursts of hearty laughter. Marjorie Turner Told's exhibit of handcraft articles and the description of phases of the subject was very fascinating and instructive. Her work with the children in the morning and after the afternoon program is along this line.

During the last year the best customer for Jugoslav exports was the country which is regarded as her most dangerous political rival, Italy. Second best was Australia and third was Roumania.

FOURTH OF JULY

There is nothing unusual about this anniversary of the nation's birthday. It is one among the many which cannot be overlooked or neglected. It means that we have enjoyed the benefits of independence and national development for 12 months longer and, as in the past, it is an occasion when we have justified reason for expressing ourselves.

The Fourth of July is one of the days which has never been forgotten in the past and there is no probability that it will be in the future. Celebrations are not as violent, however, as in other years. As we have grown older we have recognized the folly of taking life, causing serious and painful injuries and destroying property as a means of marking the anniversary of signing the Declaration of Independence. It has come about through the destructive conditions which formerly prevailed. It has resulted from the realization that such needless waste of life and property did not represent patriotism.

When we stop to think that hundreds have been killed and thousands injured for no good cause, the mistake in the method of observing the day was readily understood. It brought about a change of sentiment. The anniversary could be duly observed and patriotism displayed without killing people, making children blind, depriving them of arms and legs and setting fire to buildings. It was from such that the safe and sane idea of celebrating grew. The really dangerous methods could be banned without interfering with a sensible observance, and it is a gratifying change that has taken place in recent years.

Sentiment in behalf of the sane observance has grown as the result of trials. The wild and reckless has been frowned upon, restrictions have been established and common sense has been liberally displayed. The saving of human life, the elimination of distress and the prevention of cripples has been worth while. There is no good reason why there should not be a safe and sane celebration of the Fourth and it will be deplorable if the record of today's anniversary does not show a general recognition of it on the part of the public. Confined to one day, kept within reasonable limits and carefully supervised by the parents, the Fourth will lose none of its interest or meaning.

STEALING THE FLOWERS

Public property gets no more consideration than private when it is desired by individuals who are impressed by its appearance or value and desire it.

This is disclosed by the several instances where persons have been arrested while engaged in picking flowers on roadside plots which have been planted by the highway department, and in some cases actually pulling the plants up by the roots. The teaching of a lesson by bringing those persons before courts of justice and penalizing them is no more than the situation requires.

This is a practice which farmers have experienced for many years and with increasing losses since the days of improved roads and motor vehicles. Somehow the impression is gained that anything which grows in the country is public property and belongs to the one who sees it first. Trees are removed, flowers which are even protected by special laws are carried away, and even crops are raided by those who are attracted by the good appearance of things desired.

Just why motorists should want to despoil the roadside plots which the state has developed for purposes of beautification is beyond explanation, but it seems to be a fact that some people think that they are entitled to take anything they can get their hands onto, whether it is beside the road or in a garden. Much of it, as in the case of flowers, may be due to thoughtlessness rather than a disposition to destroy, but there is no excuse for either. Those who engage in such a practice are simply inviting trouble and it is unfortunate that they do not realize how much better it would be to apply court fines and fees to the purchase of such flowers as they desire rather than trying to steal them and have nothing to show for it except a depleted pocketbook in the end.

THE ANTHRACITE SITUATION

Years which mark the termination of the agreement between the coal miners and operators and the negotiation of a new one are usually anxious ones for the consumer. He has long since come to realize that he is expected to bear the burden of the outcome. He knows from experience that if there are increases in the cost of mining coal his fuel bill is going to feel the effects of it. It makes little difference whether it comes from increased wages, decreased hours or other changes which will be advantageous to the miners, operators or Pennsylvania's treasury through a state coal tax, it is the consumer who pays the bill in the end.

This is the year when the agreement in the anthracite field terminates. There will be a conference to work out an understanding for the future and, from all indications, that conference will take place without threat of a strike. There was a time when such dependence was placed upon anthracite that most anything could be asked and secured. The situation is different today. There came the time when the consumer balked, when he refused to sit idly by and take the consequences of shortages and boosted prices. He turned to substitutes, and the effect upon the anthracite industry has been far reaching. Much less anthracite is being demanded. Fuel of other kinds is being used and it is realized that the methods of the past can no longer be employed. The consumer has got to be considered. Instead of forcing him to resort to substitutes, the effort now must be to keep him from turning in that direction.

Thoroughly aware of that fact, those who go into conference for the negotiation of a new agreement to become effective in the fall must give consideration to the effect upon the industry and an endeavor to recover some of the lost business. Whether that can be done is a question. Certainly there can be no steps taken to drive more of it away. It is for that reason that no increase in wages is being sought this year and a willingness is displayed to continue them as they are.

Whatever the outcome of the conference, it is fully understood by the consumer that he does not stand in the helpless position he did a few years ago. New conditions have worked to his advantage and the time has come for the others to do some of the worrying.

THE VETERAN LEGISLATION

As has been revealed on other occasions, it was the house that came to the support of the administration in connection with the legislation in behalf of veteran relief, but the victory is one which must be credited to the president.

Legislation for this purpose has been hanging fire for a considerable time. It was sought to meet conditions which called for attention. Up to a certain point it had the support of veteran congressmen and their organizations. When certain other members saw the opportunity to make a raid upon the treasury for the political effect it would have upon the election next fall, there was a refusal by war veteran supporters to follow. It was branded for what it was and the president set forth in convincing terms just what was being attempted and what the effects were sure to be. The president was clear in his appraisal of the measure and after he had declared it bad legislation and showed why it was, why it should not be enacted, and appealed to the country at large he got recognition by enough house members to block the political effort.

That caused a hasty reconstruction of the bill along lines which had been previously advocated and which it was believed would get the approval of the president. The house sponsored it, only to encounter the customary opposition in the senate, where such amendments were made that would restore part of the bad legislation which had been vetoed. The senate was not catering to actual requirements, it was again manifesting its opposition to the administration so frequently displayed in the last year. It would have had its way if it could, but the house stood firmly with the president, insisted upon the measure substantially as it framed it and carried the day.

With the conference upholding the house attitude, the bill has been signed by the president. The bill may not be perfect, but it is a much fairer piece of legislation because of the courageous demands set forth by the president, but in this, as in other instances, the attitude of the senate has been anything but a credit to itself or the country.

AS IT SHOULD BE

A belated manifestation of good judgment came in congress when there was a restoration of the $250,000 appropriation sought for the continuation of the work of the law enforcement commission.

However, it may have been figured that too little effort was given to the question of prohibition or that there was little chance that the commission would find a way to make prohibition enforcement more effective; it cannot fail to be realized that the whole question of law rather than prohibition enforcement is at stake and with the study being made to deal with the existing situation it would be folly to handicap the committee or to throw away the study that it has made thus far.

It is apparent that crime conditions are deserving of attention. When the president showed that there are in federal prisons 13,000 persons and that 70 per cent of them are there for crimes not connected with prohibition, it is apparent that there is need for the unrestricted work upon which the commission has been engaged. These federal prisoners have been increasing rapidly. The increase in crime is alarming, the cost of it runs into huge figures and it is apparent that if there is fault with the machinery of administering justice or getting better respect for the laws the sooner it can be found out and remedied the better.

The attempt to hamstring the commission seemed headed for success until the president again took the situation to the country and made it apparent that if congress would not do its duty in providing the funds they would be obtained privately. It had its effect. Congress was brought to a realization of what it was doing and the commission will go on at federal expense. It is as it should be.

LETTERS

"Any letters for me today?" It was Sally's usual morning question.

"No, I'm sorry. Nothing for you today!" It was the young postman's daily answer which Sally had all but grown to expect. With a spasmodic little laugh, Sally turned again into the house and began again her morning chores at the point where she'd left off when Eric, the youngest of the five children, had toddled away to kindergarten.

Oldest of five, it had been Sally's fortune, since the death of her father, to keep the home running smoothly while her mother went out each day to sew. Just how much Sally had wanted to finish high school like other girls she knew Sally never told. Nor did she tell how much she had yearned to go out into the business world, after school, as did her other girl friends, making the money with which to buy pretty clothes. Nor did she reveal to anyone her heartache when she saw those same friends of hers go out of their business offices and into dear little homes of their own, later on.

As she went about her daily tasks in the small house she kept so trim and neat, Sally soon found herself fancying a romance in which she was the heroine and a handsome young man with kind eyes and a merry smile was her hero. So real did this fancy become in her mind that she actually imagined this young man falling desperately in love with her, writing her sweet letters and asking her to come away with him to be married and live happily ever after. But day followed day and to her question, "Any letters today?" the postman had answered, "Nothing today, I'm sorry," so many times that Sally began to lose all hope.

"I'm perfectly silly!" Sally scolded herself one morning as she turned dismally back into the house. "Who would write me letters, anyway? I'm so isolated from the world in this dreary house all day that no one even is aware of my existence." Her work seemed harder that day, the many chores unending. But more bad luck was in store for her. Billy boy, one of the twins, was struck by an automobile on his way home from school and carried into the house unconscious. Sally summoned the doctor who pronounced Billy's case not serious, provided he had constant care.

From that moment on, Sally's burden was tripled. Sally had no time for romantic thoughts, then. She forgot about her imaginary lover with kind eyes and his merry smile. And she so far forgot his imaginary love letters that she utterly failed to run to the door each morning to make her usual query.

It was therefore a startled and tremulous Sally who took the little white note Baby Eric brought to her one morning.

"The postman left it for you," lisped Eric. "Miss Sally James." Yes, there was no mistake. It must be for her. Her heart beating fast, Sally opened the letter.

"Dear Miss Sally," she read, "what has become of you? I miss seeing you so much each morning I know your little brother has been ill, but can't you just find time to run down to the door each morning like you used to do, to see if there's any mail for you? Really, you can't imagine how much brighter it would make the day for me. The last few days have been dreary ones for me, without a glimpse of your sunny smile." It was signed "Jim—the postman." A love letter—almost, and from Jim. Suddenly a wave of realization came over Sally. It was Jim, with his kind brown eyes and merry smile that had been the hero of her fancy! Of course she had been expecting to receive such a letter—from Jim! After all, it seemed so simple now, that Jim the postman was the very one who would be bringing her love letters!

Next morning, Sally dressed in her brightest house dress and met Jim as he came up the walk.

"I—I got your letter," Sally said, ever so softly.

"I've been wanting to write to you ever since Billy boy got sick," said Jim. "You can't guess how eagerly I've looked forward to seeing you. And when you didn't come down, I couldn't stand it another day. Please promise you'll meet me here every morning, from now on." Sally's eyes twinkled.

"I'll promise," she said, "if you'll make me a promise, too."

"Of course, I'll promise you anything," said Jim.

"If you really want to see me," said Sally mischievously, "I think you ought to write me a letter like that every day." And as Jim made an emphatic agreement she added, "Because, you know, I've looked forward for so long to receiving letters from you!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 3—Nearly 100 years ago a New Yorker, Ransom Gillet by name, came to congress for a term or two.

He was a democrat and like so many other men even of this day who get a taste of official life in Washington, Gillet formed a liking for it. He accepted a series of government appointments rather than run for office again or return to the private practice of law and lived out his life to die and be buried in Washington. Altogether he spent about four decades observing congress and its ways.

"Fishing Committee"

Coming down to date, Senator Thomas of Oklahoma who has a liking for literary odds and ends in his reading, stumbled upon a work Gillet wrote and published in 1868. And in it Thomas found a remarkable outline of "congressional fishing committee" procedure which he holds to be "much to the point" today.

Very clearly all this business of "smelling committees," as the house exploration of the conduct of the world war after the republicans took control of congress was called or even of the various pending senatorial investigations, including the lobby committee as seen by the investigated, is old stuff "on the hill."

Fishing committees, according to Gillet writing in 1868 had "become a very important branch of business" in congress.

"If a riot occurs in New Orleans or Memphis," he wrote, "if generals are supposed to have erred or blundered; a collector at New York cheated or was cheated; an old state suspected—Maryland, for example—of adopting and anti-republican constitution before the federal constitution was adopted, or in Washington's or Jefferson's time or since; or a murder committed and accomplices are unknown, or a printer gets too good a contract or none at all; or it is hoped that the executive has done or said something wrong, a committee is at once appointed, clerks and stenographers are employed, and they all proceed to the place of the suspected wrong, subpoenas are issued, witnesses compelled to attend, a ream or two of paper is used, the whole matter printed and, if possible, something against a political adversary extracted or at least made to look suspicious . . ."

Old Wounds

No doubt each of those items of congressional investigation enumerated by Gillet represents a political scandal or near-scandal of his day. Nobody remembers any of them now.

But there is this difference about present-day "congressional fishing committees" at any rate. Usually they sit in Washington. Their sponsors have learned, presumably, that with modern news distribution methods, Washington affords the best sounding board to be found. A Washington date line carries a national political story better throughout the country than any other.

The Impacted Wisdom Tooth

By F. C. Bartleman, D. D. S., Newark
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

An impacted tooth is one fixed in such position as to prevent its coming through in a normal manner.

The lower third molar is the most frequently found impacted tooth. Not only is it removal to be thought of from the viewpoint of the dental or oral surgeon, but the orthodontist and general practitioner must realize the part it can play in tooth movement, as well as systemic disturbances which it can bring about.

It has been demonstrated that a pathway leads from the area of this tooth to the tonsilar region, and drainage of infection through this passageway from bone surrounding an impacted third molar can infect tonsils.

Many times the inferior dental canal, which carries the main trunk nerve artery and vein to the lower jaw, runs close to this tooth and in fact can be impinged upon by it. There are cases on record where this same nerve artery and vein pass through root formation, this impingement giving rise to neuralgic pains which can be either manifested as frontal headaches or headaches in the side or back of the head. Eye conditions, pain in the ears, or even severe mental disorders can be the result of the impaction.

The impacted third molar can assume many shapes and positions. The four principle types are horizontal, vertical, mesio-angular, disto-angular. The two latter types mean that the crown portion of the tooth lies either toward the front of the mouth at an angle or backward away from the front of the mouth, at an angle. This will be shown by the X-ray pictures which should always be taken before attempting to remove the tooth. These pictures will also show whether the tooth is on the surface or submerged, for the older the patient is the more difficult the removal, due to increased density of bone.

The size of the crown is to be carefully taken note of, and the formation of the roots,—whether fused, separated, straight, curved, hooked, bulbous, spiral or possibly fused to the bone itself.

Extreme care must be used in the removal of an impacted third molar. Its position in the jaw, its root formation, nerve impengement if any, whether or not it is submerged or above the bone, the amount of infection surrounding it, are all fundamental questions in insuring its scientific and correct removal.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Heedless Light Muskrat

For heedlessness we have to pay;
Tomorrow, if we don't today.
—Jerry Muskrat.

There was another signal that the little Muskrats learned. This was the plunge, or splash, signal. Jerry Muskrat would be sitting on the shore. Suddenly he would plunge into the water. Such a splash as he would make! If Mrs. Muskrat were on shore, she would plunge also. If she happened to be out in deep water, she would instantly dive. All the little Muskrats would plunge, or dive. Then all would be still until Jerry or Mrs. Muskrat gave the signal that all was well. So these little Muskrats learned to obey signals and to warn each other. Once in a while one of the youngsters would give the plunge, or the slap-tail, signal; and always Jerry and Mrs. Muskrat would dive. Usually there was no danger. Sometimes the little Muskrat had done it just for fun. But that was quite all right, for thus they showed that they were learning.

Now, in a large family of children no two are exactly alike. One will be more loving than the others; one will be more obedient; one will be more headstrong; one will be more heedless; one will be quicker to act; one will be bolder; one will be far more timid. It was just that way in Jerry Muskrat's family. Some of those youngsters could be depended on to always do exactly the right thing at the right time. Others caused their parents a great deal of worry. There was one in particular who was both heedless and headstrong.

This young Muskrat liked to think that he was smarter than his brothers and sisters. He liked to think that he knew more than they did. He liked to show off. He was always the last one to mind. Now, he was the first one to discover that a lot of the signals given by Jerry and Mrs. Muskrat were given when there was no danger at all. They were given just for training. When he discovered this the young Muskrat felt very clever. When the plunge signal, or the tail-slap signal was given, instead of heeding it promptly, he would take his time about it. Once in a while he would not dive at all, but would chuckle to himself as his brothers and sisters all dived. "They can't fool me," he would say to himself, as he heard his father and mother plunge into the water.

So this young Muskrat grew more and more heedless and careless. There came an evening when all the Muskrat family were out to enjoy the dusk and play about. Jerry Muskrat was at the other end of the Smiling Pool. As usual, Jerry was very much on the watch for possible danger. So it was that he was the first to discover the drifting shadow, which was not a shadow at all, but Hooty the Owl. Instantly, Jerry gave the danger signal and dived. Mrs. Muskrat repeated the signal and dived. Eight little Muskrats did the same thing.

But the ninth—the heedless young Muskrat, the one who thought himself so smart—merely chuckled and continued to sit on a little tussock, eating a tender bit of green stuff which he had found. He didn't even sit still, but moved about. Suddenly a little chill feeling of fear swept over him. At the same time it seemed as of a shadow crossed in front of him He looked up into two fierce, glaring eyes. Then with a squeak of fright he started to plunge into the water. He was too late. Hooty the Owl reached for him with his great claws and clutched him. That heedless young Muskrat paid for his heedlessness with his life. And it was all because he thought himself so very smart.

Ecuador: Home of "Panama" Hats

Passport and landing red tape may be cut for visitors to Ecuador. Some officials are urging exemption of tourists from present landing formalities.

"Ecuador, straddling the Equator on the Pacific side of the South American continent, is slightly more than twice the area of North Carolina, with climates that would be agreeable to jungle folk, inhabitants of temperate zones, and Eskimos," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Torrid jungles and plains occupy the 100-mile wide coastal zone at the foot of the western slopes of the Andes while virgin, tropical jungles inhabited by Indians spread from the eastern slopes toward the Brazilian border. Above these are the valleys of perpetual springtime, while dominating the whole Republic are numerous peaks, some rising nearly 20,000 feet above sea level, that never doff their glistening snow caps.

"Ecuador is not well known to tourists. In the past Guayaquil, its chief port, was unhealthful. But today, Guayaquil, lying forty miles up the jungle-flanked Guayas river from the sea, is a healthful city of 100,000 inhabitants and a bustling commercial center in spite of the tropical sun which beats down upon its streets. And the river, once nearly deserted, is a perpetual parade ground for large ocean-going vessels, and native craft which bring Ecuador's products to Guayaquil for distribution to many parts of the world.

"Guayaquil suggests wealth when viewed from the harbor. Many of the buildings facing the quays, and bordering intersecting streets appear to be lined with expensive marble buildings. But here and there a cracked wall reveals the wood framework of these buildings and the thinness of the marblelike stucco that covers it.

"Many rivers tumble down the Andean valleys, flowing into the Pacific. Only two of them, the Daule and the Guayas, are navigable for river steamers more than 60 miles, but in the wet season native boats can penetrate farther inland. Points 200 miles upstream can be reached on the Guayas, the principal stream of the Republic.

"Good roads are in process of construction, but automobile traffic has not yet displaced saddle animals and carts. Four hundred miles of railroad are in operation. There are three short lines running from small Pacific ports into agricultural regions; but nearly three-fourths of the steel rails in the Republic connect Guayaquil with Quito, Ecuador's capital.

"The construction of the Guayaquil-Quito road is one of the world's great railroad engineering feats. It was built by American engineers and began operation in 1908. In its 297-mile course it climbs to the lofty capital city nestling among the Andean peaks nearly 10,000 feet above sea level. Trains run only in daylight. A stop is made overnight in Riobamba, a town of 20,000 inhabitants. In the afternoon of the second day, passengers are deposited at the Quito station. Prior to the completion of the railroad it took 15 days to reach the capital by mule or afoot.

"In Quito and in Guayaquil, travelers find evidence of one of Ecuador's major industries—the manufacture of Panama hats which, in reality are Ecuador hats. Forty-niners returning to the East by way of Panama bought hats made by the nimble fingers of Ecuadorean women and children and called them Panama hats. Most of the so-called Panama hats are made in Manabi Province, Ecuador."

Stories That Recall Others

Defeats.

Mother's weekly bridge party was in session. On receiving an enviable number of face cards, Mrs. X., a beginner, exclaimed: "Oh, what a beautiful hand I have!"

Bobbie, busy with blocks in his allotted corner, arose and walked over to Mrs. X. After an intense scrutiny of her hands, which bespoke many hours on the tennis court, he thoughtfully said: "Yes, but your arms is all feckled."

Peace Conference a Failure.

Jack has a proclivity for settling his difficulties with his boy playmates in a manner which brings him home often with a black eye. His dismayed mother advised the boy not to fight, but hold a peace conference. A few days later the lad returned home bedraggled, and said:

"The peace conference didn't work, to head in he got the best of me." While I was a-telling Billy where

AMERICA FOR FREEDOM

America for freedom!
That was the old-time cry;
The world for which our fathers stood
To battle and to die.
From throned oppression fleeing,
They felt the galling chain
A tyrant held within his hand,
To pluck them back again.

The word with which they started
The globe has circled round;
Across its seas and deserts
The wild man knows its sound;
And something of the story
That lifts our hearts today,
How one heroic handful barred
The old Wrong from its way.

When ours it was to struggle,
All good men wished us well;
To them our crowned conquest
A prophecy did tell:
That beauteous land doth promise
Joy to the troubled earth,
With welcome wide and peaceful
For all of human worth.

Woe worth the the day we conquered
If we this pledge forsake,
For greed or wild ambition
A devious record make!
Against the world's injustice
Ring still our battle cry,
America for freedom,
By this we live and die!

WOOD THRUSH

I know not what I ever did
In this life or before
That God should send a singing thrush
To call about my door.

Or have long-dead musicians come
To sorrow or rejoice?
How do I know it is a bird
Who only hear a voice?

At pale moth-hours of dawn and dusk
All flute notes that have ceased,
All love songs that have silent grown,
Are from that throat released.

Hark, where famed Orpheus, love bereft,
From Hades realm set free,
Touches again his starry lyre
And calls "Eurydice!"

J. T. Jeffries, retired broker, of Philadelphia, sailed from New York aboard the Caledonia, December 4, for Glasgow, and has been a passenger on that vessel ever since. Mr. Jeffries originally planned to make an European tour, but when the ship returned from Glasgow he was still aboard. He explained that he had found that there was no recreation he enjoyed so much as sea travel, so he remained in one of the best suites on the vessel. The ship made three tours of the West Indies, and on the completion of the last cruise Mr. Jeffries was still a passenger, in the same suite, and ready to sail for Glasgow.

A Springfield, (Mass.) man, says the Boston Globe, was marooned in New York city not long ago with about a dollar in small change, a desire to return to Springfield, and a natural desire to eat once more before arriving at the family board. The man called a New York-Springfield trucking company and asked how much they charged per 100 pounds of freight. When told that the cost was 45 cents a 100, the man asked that the Springfield-bound truckman stop around after he had gathered the rest of his load and pick up some freight at such and such a corner. The truck stopped as per agreement, the ingenious traveler hopped aboard, paid the puzzled driver for 160 pounds of freight and arrived safely at home after a bumpy but swift trip. The few cents remaining of his dollar were used for an inexpensive meal.

IRELAND SLOWLY SINKING INTO SEA, SAY SCIENTISTS

DUBLIN —(AP)— The Royal Irish academy, Ireland's most learned body, has been debating the suggestion that Ireland is gradually sinking into the sea.

The marine erosion especially on the east coast has become serious. A learned engineer pointed out that during the past winter at many points there has been a marked lowering of the beach level.

The director of the state's geological survey said this coast depression was not merely local, but part of a depression affecting western Europe. The land is sinking at present because while both land and sea are rising, the sea is rising the more rapidly.

The sinking is a few centimeters per century.

FRINK-ULMER WEDDING TAKES PLACE IN WILLIMANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 3—Charles W. Frink of Norwich and Mrs. Hazel F. Ulmer a widow, also of Norwich, were married here this morning by Justice of the Peace Arthur T. Kelley. The marriage license was issued by Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton.

The marriage of Mr. Frink and Mrs. Ulmer widow of Henry F. Ulmer, former head of the Ulmer Leather company of this city, is the culminating event in a series of episodes that have kept the Frink name in the public eye for some time during several superior court trials.

Mrs. Ulmer, whose home is at 167 Harland road, Norwich Town, was named as corespondent in a divorce suit brought by Frink's wife, Rose Beckley Frink, in which Mrs. Frink was granted a divorce on June 13th last by Judge Earnest C. Simpson in the superior court at Bridgeport to which the case was transferred for hearing. She was also given the custody of their minor son, but Frink has the right to see him at reasonable times. The Frinks were married in this city June 30, 1923.

Mrs. Frink also was successful in a suit she brought against Mrs. Ulmer for alienation of the affection of Frink. She sued for $50,000 damages and the case was settled last February without coming to trial. The reported terms of settlement were a payment of about $5,500 to Mrs. Frink by Mrs. Ulmer.

Mrs. Frink has also been the defendant in a $35,000 alienation suit, which was brought against her by Helen Antzis, wife of Samuel Antzis, who was manager of the Frink Dairy, Inc., of which Mr. Frink was president. The suit went against Mrs. Antzis when Judge C. L. Avery of the superior court rendered a verdict for Mrs. Frink after the case was tried here last January.

GARAGE FIRE ON CORNING ROAD AND HOUSE BURNED NEAR POQUETANUCK

Several thousand dollars damage was caused in two fires Thursday night and early Friday morning that destroyed a four-car garage and a small shed on Corning road and a two-and-a-half-story frame residence with a small garage on the middle road to Poquetanuck. A Dodge delivery truck housed in the garage on Corning road was also burned.

The alarm for the Corning road blaze was received at the fire department at 9:30 o'clock Thursday evening and several pieces of apparatus responded. The garage is owned by Jens Christensen, a meatcutter for Thumm's delicatessen store, Franklin street, who had put the machine in the building a short time before the blaze was discovered. Mrs. Christensen noticed the flames from the pantry window.

Her son sent in the call and by the time the apparatus reached the scene the structure was a mass of flames. It was necessary for the firemen to lay several hundred feet of hose before water could be poured upon the flames. Engine No. 1 laid all the hose that it carried, 1,000 feet, and many feet were put out by Engine No. 5 and Squad A. The blaze was fought under the direction of Chief Henry R. Taft and Deputy Chief Brennan. Two brand new tires had been put on the rear of the truck that morning. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

Rosano Residence Burned

Shortly after the apparatus had returned to the Central station and the hose lines had been put in place in the machines, the second call was received just after midnight for the blaze in the frame dwelling of Simeon Rosano, former insurance agent. Children who discovered the blaze said that it started on the roof and it is presumed that it was caused from a skyrocket.

There was no one home at the time, as the family had gone to Willimantic for over the Fourth, it is said, making the trip by auto. As there is no available water supply in that section nothing could be done by the firemen, but to remain there until the blaze burned itself out. A garage situated in the rear of the building was also busned to the ground.

The blowing of the siren at the corner of Bath and Franklin streets was the signal for all cars in the section to rush after the fire engines, with the result that there was a fine tie-up near the burning building. Drivers had parked their cars with abandon on both sides of the road so that machines could neither go forward nor backward for some time. Practically all of the machines had to be moved before the fire apparatus had any chance to turn around and proceed back to their quarters in the city.

Two men who drove to the central station on Chestnut street in an automobile gave the alarm about the fire in the Rosano house and Engine No. 1, Squad A and Deputy Chief Brennan responded. The place is close to the city line, but has no water supply and the firemen could do nothing but stand by and watch it burn as they had been compelled to do once before at a fire in this road.

It was learned later by the firemen that a large automobile had been seen to go along this road about 11 o'clock Thursday night and that the occupants of the automobile were shooting off fireworks near this house. It is believed the fire on the roof was probably started then.

Deputy Chief Brennan spoke of the serious difficulty made for the firemen by the automobiles rushed out to the fire and crowded into the road, stating that this practice must be discouraged as it handicaps the operations of the firemen who need to have the roads kept clear.

JULY FOURTH WEEK END SPECIAL TRAFFIC HAZARD

The arrival of the Fourth of July on a Friday this year is warning to the state motor vehicle department that an unusually dangerous traffic period will be an accompaniment of this week end for motorists and pedestrians. The Fourth of July holiday, with the day before and the day after, have made a high mark for accidents in the records of the state department and this year there will be the added summer week end travel to increase the hazards.

Last year department figures show there were 236 accidents in the three-day period, resulting in death of four persons and serious injuries for 167. In 1928 there were three deaths and 168 injuries in 282 accidents and an even worse record was that of 1927, when seven deaths and 175 injuries resulted from 462 accidents.

It is conservatively estimated that between 250,000 and 300,000 motor vehicles will be using Connecticut highways during the next three days. Most of the traffic will be on the streets and improved roads. There are about 5,000 miles of such highways in the state, which, considering space for two-way traffic, would equal 52,800,000 feet. The 300,000 vehicles considered in the estimate, when standing would use up at least 4,500,000 feet, or about one-twelfth of the available road space. This means that if all of the 300,000 vehicles were to move at the same time, each vehicle would have only 12 times its own length in which to operate.

It is improbable, of course, that so many vehicles will be on the road and moving at the same time. However, at certain hours of the day at some location it will seem as if they were. The traffic volume will be tremendous.

In an article read Thursday afternoon from WTIC, the Travelers station, Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel said that "because of the conditions which will exist in the next few days it is timely to warn that enforcement officers are becoming extremely impatient with certain bad performances. One is the way in which an occasional operator moves in and out of line of traffic. It would appear as though the world depended upon his getting to some particular place within the shortest possible time; yet it is an established fact that in heavy traffic the difference in time over a 25 miles speed is only a fraction of time. It is poor economy, poor policy, poor citizenship, and a sample of the worst possible consideration for others to try to save that slight fraction of time and endanger the life and limb of many other persons. The only course is to do as others do and to curb any impatience which may exist. One's own wishes must be subordinated to the welfare of all.

"To be safe every driver must observe the utmost care, today, Saturday and Sunday. Each driver must consider that he not only has himself and the passengers in his car to care for, but an obligation towards every other person and vehicle in traffic. The pedestrian must be especially watchful and give consideration to the fact that a greater number of vehicles than ever will be on the move. Dependence on care and caution should be the thought for Independence Day on the highways."

STATE INSURANCE DEPT. RECEIPTS OVER MILLION

The cash receipts of the Connecticut insurance department exceeded $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, it was announced Wednesday by Colonel Howard P. Dunham, Connecticut insurance commissioner. This marks the first time in the 65 years of the department's history that its annual receipts have totaled a million dollars or more. The exact total of receipts was $1,034,611.81. This compares with a total of $980,085.75 for the previous fiscal year, or an increase of $54,526.06.

The largest item in the list of receipts was the premium tax, which is imposed by Connecticut as a retaliatory levy to the same extent that insurance departments of other states tax Connecticut companies. Domestic companies paid a total of $764,037.34 and foreign companies $92,011.49, amounting altogether to $856,048.83.

CHIEF TAFT'S WARNINGS FOR FOURTH OF JULY

Know where and how you can communicate with your doctor or hospital in case of accident, and where the nearest fire alarm box is located in case of fire.

Keep your property clear of rubbish, papers, litter and other readily ignitible materials.

Keep matches out of the reach of children.

Don't let children throw sparklers. They remain hot for some time and are very dangerous.

Don't let children pick up undischarged fireworks. They might explode in their hands. This has often happened, causing injury to hands, fingers and eyes.

If there are fireworks in the home keep them in a covered tin box until ready for use.

Don't hold firecrackers or allow them to be thrown at people.

Don't play pranks with fire or with firearms.

Don't carry fireworks in pockets.

Don't meddle with dynamite caps.

Don't feel that you must celebrate with fireworks. It is much better to join in a safe and sane community celebration.

Don't let down on caution because it is the Fourth. There were 250 fatal accidents last Fourth of July, more than 75 deaths later from lockjaw, over 3,000 serious injuries and tens of thousands of minor accidents. Fireworks played a big part in these tragedies.

Fires in homes, stores and other buildings from fireworks and firecrackers caused losses last year amounting to almost three-quarters of a million dollars. The public suffers heavily from these losses.

Do your part to keep your children and your property safe from harm.

MOTOR BOAT RACES BY GARDNER LAKE CLUB

A programme of outboard motor boat races is to be put on at Gardner lake, Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock by the Gardner Lake Yacht club, which is anticipating a big entry list in the three events that will be on the programme. The races have the sanction of the Connecticut and New England Outboard association and there will be three events. Class B and Class C and probably a free for all.

There will be three heats to a race, the course being about five miles long.

Special interest attaches to the Class B event as Julian L. Williams of this city is offering as the prize in this class a beautiful large silver cup which is a duplicate of the cup that was competed for in the outboard motor races from Albany to New York. The conditions are that three wins will give possession of the cup, and as the Gardner Lake club is to run several more race days this season there will be opportunity for any one winning the first leg on the cup Sunday to acquire possession before the season is over.

Outboard motor races are being held Friday at Westerly and it is expected that many of the boats competing there will be on hand at Gardner lake Sunday to enter the races there.

SHRINE TO MARK SPOT WHERE MARQUETTE DIED

LUDINGTON, Mich.—(AP)—A plan to erect a shrine here upon the hillside which Father Marquette selected as his place to die seems about to be realized.

Funds for the shrine were raised by students of Marquette university, Milwaukee, after their Rev. Patric Lomasney, S. J., of the university department of history, had determined the spot where the veteran Jesuit explorer died.

Legal difficulties arose over title to the land and the plan was held in abeyance for five years.

The title is expected to be cleared within a few months.

FRENCH REVIVE OLD ART OF WEAVING TAPESTRIES

PONT-CROIX, France—(AP)— Production of decorative tapestries, which flourished in Brittany and Normandy centuries ago, has been revived.

Under the technical direction of an old pupil of the Gobelins, tapestries in the style of Aubusson, Gobelin, Beauvais and Flemish schools are made. Ancient tapestry panels, the originals of which are in museums or private art galleries, are copied.

A chair back may take a month and a large piece of tapestry a year to complete.

LIGHTS NEVER GO OUT IN THIS LITTLE TOWN

Each pole supporting a light has a switch beyond arms reach from the ground. Time was when the city fathers hired a boy to make the rounds each evening and morning turning the lights on and off.

It was discovered that the electricity consumed was cheaper than the boy's wages, so the boy was dispensed with and the lights go on forever.

MT. PELEE AND ITS NEIGHBOR, ST. LUCIA

Mt. Pelee, on the island of Martinique, famous and most destructive of the volcanoes of the Atlantic basin, has just been observed and photographed from the air by the West Indies-South America aerial survey party of the National Geographic society. The present observations supplement and bring down to date the work of an expedition sent out by the society to make studies of the volcano from the surface, immediately following its explosion in May, 1902. That explosion annihilated the city of St. Pierre and killed virtually all its 30,000 inhabitants.

Frederick Simpich, in charge of the aerial survey party, describes the appearance from the air of the death-dealing volcano and the near-by island of St. Lucia in the following communication to the National Geographic society's Washington, D. C. headquarters:

"We are coasting about on the clouds now to get pictures of the peak of Mount Pelee, which bulks sinister and lava-burnt above the buried city of St. Pierre. Just below us, as I write, is the great river of molten rock and ashes which, with the incalculable blast of poison gas let loose, wrought the most appalling seismic tragedy since the destruction of Pompeii.

"Quitting Antigua island in a rain squall, we have been thundering down the Carib sea line for St. Lucia, along the west coasts of the French island of Guadeloupe and British-owned Dominica, flying low to keep under rain clouds, for a close up of peaceful, palm-fringed towns along these lovely tropic beaches.

"But, maps in hand, we all awaited eagerly our first glimpses of the northwest point of the French island, Martinique, and its historic volcano, Mount Pelee. Skillfully weaving his big Nyrba air liner 'Argentina,' Pilot Kenneth Hawkins now flies closer and closer to the scarred and abysmal slopes of the volcanic monster. From the air its every aspect reflects the cataclysm of nature which years ago convulsed the stricken island and stunned the world.

"Below us we see deep, wicked trenches plowed by flowing fire. A long, white river of treeless ash and lava runs down the volcano, and into the sea. Under it, buried forever, is the once happy, prosperous French city of St. Pierre, which was completely obliterated. Even many ships, then anchored offshore, were set on fire by the Titanic blast which shot from a great hole blown in the mountainside, and were destroyed, with most of those on board.

"As we circle over the entombed city, I think of Pliny, and that day in A. D. 79, when he saw the doom of Pompeii in the shadow of Vesuvius.

"The photographers signal now that their pictures are made, and we resume our flight for Port Castries, on the island of St. Lucia.

"On our way we pass Diamond Rock. During England's war with France in 1804, this high rock was garrisoned by the crew of the British 74-gun ship Centaur. With ropes, Admiral Hood swung guns from his ship and hauled them to the top of this lone, biscuit-shaped rock, and from this high perch, for 18 months, the doughty Englishmen fired on French ships venturing from Martinique over towards St. Lucia.

"Behind us now the sun is setting, as we alight at Port Castries, in a harbor of theatrical beauty. Sharp, pointed hills, draped with jungle verdure, rise about it. Howling, quarreling blacks fight to row us ashore, and carry our baggage up a steep hill to a neat, comfortable lodging house where a lone English lady takes paying guests. Here no stranger can sleep till he gets used to the appalling nocturnal din of singing bugs and tree-frogs.

"Of the 50,000 or more people on the island, only about 250, mostly Englishmen, are white. One Scotchman here has been American consular agent since 1878—but complained to me that the climate did not agree with him. Yet he is a veteran of our consular corps, in point of service!

"Women are busier than men. Besides home duties, they work afield, pick and pack fruit, and walk miles to town carrying produce on their heads. The market din at dawn—for I was up then to see the sunrise—is even worse than the bug and frog concert. For one cent a woman rents a spot under the big market shed, where she spreads out her foodstuffs for the morning haggle-fest. I saw one quarrelsome woman being marched off to jail between two native police. 'She always disturbs the peace,' said my guide. 'Already she has been arrested 146 times—her case exhausts the judge.'

"Before the Panama Canal was dug, scores of ships from the west coast of South America—sailing around the Horn—came here to coal. In busy months more than 130 called. Now, because the traffic stream through the Canal has largely changed the commercial geography of many West Indian ports, fewer vessels stop here. But the island is curiously rich in fruit and field products, and life is easy. In the market I saw almost incredible varieties of native foods. There were cloves, allspice, nutmeg, cinnamon, cacao, ginger, guavas, mangoes, sapodillas, oranges, tamarinds, custard apples, coconuts, limes in great piles, shaddocks, yams of seven different kinds, vanilla, tyme and breadfruit, besides a dozen kinds of vegetables and peppers.

"There were pigs tied on strings, long-legged chickens, bleating lambs, excellent fish and hideous spiny fish; eels as long as umbrellas, and cacao ground and moulded into the size and form of cigars, and piles of wild coffee berries no larger than rice grains."

JUNIOR ELKS NOSE OUT ITALIANS IN FAST JUNIOR LEAGUE GAME

The Elks nosed out the Italian Young Men's club in last night's Junior league game 4 to 3. Unlike Wednesday's free-hitting affair, last night's contest was a pitching duel between LaVarge of the Elks and Connell of the I. Y. M. C. LaVarge allowed but two hits in seven innings and fanned 10. Connell although touched for eight bingles kept them fairly well scattered with the exception of the fifth when the Elks bunched three hits for two runs.

The Italian club was the first to score, counting once in the first when Caperlossi was hit by a pitched ball, stole second and scored when Dugas threw Angelone's grounder wild over first.

The two teams battled on even terms until the fifth when the Elks went to the fore scoring two counters on singles by Dugas and LaVarge and a double by Bamber. In the sixth, they added one more on an error and a triple by Fritz.

In the seventh, the Italian club staged a last minute rally which almost tied the score. Wonnocott led off with a single to center. Angelone was safe on an error by Hamil, Wonnocott taking second. Connel, walked filling the bases. Fern laid down a bunt and Wonnocott was out at the plate. LaVarge to Dugas. With the bases still full, Hoffman walked forcing in Angelone. Kobb then hit to LaVarge who threw to first retiring the batter. The first baseman, Houghton, threw to the plate retiring Fern at the plate, and retiring the side.

Following the game there was considerable discussion concerning this last decision at home plate which finally resulted in the Italian club entering a formal protest of the game on the grounds that Matthews, the chief umpire, had made a misinterpretation of the rules. It seems that Matthews in rendering his decision was under the impression that there was a force-play at the plate. This was not so however, as when they played on the batter first, there was of course no longer a force possible, and the runner had to be touched to be put out. Matthews could not be located last night as to his decision. The score:

VELVETMEN NOT TO STRENGTHEN FOR SERIES

Considerable interest has been aroused by the coming series between the J. B. Martin and Army and Navy for the baseball honors of Taftville, the first game of which will be played at Martin field next Sunday afternoon.

While no official announcement has been made in regard to the line-up of either team, information from pretty reliable sources discloses the fact that the Army and Navy is sparing no expense in making the capture of the first game a certainty and has secured the services of a pitcher who was a stellar performer for a leading team in the Blackstone Valley league last season.

From what could be learned last night, the J. B. Martin will not be strengthened by the acquisition of any new players. They will use the same lineup they have been using all season, with Walter Lindner doing the pitching. Lindner has established a record this year that ranks him as one of the outstanding semi-pro pitchers that has appeared in this section in the past decade. For the past 33 consecutive innings, "Lindy" has not issued a single base on balls; has turned back during that period 19 of the opposition via the strikeout route and has allowed 9 hits per game. In view of the fact that this impressive record was made against some of the leading teams in southern New England, it is the consensus of opinion that he will not experience a great deal of difficulty in holding in check his village rivals, who have yet to establish themselves as logical contenders for the title they seek.

INDEPENDENTS WIN FROM OLD TIMERS' OUTFIT

A record number of local fans witnessed the baseball game Wednesday evening at the Gair diamond when the Independents took a hard fought game from the Montville Old-Timers, 12 to 8. McDermont, P. Morosky and Amezee led the winners in batting, McDermott collecting two singles, P. Morosky being credited with one single and one double and Amezee getting two singles. Dave Fitzgerald, Fred Johnson and Walter Auwood led the Old Timers, Fitzgerald getting one single and a double, Johnson two singles and Walter Auwood poling out a three-bagger to the right field bleachers. Mat Geary, former speed ball artist showed good form on the mound for the Old Timers, striking out seven men. Score by innings:

After the game the two teams with officials of the league and friends, a company of about one hundred, were taken in private cars up to where a shore dinner awaited the players. This was prepared by Chef William Fingers and helpers. Entertainment was furnished by local talent, including Mat Geary, Steve Fryzeck and Frenchy Caron in songs with music furnished by a four-piece orchestra from Norwich.

VELVETMEN CLASH WITH N. L. KACEYS TODAY

Norwich-New London rivalry will again draw the center of attraction this afternoon at Mercer field, New London when the local J. B. Martins meet the New London Kaceys, leaders of the Whaling City City league race, in the second game of the series. The Martinmen won the first game, this being the only defeat on the New Londoners' slate.

Walter Linder, former Deep River and New Haven Prof hurler, will toe the slab for the locals, it is expected with Jimmy Murphy catching. Tilly Daniels will pitch for the Kaceys. This game will be a comparison of the brand of ball played in the Twin City leagues as practically everyone of the Martin team is cavorting in the local loop.

BOTTLERS GO INTO TIE FOR 1ST BEATING TIGERS

The Thermos Bottlers moved into a triple tie with the Royals and Polish Citizens for the leadership of the City league last night by virtue of their 5 to 3 win over the latter at the Academy campus. The three clubs jam the top of the league ladder with two wins and a defeat apiece.

Last night's game the fourth and final of the week, was as close and well played as the three preceding contests. Nickerson, made his second appearance of the season on the Thermos hill, and, while not quite as effective as he was against the Smoke Shop in the seasonal opener, he hurled good ball. He gave a total of 7 hits but manged to keep them fairly well scattered. Johnny Greene, worked for the Cits and after a rather poor start settled down and pitched a pretty good brand of ball. He allowed six hits and fanned as many.

The Hastedt-Driscoll combine went to work in the second frame, counting three runs on a brace of singles and a pair of two baggers. After the Cits had counted twice in the fourth, the Bottlers matched them in the fifth. On Lloyd Jarvis' long three base smash to the autos and Nickerson's wild heave the Citizens scored for the last time in the early sixth.

Krauss, Thermos shortfielder, led the hitters with a double and a single and afield Mondy Normandin worked best, handling five chances without a slip. The real fielding jewel was contributed by Lloyd Jarvis in the fourth, when he backed into the left field fence and made a sensational one handed stab of E. Lemieux's long drive. The score:

CLOCHER BLANKS MOOSUP IN GREAT HURLING EXHIBITION

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, July 3—Plainfield shut out Moosup here tonight in an Eastern Connecticut Twilight league game by a 2 to 0 score, before an estimated crowd of 800. In the first inning Cotnoir walked and scored on a three-bagger over the left fielder's head by Dissinger. In the third Cotnoir, first man up, was safe at first on Tatro's error, went to third on Pechie's single and scored on Dissinger's fielder's choice.

Clocher pitched superb ball for Plainfield, giving one of the best exhibitions of hurling ever seen at Moosup and holding the strong Moosup batters helpless. He fanned four men and allowed but one batter to go beyond first base. This win puts Plainfield a half game from first place. These two teams meet next Tuesday night at Plainfield. The score:

PRINCETON AND KENT CREWS WIN SECOND HEAT RACES

HENLEY, England, July 3.—(AP)—Winning their second heats in the Thames challenge cup competition today by narrow margins, the eight-oared crews from Princeton and the Kent school, Kent, Conn., qualified to meet tomorrow in a Fourth of July bill that will decide which of the American combinations is to row in the semi-finals Saturday.

The Argentine representatives were not so fortunate. The highly-rated crew from the Club Canottieri of Buenos Aires was eliminated by a powerful Quintin Boat club eight that won in the last few strokes. The South Americans led until the final quarter-mile but could not match Quintin's home stretch spurt and lost by a quarter of a length.

Princeton's oarsmen, who average only 150 pounds to the man, defeated Clare college of Cambridge university by six feet in a close and exciting race. Kent came from behind to beat the Iensbury Rowing club by half a length. Princeton was clocked at 7 minutes, 49 seconds for the course of one mile, 550 yards, under slow rowing conditions. Kent's winning time was 7:54 and Quintin was clocked at 8:01.

MAYE GRATTAN WINS $10,000 EVENT IN RECORD TIME

WINDSOR, Conn., July 3—(AP)—Maye Grattan, owned by J. C. Thompson, of New York, won first money in the 2:12 class pace for $10,000 in the Bay State races at Sage park, here today lopping three quarters of a second from the track record in her second heat and winning the third in the same time. Lee Purdy was the only starter failing to get "in the money".

Peter Patch, owned by A. G. Lord, of Nyack, N. Y., got first money in the 2:15 class trotting event with two first places and one second while Dr. Voorhees, with one first and two seconds won second money. Peter Easter, three times led the field in the special trot for first money and Peggy Express took the biggest cut in the 2:18 class trot.

SAN FRANCISCO TAKES ACTION TO PREVENT BOXING FOUL

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3—(AP)—Chances of the Young Corbett-Jack Thompson ten round welterweight bout, here tomorrow ending in a foul were eliminated today.

In case of a deliberate foul it was agreed the offending boxer would forfeit his purse and be suspended indefinitely.

Should the referee decide a foul was unintentional the injured contestant would be allowed to recover, even to the extent of postponing the bout.

Ticket stub holders would be admitted free to the second contest.

Shamrock V. Registers Again

GOUROCK, Scotland, July 3—(AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton's latest America's cup challenger, the Shamrock V, scored its third victory on the Clyde today and again proved itself the outstanding performer in light airs.

The result of today's race was decided on the first round, after which the race was stopped.

The times for today's event were: Shamrock, 3:35:10; White Heather, 3:57:50; Lulworth, 4:02:47. The Cambria was becalmed and gave up.

And Today is the Clamorous Fourth.

It's one of the two days in the year that the small boy offers up a prayer. Today he prays for sunshine and on Christmas he prays Santa Claus hasn't forgotten his address.

It's the day when timid people stuff their ears with cotton and remark every few minutes that "they will be darned glad when this day is over."

Today Dad will help Junior shoot off his fireworks the same as he plays with Junior's toys on Christmas Day and Junior will get equally as much enjoyment out of it.

Mother will have the arnica bottle, the carbolic salve and the bandages in a handy place so as to render first aid to the injured, be it father or the boy.

Then there are the usual Fourth of July picnics. Don't you thrill over those picnics? You get up early in the morning, pack the lunch and the fireworks and get going to some place that you don't give a hang about.

You loll around in the hot sun on a beach and get all sunburned or you go to sleep under a tree and get all bitten up with ants and mosquitoes. Then you eat dry sandwiches and drink warm soda pop and think you've had a whale of a time. Yes, you do, but you don't dare tell the wife how much you enjoyed it.

Then the fireworks at night. They are great, until some simple minded goof puts a sky-rocket on the ground to see what will happen. If you're lucky you take a poke at the goof but if you're not the ambulance comes and gets you.

And it's all done in the name of patriotism.

TWO AMERICAN TEAMS IN WIMBLEDON SEMI-FINALS

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 3—(AP)—The two strongest doubles teams in all Europe swept into the semi-final round of the British tennis championships today and tomorrow they will clash with two powerful combinations of Young American Davis Cup players for the right to enter the finals.

Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon of France eliminated Bill Tilden and his red-headed Dutch partner, Hans Timmer, by scores of 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, in one quarter-final. In the other, Dr. J. Colin Gregory and Ian G. Collins, Britain's best doubles pair, overcame a French team consisting of Jean Borotra and Christian Boussus in straight sets, 9-7, 6-3, 6-2.

America's surviving representatives in this phase of the tournament won their quarter-final matches on Tuesday and had a chance to rest today and size up their future opponents.

In the semi-finals tomorrow, Cochet and Brugnon will meet the United States champions, George Lott, Jr., of Chicago, and John Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif., and Gregory and Collins will oppose John Van Ryn, East Orange, N. J., and Wilmer Allison, Austin, Texas, who beat them in the final here last year.

Another Fourth of July feature attraction will be the women's singles final between two Americans—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, the defending title-holder, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan.

JONES GIVEN ROUSING SEND-OFF AS HE STARTS FOR NATIONAL GOLF TOURNEY

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP)—Bobby Jones today went away from the roar of Manhattan, with Father Knickerbocker's rousing welcome still ringing in his ears, and headed for the comparative quiet of a golf course over which he will defend his open championship of the United States.

The world's most famous golfer entrained at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) for Minneapolis, but his plans included a stop in Chicago tomorrow and Saturday. He will not see the Interlachen course, venue of the 1930 championship, until Sunday.

Bobby was perturbed as he left New York. Although Pennsylvania railroad officials, at his insistent request, held the Broadway Limited two minutes in a vain hope that Cyril J. H. Tolley, former British amateur champion, would put in an appearance, the train finally left without him.

Tolley will rejoin Jones in Chicago tomorrow morning.

"I must have misunderstood Bobby," said Tolley ruefully, "but I was certain he said the Grand Central station. Oh, well."

Jones was cheered on his way by a number of Atlanta friends and some dyed-in-the-wool New York golfers. There were the familiar cries, "Good luck, Bobby," and "Attaboy, Bobby," but the send off was trivial in comparison to the rousing greeting he received yesterday afternoon and last night.

Although Bob had frankly expressed misgivings on shipboard as to his ability to withstand the strain of the big New York welcome, apparently he suffered no ill effects. He was in rare good humor.

He turned for a moment from golf to baseball. He is a vice-president and member of the board of directors of the Atlanta club of the Southern association.

"The Crackers (Atlanta) have done well while I was away," he said. "When I left they were in last place and now they are fourth. That's progress."

"Did you do anything to help them up?"

And then there was another flash of Jones' kidding.

"Oh, yes, I cabled advice from time to time."

Cyril Tolley paused between inquiries about trains at the Grand Central station long enough to suggest that Jones will win his fourth open title of the United States next week.

"Bobby did not play well in Britain—that is, for Jones," he said, "but I am confident he will be Bobby himself again in the west, and if he is, the championship is over before it starts."

Considers He Treated Trojans Fairly

Sports Editor: The manager, Wauregan Independents, wishes to state that he refused to pay the Trojans the guarantee because they did not arrive till 4 o'clock p. m. The agreement was to begin the game at 2 p. m. They were also without equipment, gloves or catching outfit. I consider my dealing fair enough.

BE PREPARED FOR ACCIDENTS ON FOURTH

The weekly bulletin of the state board of health says:

The warning "Be Prepared for Fourth of July Accidents" may appear to many as undue caution, but to the medical profession, to whom falls the duty of caring for the human debris left in the wake of this annual celebration, the need for such warning appears to be urgent.

While the death toll due to fireworks is relatively small, loss of fingers and vision often result, and demand serious consideration. The chief danger to be warned against is the minor burns and injuries caused by premature or careless explosion of fireworks. When a child is severely injured and loses a finger or is badly burned he is immediately taken to a physician and the wound dressed and properly cared for but the minor injury receives scant attention, if any, and serious infection too often follows. The spector of lockjaw or tetanus invariably follows in the wake of our Fourth of July celebrations when we celebrate not wisely but too well.

Tetanus or lockjaw as it is more commonly known is caused by a germ which grows best out of contact with air or oxygen and has the ability to form spores. A germ in the spore state is in a dormant stage of existence, somewhat like a grain of wheat or a nut, life existing but conditions not favorable for growth. When conditions are right for growth the grain or wheat, nut or germ-spore will respond by breaking forth from the dormant stage of existence into vigorous growth. An ordinary germ of disease like typhoid fever, diphtheria or scarlet fever will soon die if it is discharged from its natural habitat in a human being and allowed to dry out or is exposed to sunlight for a short time, or to 145 degrees F. for 30 minutes as in pasteurization of milk; but a germ like tetanus when it meets with such adverse conditions immediately goes into its spore stage where it will remain alive and withstand drying and even heat greater than that of boiling water. Tetanus spores have been found in the pyramids alive after thousands of years of adverse living conditions.

Tetanus germs live naturally in the intestinal tract of the horse and other animals, so soil fertilized with animal discharges is contaminated with tetanus germs. Tetanus germs are chiefly found in fertilized soil, in soil in cities and in dirt and dust on our pavements and elsewhere. Now you can understand why it was that tetanus took such a toll of life among the wounded soldiers in the great war where wounds were almost always contaminated by bits of cloth from the soldiers' uniform which was always more or less covered with mud or dust from the trenches and therefore carried tetanus spores into the wound.

Children playing with fireworks are out of doors, on the street or in the backyard, their skin more or less covered with dust from the soil. An injury caused by fireworks is often a ragged wound with more or less burning of the tissues. Tetanus spores carried into such a wound would probably find ideal conditions for growth. If not removed or killed by disinfectants they rapidly multiply, produce a very virulent toxin or poison which causes vigorous contractions of the muscles especially those of the jaw and hence the name lockjaw. The individual so infected dies in agony from poisoning by the toxins of tetanus.

ATHLETICS RALLY IN 7TH TO NOSE OUT YANKEES

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—(AP)—After a 55-minute interruption between the fifth and sixth innings because of rain, the Athletics staged a three-run rally in the seventh to gain a 5 to 4 decision over the New York Yankees today.

The Yanks took a three-run lead by scoring a run in the opening inning and two more in the fifth, but Jimmy Foxx drove in two counters as the rain started and the later rally completed the triumph. The champions got only five hits off Henry Johnson, but they collected them all in the two big innings. They also had the benefit of nine walks, and two errors aided the seventh-inning rally.

New York scored a run in the ninth but Most Grove stopped the rally, retiring Lary and Ruth with the tying run on base. Ruth refused to let yesterdays painful injury keep him out of the game, but his bat was not particularly effective. He did not get a hit, walking twice and making one sacrifice.

SMITH SHUTS OUT PIRATES WITH FOUR HITS

PITTSBURGH, July 3.—(AP)—Bob Smith, Boston right hander, was in fine form today and his pitching enabled the Braves to take the final game from the Pirates, 8 to 0. Smith did not allow a hit until the sixth inning and then Pittsburgh could get only four singles, spread through four innings. Boston won the series, 3 to 1.

The Braves combed Spencer and Chagnon for 13 hits and had the added advantage of four Pittsburgh errors. They were off to a three-run lead in the first inning and finished the game with another burst of scoring in the last three frames.

The shutout was only the second administered to the Pirates this season. Cronin, Boston catcher, led the attack with three singles. Clarks double was the only extra-base hit of the game.

STOCK PRICES SHOW DECLINE AS MARKET RECESSES OVER HOLIDAY

NEW YORK, July 3—(AP)—The bears touched off a few firecrackers under the stock list today. The explosions were not strong enough to shake the market, but it did settle a bit and closed for the three day vacation with prices of favorite shares one to two points net lower. Large losses in special stocks were fairly numerous.

Trading was very quiet especially in the morning. Sales for the first half hour totalled only 134,500 shares, the smallest since November 22, 1928, when the stock exchange began keeping official record. Quotations moved indecisive until around noon when the professional short interest became more venturesome and put out some new lines to hold over the holiday, shoving DuPont, May Department Stores, Spiegel May Stern, Gillette, Celotex, Timkin Roller Bearing, Atlantic Coast Lines and a few others to new lows for the year. The chemical stocks were also weak.

News of the day was mixed. Wall street viewed Chrysler's announcement of a ten per cent salary cut in connection with its possible bearing on dividend stability, and the stock held firm. The weekly business reviews summed up the situation, as usual, in the word "quiet," although Dun's said that readjustments now in progress 'should ultimately form a basis for a new economic advance."

As was the case yesterday, the best news came after the close of the market when the $197,000,000 drop in brokers' loans was announced. This brings the total to $3,219,000,000 and the decline in the past four weeks to $552,000,000. It also aligns the federal reserve figures, which include borrowings on bonds by distributors, more closely with the reduction of more than $1,000,000,000 in New York stock exchange member borrowings of security collateral.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 3—(AP)—Lightening of accounts in preparation for the three day closing over the holiday week-end, carried curb shares irregularly lower in dull trading today. Total sales aggregated only 406,802 shares.

Electric Bond and Share continued to dominate trading. This issue sold off about 2 points, then regained half its loss in short covering. United Gas new was depressed a fraction, but rallied to close firm. American Gas and Electric dropped 4 points, and Brazilian Traction lost a point. Niagara Hudson sagged 1-4. Missouri Kansas Pipe Line rose a fraction.

In the oil shares, Pacific Western sold up 1 1-2 points, reflecting renewed merger rumors. Gulf, however, lost 2 and Humble, 3 points. Cities Service was comparatively quiet, closing off 1-8. In the investment and holding company group, Trans-America was under pressure, but United Founders held steady. In the mines, Noranda was firm.

Industrials were mostly heavy. The Dresser Manufacturing shares were firm; and Detroit Aircraft closed a shade higher, reflecting report of $872,000 sales in June. New York, Rio Airline rallied a point, but Aviation Corporation of the Americas, reacted. Ford, Ltd., was firm, closed at 15, up 1.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 3—(AP)—Railroad bonds were the major interest of investment buyers in the listed bond market today.

An extensive list of issues were strong as the reinvestment demand influenced higher prices. Other lien issues ruled firm in a dull trading session which adjourned activity for a three day week end. Stock privilege issues were irregular in sympathy with the weakness of stocks.

The German 5 1-2 per cent bond lost nearly 2 points at the opening of the market, following dissolution of the offering syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan and Company. In a turnover of nearly $1,000,000, the bond fluctuated between 88 1-2 and 89 1-4 and closed at 88 7-8, a loss of 1 1-8 from yesterday's closing price of 90 at which the bond was issued.

New York Central 3 1-2s made the best gain in the railroad group, rising 2 7-8 points. Other issues of the company were firm on thin sales. Best buying of domestic rails centered in Albany and Susquehanna 3 1-2s, which gained 1 1-2 points. Atchison general 4s, Canadian Northern 6 1-2s, Rock Island 4s, Cleveland Union Terminal 4 1-2s, which closed at a new year's high, Erie 5s, Illinois Central 4s, Louisville and Arkansas 5s, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, and Union Pacific refunding 5s.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 3—(AP)—Wheat pouring into market centers almost twice as fast as a year ago, spelled lower prices today. The domestic winter wheat harvest, especially in the west and southwest, was reported as making rapid progress, and export demand appeared to be temporarily at a standstill, affording no outlet for the big surplus of last year's wheat on hand, let alone the new wheat piling up. For the year just ended, North American wheat exports were announced today as almost 200,000,000 bushels less than for the 12 months previous.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsteady at the day's bottom level, 1 3-8 at 2c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4 at 7-8c down, oats 1-4 at 3-8c off and provisions ranging from 5c setback to 5c advance.

Provisions kept steady.

Many times during the afternoon as Officer Paul McCarthy cared for the through motor traffic a stalled line of automobiles reached from the square to the station of the New Haven railroad. NEW LONDON MOTHER CHAINS UP SON— THEN HE CANNOT STAY OUT LATE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 3—Mrs. Anna R. Dunmire, 31 Williams street, is the mother of two boys and is a widow. One of the boys, Clifford, aged 12, has caused his mother much concern the past three years, it developed today. It was also revealed that during the greater part of that time, excepting when the boy was in school he has been chained to a chair or other household equipment. The boy, according to his mother, persisted in remaining away from home until late at night and to cause him to be at home when he should be, he was chained to some of the household furniture and with a padlock to secure the chain. The revealing of the action taken by the mother was the result of Mrs. Dunmire having made application for the attendance of her son at the Boy Scout camp, although the child is not a Scout. She sent a communication to Scout headquarters, together with $30, with which to pay the boy's tuition, by another son and when the status of the boy whose admission to the camp was requested, an investigation was made, which revealed that the child is a daily prisoner at his home. Mrs. Dunmire is employed in a restaurant and she explained by chaining her son she was at ease because she was aware that the boy was not committing acts that would bring trouble to both parent and son. The mother will not consider the boy being committed to any institution as an incorrigible.

When taken to police headquarters it developed that the girl was friendly with sailors and subsequently it was revealed that she was the sweetie of a sailor at the submarine base, for a friend of the latter went to police headquarters with the information that the sailor would interview the girl late this afternoon and, if necessary, would marry her. The wedding story apparently was a myth, for whatever plans the sailor may have had for marrying the girl vanished during the day. Tonight the girl is in the custody of Policewoman Jane Cassidy, who will endeavor to arrange for the return home of the wayward one, or else she will be committed to the State Farm for Women at East Lyme.

WILLIAMS ACTED GUILTY— TWO ARRESTS FOLLOW

The act of William Williams, colored, in transporting alcohol through the street, caused his arrest today, also the arrest of Mrs. Mary Sobczyk, 177 North Bank street. Williams was arrested on a technical charge of breach of the peace and the woman was charged with violation of the liquor law, actual sale. Both will be in court Saturday.

Williams was walking on Water street shortly after noon and was carrying a large bundle under his arm. In front of the New London parking station Patrolman Frank Philopena was approaching from the opposite direction and when the Negro espied the officer he turned and started back. The act of the Negro aroused the suspicion of the officer, who decided to investigate. Overtaking Williams, Philopena questioned him as to the nature of the contents of the bundle. The Negro declared that the bundle contained food supplies, but when Philopena started to make a thorough examination, Williams hurled his load to the sidewalk. There was a crash of glass for the one-gallon container which had held alcohol, was smashed and scattered on the walk. Williams was arrested and at police headquarters, after a lengthy questioning declared that he had purchased the alcohol of Mrs. Sobczyk. A raiding squad in charge of Sergeant John Courtney went to the home of Mrs. Sobczyk, but as they entered the woman threw a quantity of alcohol into a sink. The containers that had held the alcohol were seized but a search of the premises failed to reveal any other evidence of the house storing alcohol. Mrs. Sobczyk's husband was committed to Norwich State hospital, a few weeks ago.

OLD MYSTIC MAN DIES WHILE DRIVING THRU GROTON

NEW LONDON, July 3.—John Kennedy, 64, well known resident of Old Mystic, died suddenly this afternoon while driving to New London accompanied by his daughter. He suffered a stroke of apoplexy and expired at the wheel. The Cadillac sedan crashed against an embankment and was damaged. Miss Kennedy, who was thrown against the windshield sustained a lacerated lip and mouth and the loss of a tooth.

Kennedy and his daughter started for New London shortly after 1 o'clock and when about a mile east of the overhead bridge of the New Haven railroad in Groton, on the Center Groton road, Kennedy was stricken. He collapsed in his seat and before the auto stopped it continued along the highway, finally swerving against the embankment. Passing autoists had the state police advised of the death of Kennedy and an officer was sent to where the auto was lodged. Medical Examiner Dr. Edward L. Douglass was notified and after questioning Miss Kennedy, ordered the body of her father removed to an undertaking establishment in Mystic. Kennedy had long been a sufferer from a weak heart.

SAMMATARO IS GIVEN SIX MONTHS IN JAIL

NEW LONDON, July 3—Joseph Sammataro, 18, of 121 Shaw street, was in the police court this morning charged with theft, the stealing of the outboard tender of the power yacht Sally Ann, of Fall River, Mass. He was sentenced to six months in jail. His companion in the stealing of the boat, Joseph Vocalino, 18, of 53 Prest street, who was also charged with theft, had his case continued three months. The youths were on the pier of the Hotel Griswold boat race eve and were requested by a member of the yacht to guard the tender. When the employe on the boat did not return, Sammataro and Vocalino rowed the tender to a point near the Atlantic fisheries where it was pulled on shore and left for the night. The following night, Sammataro went to where the boat had been left and pulling back into the river, rowed across the river to Shaw's cove, where the craft was again pulled on the shore. There the oars and motor were removed and taken to the cellar of Sammataro's home. Several days later the boat was discovered on the shore and when the police investigated it was determined that the boat was the yacht's tender. Further investigation revealed that Sammataro and Vocalino were the thieves.

Sammataro is wanted by the Groton police on a charge of theft, as are also Stephen Delaporta, 19, of 9 Archer court, and Cornelius McCarthy, 89 Howard street. The youthful crooks the same night the boat was stolen also stole one or more bags from automobiles. McCarthy and Delaporta will be given a hearing in the Groton town court Monday next.

Morton, Station 6, Waterford, employed at the Hotel Winthrop as night clerk, who last night was struck by an automobile in Waterford driven by Anthony Augusta, Rye road, Falmouth, Mass., and sustained fractured right leg was reported today as being as comfortable as could be expected, at Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

OVER PRODUCTION AND WASTE

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Mr. Henry Ford pooh-poohs the idea of farm over-production. He doesn't actually say it is "all bunk," as he once characterized history. But he does aver that it's just a bogy calculated to scare the timid only. "Nothing to it," he says, airily.

And that's that.

He noted recently that "they were raising a million dollars to advertise Detroit and bring more people here. I told them," said the oracular Henry, "the money would be better spent in educating people to get away from the city." Good for Henry, so far.

Asked if he didn't think there was any danger that an increase in the number of farms and farmers might mean over-production and waste, Henry responded:

"What we call waste is only surplus, and surplus is always the starting point of new uses. We used to think corn was nothing but food until we produced too much of it. Now we use more corn industrially than we ever did for food.

"Everything that is produced from the soil can be used for some purpose. Chemistry alone is crying for it, and industry not only can find a use for but has need for everything the soil produces that is not converted into foodstuffs."

Now we'll all admit that any little facts which presume to continue to exist after Henry Ford has pooh-poohed them are pert, not to say impertinent. They should crawl into their little holes and pull the holes in after them.

Unfortunately, some of the facts are just that saucy and impudent that they won't believe it when Henry Ford tells them they don't exist. Take, for example, that very corn which Mr. Ford lugs in as an illustration of his assertion. "We used to think corn was nothing but food," he says, "till we produced too much of it. Now we use more corn industrially than we ever did for food."

Perhaps. I don't know anything about the figures. But this we all do know; that for a dozen years the corn-growers of Iowa have been howling themselves red and black in the face over the low price of corn, occasioned by their own over-production. At no past time, when corn was thought of solely as a food for men and beasts, were the corn farmers of that single state so vociferous and angry in their complaints about the unprofitably low price of corn as in these recent years when, according to Mr. Ford, "chemistry is crying for it," and "industry has need of everything the soil produces which is not converted into foodstuffs."

To read some of the Iowa papers and listen to the weepful wailings of such chosen representatives as Brookhart, doesn't show the bewildered outsider any great service that chemistry and industry,—that latter word Mr. Ford's synonym for mechanics,—seem to have done for the Iowa corn-growers. Their new demands certainly can't have lifted the corn growers up on any delectable mountains of prosperity, for those unfortunates are all the time, even now, declaring that they're up to their necks and sinking in the bottomless Slough of Despondency. They're desperately calling on the farm board to throw them a rope and on congress to launch them a tariff raft so they can extricate themselves.

If, when they had produced a surplus which they couldn't sell to their old patrons, chemistry and industry had stepped up and taken the surplus and paid good money for it, why the bawling and bellowing and strident ululation?

It looks to the bewildered outsider, already mentioned, as if the fact of over-production had bodaciously,—to use a western word,—refused to subside under the soothing pattings of chemistry and industry and the sarcastic pooh-poohings of Mr. Ford.

Here's something which I clipped from a market letter in my New York paper, the other day:

"Fresh fruits and vegetables are going down, down, down. Most everything is lower, but it is expected that after the Fourth food will be even cheaper. For the holiday comes on Friday, and there will not be heavy trading on Saturday. After such a three-day rest there is always a flood of cars loaded with produce awaiting sale on Monday. Already large quantities of string beans have been held over from one day's auction to the next, due to over-abundant supplies. New York has the reputation of being the one market in the country that can clean up everything offered—at some price. Yet the retailers failed to do it yesterday on these beans."

Just exactly what profitable use are chemistry and industry going to find for carloads of string beans going stale in New York city freight yards, and trainloads of string beans spoiling on the vines in rural bean fields?

I have heard that chemistry can extract furfural,—whatever that is,—and that industry can make wall-board from waste cornstalks. But what can either chemistry or industry get from stale, wilted, inedible and beginning-to-get-slimy string beans? You and I are curious to know. I suspect the poor string-bean growers have more practical reasons for wishing they knew. They, unlucky devils, would like to get pay for their work and their beans. Nor do I suppose they would care overmuch whether the beans were used by cooks or by chemists, in kitchens or factories, so long as they brought in some money.

Instead of which, they are much more likely to be towed down the bay and dumped into the ocean, with no other reward to the growers than the privilege of paying the freight bills.

Take, for another cantankerous and stubborn fact, the wheat situation. The wheat farmers fairly equal the corn growers in their complaints that they can't sell their wheat for enough to pay the raising and harvesting. There has been so much more put on the market than the market could assimilate that the price has been kept lower than the production cost. Again a big surplus, "all dressed up and no where to go."

I haven't heard that either chemistry or industry has thus far done much to relieve the wheat farmers. Anyway, neither one nor both together have yet solved the puzzle of what to do with the unwanted surplus.

The farm board, with its $150,000,000 revolving fund at its back, and all the chemists and manufacturers of the country eager to get their fingers into the fund, can't seem to do anything more than tell the wheat growers that they must reduces acreages and keep production down or the board can't hope to keep prices up.

So the jarring note clangs through the full gamut of agricultural output.

"Don't worry about surpluses," cheerfully chirp the non-farming spectators: "Modern invention and scientific research and keen-eyed industry will find a use for them."

Which is quite pleasant to hear.

The trouble is that it doesn't seem to turn out that way.

When this near-to-octogenarian was a small boy there was a good deal more "yarb-doctoring" than is thought advisable at present. The yarb doctors or doctresses,—they were usually of the latter more practical sex,—knew the virtues of boneset and catnip and prickly ash and sarsaparilla and snake root and mullein,—both as a tea and as poultice, and many other weeds. They had a saying that every plant had its special and divinely apportioned use,—if only people were clever enough to find it out.

But I don't recall that any of them professed to know what quack grass and pussley and Canada thistles were good for. There was always a surplus of these things. And there seemed then, as there seems now, no way to get any good out of them except by pulling them up, piling them in a fence corner with ashes and lime, and composting them into manure. Even that drastic treatment didn't always destroy their germinancy and prevent their apparently immortal seeds from restocking the ground over which the compost was scattered.

Far be it from me to sneer at the chemists who analyze and catalyze and experiment and question, or at the captains of industry who stand ready to make anything—if the manufacture means dollars to them. We owe many comforts and most of our luxuries to the patient devotees of the test tube and the canny resourcefulness of industrial leaders.

But the sorry fact remains that, after generously discounting all the new uses these have developed and all the new products those have devised, there is more actual waste in farming, today, than there was even in the machineless and yarb-doctoring days of 70 years ago. The few of us who have lived in both eras cannot help but see this.

The causes are many. It would take a wiser than Solomon to explain them all, and a book bigger than the dictionary to hold the explanations. You and I must be content to accept the fact. "Haste makes waste" says the old proverb, and haste is the modern idea of speed. Everything must be done in a hurry and in a big way, and "never mind the scatterings." People once were taught that they must save the pennies if they wanted to gain the pounds. The modern idea is to ignore the pennies and condescend to pick up only the pounds.

Well, what of it? We can't go back to the old penny-pinching ways and the old scrap-saving habits. We must take our world as it is and its people as they are.

All the same, denying or ignoring facts, even when they are annoying, won't remove them. Jeremiah rather severely characterized the false prophets of his day who attempted to heal the hurt of the people, "Saying peace, peace; when there is no peace."

Seems to me they were not much worse than the hot-air boosters of today who keep on shouting "Surplus, surplus, there ain't no surplus," when there is one which is straining the back and bending the knees of agriculture.

There may be no use crying over spilt milk; there is certainly small satisfaction trying to drink from the emptied bowl.

It is wiser to keep one's eyes open for stumps in the path than to shut the eyes and stumble over the stumps and break the bridge of one's nose in the fall.

Even if Henry Ford does commend the latter practice.

THE FARMER.

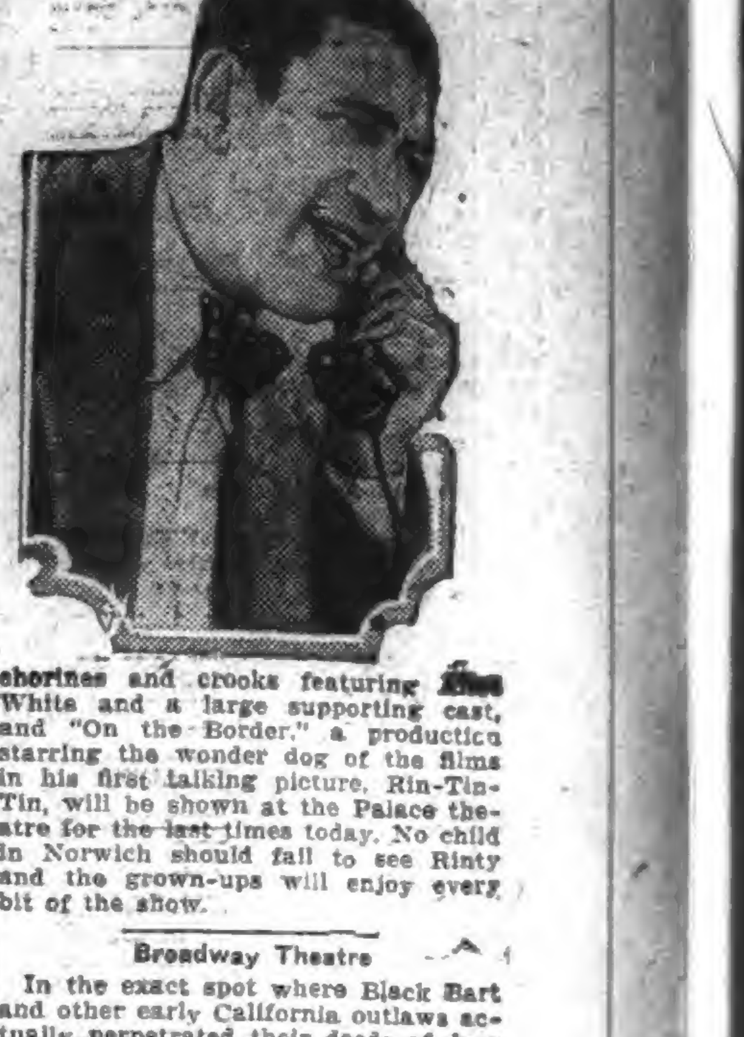
Palace Theatre

Victor McLaglen, who will long be remembered for the character he portrayed in "What Price Glory," is the star of "On the Level," a comedy all about riveters and racketeers, which will open at the Palace theatre tomorrow, where it will be shown through Tuesday of next week.

The story is all about Biff Williams (Victor McLaglen) and Danny Madden (William Harrigan), structural iron-workers who live at Ma Whalen's boarding house. Danny loves Mary Whalen, the boarding mistress's beautiful daughter, but he thinks that she loves Biff. Biff, however, flirts with a lady who lives in an apartment adjoining the building on which he is working. The innocent flirtation becomes more serious when Biff gets himself and his pal involved in a real estate racket which is being engineered by this enticing beauty. Their life savings have been invested in the swindle and it looks as if they will never get their hands on them again, but Biff is not one to let a pal down and finally fixes everything up to the best possible advantage.

"Sweet Mama," a comedy drama of chorines and crooks featuring Alice White and a large supporting cast, and "On the Border," a production starring the wonder dog of the films in his first talking picture, Rin-Tin-Tin, will be shown at the Palace theatre for the last times today. No child in Norwich should fail to see Rinty and the grown-ups will enjoy every bit of the show.



Broadway Theatre

In the exact spot where Black Bart and other early California outlaws actually perpetrated their deeds of daring, Paramount filmed its latest outdoor talking masterpiece, "The Border Legion," Zane Grey's popular and thrilling story of the west of gold-rush days. In the smashing action romance, which will show at Warner's Broadway theatre, tomorrow, audiences will see authentic scenes and action just as they took place back in the 1870's.

Zane Grey's stories are high spots of screen entertainment. More than 24 of them have been filmed by Paramount. With the introduction of dialog, the characterful tales of the wide west have become even more realistically gripping than they were in silent form. To add to this realism, Paramount left no stone unturned to make "The Border Legion" true in every detail to the adventurous period it represents.

A stage hold-up is one of the gripping episodes, and, for this action, Paramount selected the old gold trail from Columbia to Stockton, which winds through a rock-walled defile in the Sierra-Nevada mountains in California. The pass is just wide enough to allow for the passage of one vehicle and its strategic advantages were recognized and utilized time and again by the daring bandit bands of the old west.

This is rose week at Mohegan park, where these beautiful flowers are now in full bloom. The rose arbor across the dam at the lake is a mass of brilliant color in shades of red and pink and the roses at the Washington street and Rockwell street entrances and in other places rival the floral glory that is massed at the rose arbor at the dam. Visitors in increasing numbers have thronged to the park every day this week to view the rose display before it fades away.

The menagerie at the park is a constant point of interest presenting a variety of wild animal life, along with some of the domesticated kind such as ducks, pigeons, geese and rabbits.

The monkey family, which once consisted of four, had sad tragedy enter its ranks within the past year and has now dwindled to only one specimen. One of the monkeys escaped, got into a man's chicken coop where it worked havoc among the feathered flock and had to be shot when it couldn't be recaptured.

Another of the monkey family died in giving birth to a baby monkey, while the father of the baby went insane and began to tear himself to pieces, so that he, too, had to be shot.

The deer yard now presents much of interest as the herd has grown to 13, five of which were fawns this spring. The deer have become so well accustomed to visitors that some of the herd are almost always in view to reward those who skirt the fence to get a sight of the pretty animals.

The wired enclosures along the walk by the duck pond are the homes of several varieties of wild animals There are two raccoons inhabiting different cages, each with a tub of water into which he dips his food in characteristic raccoon fashion. A skunk and a fox share one cage, at the back end of which there are cages for a large family of white rats. In an adjoining enclosure is a large white rabbit, which has for its companions, though they are caged, a number of guinea pigs. In another enclosure are four pheasants, one of the silver variety and the others ringnecked. In the large enclosure at one end of the row is a lordly peacock, now in full plumage, who struts with his tail spread to the full, when he is in the right mood. This enclosure also serves as the home for a colony of pigeons, some of which have nests of young.

In the duck pond enclosure are several varieties of ducks as well as Bremen and Toulouse geese and a number of rabbit hutches in which there are to be seen many fine specimens of different breeds.

The big work upon which Superintendent Frederick W. Krohn and the park force have been engaged this year is the construction of the new road which is to run around the end of the lake. This extends from a point on the Washington street entrance road to connect with the road coming in on the easterly side of the lake and when completed will provide for a drive all around the lake. It is expected that it can be opened within a very short time.

The lake is a magnet for many enthusiastic swimmers and bathers each day, who find its waters refreshing during the warm summer weather.

SUPT KENNEDY'S DEATH
SADDENS LOCAL FRIENDS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

MYSTIC, July 3—There were many expressions of sorrow when it became known that Supt. John Kennedy had died suddenly today, while driving to New London. Miss Flora Kennedy, his daughter, was with him at the time he was stricken. Noting that something was wrong, she took the wheel and steered the car into the bank beside the road. The force of this broke the windshield and Miss Kennedy received several cuts on her face.

Mr. Kennedy was born in September, 1865, at Monson, Mass. He married Mrs. Hattie Whitney Cady, of Stafford. They had five children, William E., of Hope Valley, R. I., Mrs. Arthur Douglas, Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. Howard Sims, Portland, Me., and Miss Flora Kennedy, of Old Mystic. John Junior, the youngest, died when a young boy. Mrs. Kennedy passed away November 16, 1929. Mr. Kennedy leaves also two sisters, Mrs. Nell Crowley and Miss Bridget Kennedy, both of Monson.

He had been superintendent of the Mystic Woolen Co. at Old Mystic for over 25 years.

TAFTVILLE PARADE WAS VIEWED BY THOUSANDS

Taftville ushered in the glorious Fourth with a parade in which practically every able-bodied man, woman and child in the village participated, or so it seemed to those who witnessed it. It was supposed to have been an old fashioned "Horrible Parade," and the ambitions of the persons who planned it were certainly realized.

Led by a state officer, who, by the way, was the least horrible of any of the participants, the parade started at the center of activity of the village, Fancy Corner, and marched up Norwich avenue and then up Providence street and Merchants avenue, countermarching over the route again. One of the features of the parade was the "Misfit Army" under the able command of Thomas Perkins Sears as General Calamity. Following in the rear of the army were floats sponsored by the various village organizations, one of the outstanding ones being that of the Taftville Rod and Gun club.

Music for marching was furnished by Swahn's band. The streets of Taftville were lined with cars and thousands of spectators crowded the line of march who cheered the "horrible" sight.

After the parade the prizes were awarded as follows: Floats—first to the Hilltop boys for their South Sea Island float; second to the Army-Navy club for their Black Crow float. Individual prizes—first to George Seidel as the Millionaire Hobo; second to Arthur Jemory as the drum major.

The Hilltop boys will enter their float in the Willimantic parade this morning.

QUIETEST NIGHT BEFORE ON RECORD IN NORWICH

That Thursday was the quietest night before the Fourth ever known in Norwich was the general opinion expressed. Up to midnight there had hardly been anything to indicate that the great national day for the burning of powder was close at hand, but what was lacking in any premature activity on the part of celebrators was doubtless to be made up as soon as the legal hour for the use of fireworks should arrive. This is from 4 o'clock this (Friday) morning to 11 o'clock at night.

There will be no check by the police authorities upon the regular and customary celebration of the day, it was learned on good authority Thursday night and the use of all the allowed forms of fireworks will go on unimpeded, the only requirement being that the use of pistols and blanks will be frowned upon, and ordinary caution must be observed, particularly in the use of firecrackers and other explosives where automobiles are passing.

SEASON HAS OPENED FOR FISHING FOR BASS

An armistice having been declared between fishermen and brook trout because of arrival of the closed season, lovers of the song of the reel have, in a large measure, transferred their activities to lakes and ponds, where the presence of black bass gives promise of real fishing. The season during which these fish are fair game began Tuesday and will continue to November 1.

The bass is a fish of temperament; sometimes he quickly grabs the lure offered and battles gamely for his life. Then again he may disdain the most tempting baits for several days at a time. Fastidious, he prefers deep lakes and reservoirs as his habitat.

Everyone knows the difficulties incidental to fishing in Connecticut lakes. There are about two power boats to every cottage, and each disgorges more oil than it uses. Fish, be it said, do not fancy either motor noises or oil. Occasionally the bass frequents fairly deep water about rocks and here he is most often caught.

Despite reports and photographs to the contrary, the largest bass caught in Connecticut usually do not exceed seven pounds. The average is from two to three pounds.

According to John W. Titcomb, superintendent of the state board of fisheries and game, the best time for fishing of this sort is in October, not during the vacation months. Mr. Titcomb says that all Connecticut waters are considerably overfished during the summer, and those who wait until fall in order to fish will be more likely to make good catches.

SENATE TO MEET IN SPECIAL SESSION MONDAY

Call Issued Yesterday By President Hoover For Action On London Naval Treaty—Senators Will Receive Message From Chief Executive As Session Convenes—Senators Reed of Pennsylvania, and Robinson of Arkansas, Will Be Allied With Borah In Behalf of the Treaty—Opponents Will Base Opposition On Contention Treaty Does Not Give U. S. Parity With Britain In Naval Armament.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—A presidential proclamation halted senators in mid-step today and turned them back for a special session to consider the London naval treaty before they could depart for their homes.

Shorn of technical language, it said the public interest required that the senate convene at noon next Monday to receive a message from the president and consider whether it should ratify the London naval treaty.

After issuing the call, the president left for his lodge on the Rapidan for the holiday and week end. There he planned to prepare his message.

In the capital, the hush that followed his proclamation was unbroken by statements. There were quiet preparations, however, by those who will lead the opposing forces on capitol hill.

The debate will find Senators Reed of Pennsylvania, an administration republican, and Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, who aided in drafting the document, allied with Borah of Idaho, a leader of the republican independent-democratic tariff coalition, in behalf of the treaty.

On the opposite side of the fence, Senators Johnson of California and McKellar of Tennessee, a republican and a democrat, will lead the opposition. They, along with Chairman Hale of the naval committee, base their opposition on the contention that the treaty does not give the United States parity with Great Britain in naval armament.

The treaty itself was favorably reported from the foreign relations committee a week or so ago and Chairman Borah has promised to hold it before the senate until action has been taken.

Comprehensive hearings were held before both the foreign relations and the naval committees where Secretaries Stimson and Adams defended the treaty and various naval officers testified that it did not grant the United States enough ten-inch gun cruisers for its needs.

There have been no definite predictions of the time that will be necessary for the senate to dispose of the treaty. The senators, however, are weary from the long months of debate on the tariff and veterans' relief, and hope has been expressed that the session might end within ten days or two weeks.

FRANCE JOINS IN CELEBRATING THE 4TH

PARIS, July 4.—(AP)—Official and unofficial France joined with representatives of the American embassy and patriotic organizations in a series of July Fourth celebrations here today.

The day also was observed in provincial towns, where the stars and stripes flew from public buildings.

The first event in Paris was a ceremoney at the Tomb of Lafayette, the Marquis De Chambrun, a descendant of the French hero who aided the American revolution, described his ancestors as "an immaterial yet existing link between France and America, between yesterday and today."

The second ceremony was at the monument to the American volunteers who served in the French army during the World war. Present were American military and naval attaches, American Legion members, Sons of the American Revolution, French war veterans and other organizations as well as embassy representatives. The French attendants included General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, General Mariaux, governor of the Invalides, Paul Doumer, president of the senate, and Count Jean De Castellane, president of the municipal council.

Count De Castellane and Major Ogier, the former a commander of American ambulance sections in the war, likened the American volunteers to the Frenchmen who fought in the American war for independence.

Others who attended were a number of South American diplomats, including Cesar Zumeta, the Venezuelan minister.

Later, Ambassador Edge gave a reception for the American colony while Edward Tuck, who gave the Malmaison museum to the French government, spoke of the dedication of a high relief of him and Mrs. Tuck at the "house of American nations."

The day's celebrations ended with a dinner dance sponsored by the American Legion at Suresnes and attended by many members of the American colony.

NEW YORK'S SENATORS CRITICIZED PROHIBITION

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Addressing the Society of Tammany in Fourth of July exercises in the hall on Union square, New York's two U. S. senators—Dr. Royal S. Copeland and Robert Wagner—criticized prohibition and the government's lack of action on unemployment.

Considering the problem of prohibition "not as a political issue," Senator Wagner declared that "throughout the country the signs multiply that there soon will be a complete awakening and a universal realization of the fact that the abuses from which we have suffered have their roots not in the enforcement machinery but deep down in the 18th amendment. The line of progress is toward restoring to the states the responsibility for the promotion of the temperance of their citizens."

Turning to unemployment conditions, Senator Wagner said that "millions of Americans are suffering want, privation and destitution."

Inertia, apathy, resistance to progress, keeps the United States from seeking and using a road to the solution, he said.

Senator Copeland traced the progress of liquor from early days and declared that "America's attempts to deal with the liquor business is a story of disappointment and disaster."

FOUND BOY'S BODY FLOATING IN RIVER

HARTFORD, July 4.—(AP)—The body of Frank Habiger, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Habiger, of this city, who was drowned in the Connecticut river here, on June 20, was found floating in the river at Rockyhill this afternoon. The body was found by William Kolp, of Meriden. The funeral will be held tomorrow on the first anniversary of the death of the boy's brother, Joseph, 12, fatally injured when hit by a stake thrown by a circus roustabout as the boy was crawling under the show tent.

HOOVER SIGNS RIVERS AND HARBOR BILL

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—President Hoover signed a rivers and harbors bill today which in his own words authorizes a larger project than the Panama canal.

After he had attached his signature the chief executive enumerated three prespective benefits which may come from the measure.

"It will provide employment for thousands of men," his statement said. "It should be fruitful of decreased transportation charges on bulk goods, should bring great benefits to our farms and to our industries, it should result in a better distribution of population away from the congested centers."

The measure more than doubled the amount of authorizations given in the last rivers and harbors bill signed on January 21, 1926, by President Coolidge. That one authorized $71,000,000 of work, some of which is still going forward.

Since its inception in the 70th congress it has grown from its infant proportions of $55,000,000 to $145,000,000. One hundred and seventy projects are given government approval under it. The work is to be done over a period of from one to 15 years.

The act provides for the government to take over the Erie and Oswego canals and the Illinois waterway, and for a nine foot channel in the upper Mississippi between the mouth of the Illinois and St. Paul and Minneapolis, a six foot channel in the upper Missouri from Kansas City to Sioux City, a nine foot channel on the Tennessee from its mouth to Knoxville.

Other projects include channel deepening along the great lakes, work along the St. Lawrence waterway, and a Lake Okeechobee flood control project, in addition to numerous smaller harbor and waterway development activities.

BELIEVE WOMEN CAUSE OF GANGSTERS' DEATHS

DETROIT, July 4.—(AP)—Police believed tonight that three women held the key to the gangland execution of two Chicago hoodlums and the wounding of another man last night near the heart of Detroit's downtown district.

One is Mrs. Julia Kuffel Connors, widow of a Chicago racketeer, who was killed nine months ago, and more recently a sweetheart of William Cannon, one of the assassin's victims last night.

Another is known as Lou McDonald, said by police to be the common law wife of George Collins, the other hoodlum who died from a gangster bullet in last night's killings.

The third is Mrs. Mabel Barrett, Cannon's sister. She lives at the LaSalle hotel, by the side of which the three men were shot down, and talked to Cannon by telephone earlier in the day.

Fire Sweeps Wharves In Charlestown, Mass.

Coal, Lumber Yards and Warehouses Destroyed—All Boston Harbor Fire Boats Called Into Action..

BOSTON, July 4—(AP)—A fire of undetermined origin and unestimated damage swept a quarter of a mile of Boston's waterfront tonight, eating away hundreds of thousands of feet of valuable lumber and thousands of tons of coal.

Coal pockets smouldered and lumber piles crackled for hours after the first of five alarms had been sounded and fire officials believed that it would be late tomorrow afternoon before the last of the fire would be extinguished.

Breaking out in a small blacksmith shop at the rear of the Pacific Coast Lumber yards on Mystic Creek, the flames spread rapidly up and down the narrow waterway for a quarter of a mile. The blaze had eaten its way well into thousands of feet of dry pine boards before a watchman pulled the first alarm and had spread through adjoining yards and coal pockets before the apparatus arrived.

Batchelder and Whittemore's coal pocket, running a hundred yards along the creek proved the blockade at the upper end of the waterway. The other end of the burned area was bordered by a draw bridge that leads into Boston harbor and the navy yard, just across the street.

Between the Batchelder coal pocket and the draw, there were thousands of tons of coal stored. This was destroyed and also pile on pile of valuable timber.

Lumber yards in the harbor side of the Orpin company were scorched and seared but a great deal of the timber remained undamaged.

Fire boats made their way through the thick pine wood smoke that covered the creek to keep the flames from lumber schooners docked across from the blaze. The creek is scarcely more than 100 feet wide.

On the land side apparatus from every downtown station and from stations as far as five miles out, kept the flames from scores of wooden tenements.

Estimates of the damage ran from $250,000 and $500,000 to almost $1,000,000. The lower estimate was made by Fire Chief Fox and the higher officials of the companies.

Whittemore and Batchelor lost at least 10,000 tons of coal, it was believed; the Orpin Desk company from 10,000 to 20,000 feet of valuable mahogany; the Pacific Coast Lumber company over 150,000 feet of wood, it was believed; and several smaller companies lost several thousand tons of coal and many thousands of feet of lumber.

Hose lines were ordered kept on the ruins all night.

ELEVEN KILLED BY BLAST AT CHEMICAL FACTORY

CASTLEFORD, England, July 4.—(AP)—A violent explosion of chemicals this afternoon instantly killed 11 persons and wrecked the factory of the Hicksons and Parsons Chemical works.

Police and workmen searching the ruins had recovered 11 bodies tonight and continued to hunt for more. More than 20 seriously injured persons were taken to the hospital.

The cause of the explosion, which was heard and felt in towns ten miles away, had not been determined.

Rescuers could venture into the debris only after dense clouds of smoke and gases had been blown away by the wind. Fire apparatus and ambulances were rushed to Castleford from other communities, in many cases without having been summoned. By the mere sound of the explosion it was realized in other towns that a serious accident had occurred.

At least five hundred persons were homeless here tonight, many dwellings having been wrecked by the force of the explosion. Men, women and children wandered about the ruined streets, gazing at what was left of their homes, and wondering where to spend the night.

ENDURANCE FLIGHT ENDED AT 5.21 P. M. YESTERDAY

Chicago Fliers Were Forced Down By Faulty Oiling System After 23 Days, One Hour and 45 Minutes of Sustained Flying Above Sky Harbor Airport — Huge Holiday Crowd Saw Thrilling Finish and Burst Through Police Lines As Plane Landed—Fliers Exceeded Old Record By 133 Hours and 15 Minutes—Were In the Air Total of 553 Hours and 40 Minutes.

SKY HARBOR AIRPORT, Chicago, July 4—(AP)—Twenty-three days from the June afternon when they roared out of the dust at Sky Harbor—just two more would-be endurance fliers, unnoticed by anyone but a few mechanics—two Sparta, Ill., farm boys skimmed down into that same dust tonight to hear thousands hail them as champions.

John and Kenneth Hunter had been in the air for 553 hours and 41 1-2 minutes, and even then they were willing to go on, but, a clogged screen filter prevented their getting oil and they had to make a hurried landing, touching earth at 5:21:30, central standard time—more than 133 hours longer than the "St. Louis Robin's" previous record.

Their second-hand monoplane still was serving them well at the end, and the motor was still droning out the monotone it had kept up through the long days and nights of flying in darkness and light, and in wind and rain. But the frequent pouring of oil into the engine had clogged up the screen and, when the last contact was made five minutes before landing, no oil would enter. There was no choice but to come down, and they pulled away from the faithful "Big Ben," the refueling ship piloted by brothers Albert and Walter and swung down to the field.

The holiday thousands, who packed the grounds back of the ropes, became excited, as the sturdy "City of Chicago" whirred over the hangar. Ropes fell before their onrush and police were helpless before them.

So dense was the rushing mob that John, at the controls, had to do a ground loop to avoid hitting them. He taxied off again toward the hanger, with the milling thousands in pursuit. All around the ship they crushed, while observers for the National Aeronautical association battered their way through to get the barograph.

A radio man managed to shove through the pack and handed a microphone into the plane, where the erstwhile coal miners called their "Hello, world—sorry, we couldn't have stayed up longer."

Newspaper reporters and cameramen were not so fortunate. They had no chance against the surging, hysterical throng. It was only by luck that the first "flash," telling of the landing was clicked over the special telegraph wires before the uncontrollable spectators managed to shove their way into the hangar and tear away the wires. They were speedily repaired and the harried writers were able to get their stories of the landing and the subsequent bedlam to the hundreds of waiting newspapers.

Ten minutes after the landing, police managed to clear a path and drag the two fliers into an office, where they posed for pictures and had their first chance to relax.

Kenneth, oil spattered, unshaven, but smiling, said it was a keen disappointment to have been forced down, but added that it would have been too risky to attempt staying up any longer.

After a brief rest, the two pilots and their brothers, Walter and Albert Hunter who manned the refueling plane, were escorted to the top of the hangar and introduced to the crowd amid cheers. It was announced they would be taken to a Chicago loop hotel, for an overnight rest and the crowd was invited to join in an automobile parade to the loop.

Kenneth had to borrow a pair of trousers before he could remove his grimy overalls. He explained he had torn the leg from his own pants, to use as a rag.

MOONEY UNDISMAYED OVER COURT'S ADVERSE DECISION

SACRAMENTO, Calif., July 4—(AP)—Independence day brought another defeat to Warren K. Billings and Thomas J. Mooney in their long fight for freedom from life sentences imposed for the 1916 San Francisco preparedness day bombing which killed ten persons and injured 40.

The state supreme court, in a report made public today, voted six to one against recommending to Governor C. C. oung that Billings be pardoned. The governor repeatedly has said his action on Mooney's pardon plea would be guided by the recommendation in Billings' case.

Governor Young is expected to make his decision on both the Billings and Mooney pleas next week.

The adverse report brought a smile from Mooney at San Quentin prison.

"The fight is not yet over," the former labor leader commented. "It has been a long battle and I am never going to give up the attempt to prove my innocence."

Billings, at Folsom prison, had nothing to say, but Warden Court Smith remarked, "Naturally he was very disappointed."

Mooney and Billings long have contended they were convicted on "perjured testimony," but the supreme court said there was no evidence supporting these charges. The majority believed Billings had received a "fair and impartial" trial."

TWO WATERBURY MEN KILLED IN ACCIDENT

WATERBURY, July 4—(AP)—With only a half mile more to travel to their homes on a journey from a holiday dawn dance at Walnut Beach, Milford, Napoleon Distefano, 19, of this city and Fred Codianne, also of this city were fatally injured at 5 o'clock this morning in an automobile accident near the Platts mills, on the Naugatuck-Waterbury highway. Three others were injured, one seriously.

Driving a coupe with his younger brother, Frank, 18, and Napoleon Distefano asleep in the rumble seat, Fred Codianne crashed head-on into a sedan driven by Norman Johnson, 19, and carrying Ward Davis, 20, both of Naugatuck, former borough high school athletes. The driver of the Waterbury car and Distefano were hurled to the highway by the impact. An ambulance from St. Mary's hospital was rushed to the scene of the accident and the three Waterbury boys were hurried to the institution. Fred Codianne was dead before he reached the hospital, but Distefano lingered in an unconscious condition for three hours.

After leaving here in a few days the admiral will return later to spend the remainder of the summer writing books.

SEEK TO INDICT KANSAS CITY GAS COMPANY

KANSAS CITY, July 4—(AP)—U. S. Attorney Vandeventer today said he would seek to indict the Kansas City Gas company as "a manufacturer of liquor," in connection with the recent confiscation of an 800 gallon still in the basement of a garage here.

Vandeventer said the gas company's meter was in full view of the still and he considered the company culpable in that no report had been made by its representatives concerning the liquor manufacturing apparatus.

PRESIDENT HOOVER AT HIS VIRGINIA CAMP

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—The occasional pop of a firecracker today punctuated a quiet Fourth of July with officialdom largely out of town and the average citizen observing the safe and sane admonition.

President Hoover was at his Rapidan camp. He could not fish, the Virginia trout season having ended on June 30, but there was no ban on horse shoe pitching, hiking, horse back riding and resting.

Most of the house members were headed homewards, still in the "school's out" humor they displayed in the closing hours of congress. Some of them, however, will spend the rest of the summer in campaigning for the fall elections.

Quite a few members of both houses had engagements as Fourth of July orators. Vice President Curtis was at Ocean City, New Jersey, urging reverence and obedience to the constitution.

The majority leader, John Q. Tilson, was in his native state of Tennessee paying tribute to the pioneers and the old town of Jonesboro. Senator Royal C. Copeland, addressing a Tammany gathering, urged that the vexatious liquor problem be turned over to the individual states.

MAGDA LUPESCU AT KING CAROL'S SUMMER RESIDENCE

BERLIN, July 4.—(AP)—A Bucharest dispatch printed in a Berlin newspaper today said that Mme. Magda Lupescu, the companion of King Carol II when he was in exile, has arrived at the Rumanian royal summer residence at Sinaia.

The dispatch added that rooms had been reserved at the residence for Mme. Lupescu by King Carol, who was expected there tomorrow.

It also said her arrival had caused a great sensation in Bucharest court and political circles, with much speculation as to what action if any would be taken by Queen Helen, Carol's divorced wife, with whom he has been reported near a reconciliation, and Queen Mother Marie.

Dispatches from Bucharest today said King Carol had escorted Queen Helen and their son Michael to the railway station, where they entrained for Sinaia, and would join them in a few days.

CHINESE NATIONALISTS CLAIM REBELS DRIVEN NORTHWARD

SHANGHAI, July 4.—(AP)—Contradicting rebel claims of success, the nationalist government asserted today its forces had driven the insurgents northward in Honan province with capture of Kaifeng imminent.

Today was the 11th day of a battle expected to decide China's government. Nationalists struggled to drive the rebels into the Yellow river, while the insurgents tried to plunge through to Nanking and set up another government.

In the eastern sector northerners claimed they hurled government troops back in "great disorder," near the Chihli province border. Lost ground was recovered, they said, and nationalists were pursued eastward.

CHINESE BANDITS MURDER HUNDREDS AT YOCHOW

SHANGHAI, July 4—(AP)—China's civil war raged fiercely today in Honan province with victory uncertain, while bandits murdered hundreds at Yochow in Hunan.

Nationalist dispatches reported the government left wing hurled back northern rebels almost to their Kaifeng headquarters. Seizing important positions, the Nationalists dug in, preparatory to expected capture of the city.

ONLY TWO MINOR ACCIDENTS REPORTED OVER THE FOURTH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 4—A safe and sane Fourth with only two minor injuries and one police arrest reported up to late afternoon was enjoyed here. The daytime pyrotechnics while keeping up a more or less steady staccato throughout the city were not usually numerous. Traffic, especially in the forenoon and during the "homeward" hours of the evening was very heavy but was well handled by the police and up to evening no accidents had been reported. The several stands in the city erected for the sale of fireworks reported a good business, most of which was in the sale of night flares and rockets that were sent up in a grand festival of lights, colors and explosions during the evening.

At North Windham Jack McAnneeny, aged 9, and son of the automobile magnate who maintains a summer home there, sustained a painful hand injury and badly lacerated thumb by the premature explosion of a cracker. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital where he remains a patient under the care of Dr. Edward J. Ottenheimer.

Robert Sullivan, 14, son of Assistant Postmaster Daniel Sullivan of Pleasant street, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital with a burn on the leg sustained when a giant cracker exploded near him as he rode along on a bicycle. After treatment by Dr. Ottenheimer the youth was taken to his home.

While the usual scores motored to Connecticut and Rhode Island beaches for the day Lake Wamgumbaug and Columbia lake swarmed with bathers and picknickers who, took advantage of the fair weather and the proximity of these resorts for an outing.

LARGE PARADE FEATURES WILLIMANTIC'S CELEBRATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 4.—A Fourth that was safe and sane and yet presented a revival of the old spirit of the occasion in many ways, was observed here today. The motorized industrial review and ancients and horribles parade in the forenoon was witnessed by hundreds of people along the four-mile course of the procession which visited all wards of the city. An afternoon baseball game at Soldiers' Memorial field was well attended and a banner crowd turned out in the evening for the band concert and fireworks display staged by Gold Star post No. 1724, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Parade.

The parade was notable for its antiquity and unique floats bearing a galaxy of music and clowns. With some 40 trucks and automobiles in line, the parade got under way shortly after 9 o'clock under general command of Marshal James Lee who was mounted on the only horse appearing in the entire procession, the motors providing a paradox to the old-fashioned character of the parade. The leading car, piloted by P. J. Viens, was occupied by Fred Leclaire, chairman of the parade wearing an old "high-top" hat and hackney frock. Following in pleasure cars were ex-mayors Oscar O. Tanner, Herbert Chappell, W. D. Grant and Sheriff Charles A. Gates and Mayor Walter R. King. The remainder of the formation presented a clever review of some of the city's leading industries and merchandisers. On several of the trucks were groups of the "boys and girls of '76," clown bands, orchestras and the like, one group, attired in Revolutionary dress, representing the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Practical demonstrations of various trades were given on several of the floats this including the blacksmiths, Thompson & Brehant, who gave the tradesman's version of the Anvil Chorus with rhythmic hammer-blows on heated iron. Some of the trucks had been entered by out-of-town concerns.

Concert and Fireworks.

At 8 o'clock in the evening festivities at Soldiers' Memorial field began with a one-hour concert by the Knights of Columbus Boys' band, the entertainment being provided by Gold Star Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The concert was followed by a brilliant display of fireworks that held the crowd spell-bound. In a glorious finish the letters V. F. W. (Veterans of Foreign Wars) blazed in multicolors on a piece nearly five feet high and some 10 feet long.

The parade formed at the Center school grounds with a division of school children, one of floats and an amusing group of horribles to bring up the rear. Earl W. Green post No. 52 American Legion, of Coventry and Mansfield and the Coventry Men's Social club, George H. Robertson president, co-operated in the arrangements. Carleton P. King, commander of the post, was chairman of the sports, entertainment and picnic committee. Thomas L. Flaherty was chairman of the music and DeWitt Kingsbury of refreshments. Firewater Not Fireworks.

A new Fourth of July pastime was devised here today by Eugene Raymond Fancher of New York city, formerly of this city, when he drove his car partly on the sidewalk along Union street causing scores of persons to scurry to safety. Fancher first swept clean one side of the street and then went to the other sidewalk. He was arrested by Policeman Joseph Lachappelle and County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler and locked up on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. The case has been assigned for police court Saturday morning.

COLCHESTER

PRIN. JOHN W. GOODRICH GOING TO GLASTONBURY

John Welles Goodrich, principal of Bacon academy for the past year and science instructor at the academy for four years prior thereto, has been elected principal of Glastonbury high school, his new duties to commence at the beginning of the school year in September. Mr. Goodrich is a graduate of West Hartford high school, class of 1921, and of Connecticut Agricultural college, 1925. During his attendance at C. A. C., he was a prominent member of the track team and a member of Gamma Chi Epsilon, an honorary scholastic fraternity. In the summers of 1928 and 1929, Mr. Goodrich studied for the M.A. degree at Columbia university summer school and expects to resume his studies there this summer.

During the time he has been at Bacon academy, he has taken a particular interest in promoting school activities, including the academy orchestra, the class clubs and athletics. Under his supervision, several new courses of study were added to the curriculum and notable improvements have been made in the teaching system.

At Glastonbury high school, Principal Goodrich will be in charge of a staff of about 14 teachers. During their five years' residence in Colchester, Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich have made numerous friends who are sorry to learn that they are to leave the community, yet are pleased to note that Mr. Goodrich's unusual administrative ability is being recognized throughout the state, as is evidenced by the fact that he is advancing from the principalship of a high school of about a hundred students to be principal of a school with about three hundred.

Holiday Events

Fourth of July was ushered in at the stroke of 12 with the traditional ringing of the academy and the church bells, while the usual huge bonfire was started on the park baseball diamond. Truckloads of boxes and barrels, old tires and scrap lumber, were hauled to the site from various parts of the village. The blaze became so brilliant that the entire park and business section were brilliantly illuminated. Several hundred witnessed the time-honored event. Giant cannon crackers and roman candles were fired off at frequent intervals during the celebration. The members of the fire department under Assistant Foreman Conrad patrolled the business section to prevent any disturbance or damage to property.

Earlier in the evening a dance was held in Grange hall, under the auspices of the fire company, a six-piece orchestra furnishing music. The affair proved unusually successful, the net proceeds to go toward the July 4th fireworks fund. People were present from Norwich, Lebanon, Colchester, Hebron, Salem, New London, Hamburg, Marlborough, East Hampton, Fitchville, Yantic and other places.

One Regretful Feature

Youthful night-before-the-Fourth celebrators are credited with having set fire to several barns and sheds in this vicinity early Friday morning. A large empty barn in the Dublin section of town, formerly belonging to C. H. Levine and estimated to have been worth at least $700, was found burned to the ground, as was also a large shed on the former Frank Browning farm on the Colchester-Norwich road. A one-story empty building, across the road from the old Gott farmhouse on the Colchester-Amston road, a number of years ago used for the Amston postoffice, was also burned up. The building is understood to have belonged to the Charles Ams estate and was of little value.

Miss Edna Kashkin entertained about 20 friends at her home on Norwich avenue, on a recent evening. Games, dancing, songs and instrumental music were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. The rooms were decorated with flowers. In attendance were: Oscar and David Horwitz, Gladys Kalmanowitz, Bertha Levine, Fay Alpert, Pauline Lubin, Bessie Solomon, Pearl Gilman, V. M. Cohen, Dorothea Gersten, Sarah Lieberman, Ruth Mintz, Fred Kopp, Vivian Cohen, Samuel Jaffe, Harry Deitch, Eli Slopak, Abe Solomon and Jack Heller.

EASTFORD

BRIG.-GEN. NATHANIEL LYON WILLED $30,000 TO STATE

Brigadier-General Nathaniel Lyon, killed at Wilson's Creek, near Springfield, Mo., August 10, 1861, was a native of the town of Eastford and his body rests beneath a modest shaft just below Phoenixville. He was the first northern general to make the supreme sacrifice in the great conflict between the states. Lyon, who had been twice wounded in action, was shot dead while leading a regiment in a desperate charge. After his death it was found that Lyon, who was a bachelor, had bequeathed all he possessed (about $80,000) to the U. S. gvernment, to be used for war purposes. It has been suggested that a fitting recognition of ber 9, 1859—Vol. 1, No. 1228. The pap- patriotic, appreciative community and people. The Fourth of July period is a good time on which to begin.

DANIELSON

"KING" JACQUES RECEIVES MANY VISITORS ON BIRTHDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 4.—Today East Killingly, passing up its usual old-time observance of the Fourth, concentrated its efforts on publicly demonstrating its affections for one of its oldest and best-loved citizens, King George Washington Jacques, engaged with the observance of his 79th birthday.

As early as 5 o'clock this morning there was a serenade and demonstration for the King, known far and wide in eastern Connecticut, and there was a constant stream of callers throughout the day. He received birthday cards galore, as well as other gifts, and salutes were fired in his honor.

Tonight to close up the day an impromptu parade was organized, and, headed by a drum corps, proceeded to his home and gave him another rally. There was speech-making, felicitations and general good cheer. The King himself has said many times that he 's going to live to be at least 100 years old. Today every soul who has the honor of his acquaintance or, better still, his friendship, was rooting for him to do that particular thing, and then add a few years more for good measure.

State officers ranging far and wide over the territory that is included within the jurisdiction of the Danielson barracks, and that means as far south as Lisbon, as far north as the Massachusetts line, east to the Rhode Island line and west into Hampton, found practically nothing up to late afternoon to warrant checking anyone for what they were doing. As a matter of fact, not an accident of any consequence had been reported up to 5 p. m., and only one arrest had been made at that time, that of a man for having been intoxicated, over in Woodstock. The hope of the officers was that the day might end as auspiciously as it had continued into the late afternoon.

Youthful Burglars Caught

A clever ruse arranged by Chief John McFarland was the means of bagging two very youthful, but persistent, burglars the night before the Fourth. Each of the boys is 13 years of age, and today they were at liberty, and fearfully awaiting a court appearance Saturday morning, in custody, respectively, of father and uncle.

For about a week past there have been repeated breaks at the Charon store in the Hyde block. It has been evident that entrance was being gained through a cellar window, and the well-grounded suspicion was that the thieving was the work of boys. Wednesday night the cash register was looted of $11.

Yesterday Chief McFarland suggested to Mr. Charon that two men that he would designate should be "planted" in the store when it was locked up on the night before the Fourth. The chief named William Gileau, clerk in the store, and the chief's son, Earl McFarland, for the job.

Accordingly, when the store was locked up at 9 last night, these men were in hiding at designated places in the store when the lights went out. A long cord had been attached to an overhead light, that it might be pulled on at the proper moment.

Within ten minutes after the store was in darkness the men hidden within heard a cellar window being taken out and, shortly thereafter, voices in the cellar.

The young thieves were not molested for the time being, but allowed to make their way up into the store and to go along to the cash register, which soon gave the signal that it was being opened. On flashed the lights and two frightened and trapped boys dropped to the floor.

The boys are said to have admitted responsibility for the other breaks at the Charon store within the past few nights.

It is understood that their visitations to the store have netted them about $30, much of which has gone to meet their desire for amusement or refreshment.

Casualties of the Fourth

This is not represented as a complete list of those who suffered injuries in this town celebrating the Fourth with explosives, chiefly firecrackers, but it is illustrative of the fact that the 100 per cent safe and sane Fourth is years ahead.

Charles Chandler, a younger resident on Prospect street, had his eyebrows singed and was slightly burned about the head while placing a lighted firecracker under a can where some carbide previously had been exploded. It is presumed that some gas remained from the prior explosion and set off the firecracker prematurely.

Bronslow Kmuda, a very little boy, is nursing an injured hand at his home on the White Row as the result of a misdirected shot from a .22-calibre blank cartridge.

Clifford Basley, about 9 years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Basley of Dayville, is the most seriously injured of any that reports were received on up to late this afternoon. Clifford tossed a lighted 5-inch firecracker out into the street, and when it did not explode picked it up and began to blow on the still-lighted fuse. His face was quite badly torn about the mouth and cheeks and nine stitches were taken to close the wound.

Another firecracker accident at Dayville was to Eustache Beauregard. He had the palm of his hand ripped open by a prematurely exploding firecracker he was holding.

Up on North street this afternoon a home-made cannon being handled by Joseph E. Provencal backfired, filling his face, eyes and neck with powder. He was given attention by Dr. George M. Burroughs, who said that there was possibility that the man's sight may be saved.

A Quiet Fourth

The late hours of the night before and the early hours of the Fourth of 1930 may be listed as the quietest for corresponding periods through at least a generation in this town. There are summer nights when back-firing automobiles make more noise than was to be heard here between 11 p. m. last night and dawn this morning. At 3 a. m. noise-making touched absolute zero, and all was as quiet as on a winter night.

When YOU WANT to put your business before the public there is no medium better than through the advertising columns of The Bulletin.

Chief John McFarland had extra officers on duty to curb any demonstration that celebrators might have intended to stage, but it so happened that there was little or nothing for them to do, insofar as enforcing the keeping of the peace was concerned. However, the fact that they were on duty is regarded as having had a commanding effect.

The quietness of the period mentioned is not at all likely to have been due to any loss of enthusiasm or lessening of patriotism over the coming again of the anniversary of Independence day. In many quarters the slump in noise-making is charged up against the shortage of cash in the pocket of the average person who likes to step out and make the welkin ring when the Fourth rolls around each year.

There was more or less noise about town today in various places, but not too much. Tonight there were fireworks displays, but reports from vendors of fireworks indicated in advance that the sales were not up to what they usually are and there was a consequent less elaborateness of display.

Baseball games and theatrical programs were enjoyed by hundreds in Danielson and the immediate surrounding country today and tonight. A great many residents quit Danielson for the holiday period, which extends through three days this year. There were fewer out-of-town visitors here today than is usually the case on the Fourth.

Friends regret the accident which recently befell Mrs. Lucy Abby Palmer at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Ahern on Spring street, Westerly. Mrs. Palmer's hip has been set, and she is as comfortable as could be expected although of course a long period of enforced confinement to her bed is necessitated.

One of the handsomest bouquets that ever adorned the church was that furnished by Marvin Palmer for the Sunday morning service— a dozen and a half of huge pink pond lilies. Mr. Palmer has many such but one had better not pick them without his express permission!

An occasional patrol by the state police might serve to arrest too much speeding over the new highway.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM ENTERED UPON ITS 76TH YEAR THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 4—The town of Putnam entered upon its 76th year of incorporate life Thursday. There was not even as much as a church bell rung to commemorate the event. "Seventy-five years old and still going strong," was the comment of one of the older citizens who remember a great deal of the events that contribute to Putnam's history.

Although Putnam is only 25 years away from the century mark, it is the youngest town in the county. Known for many years as "Pomfret factory" after Ozias Wilkinson of Pawtucket, who erected Connecticut's first cotton mill on the site near Cargill Falls, the villages of Ballouville, Morse's village, Rhodesville and Pomfret Depot were at length incorporated into a new township—that of Putnam. The date was 1854 and on July 3 of the following year the citizens of the new municipality, met in town meeting for the first time. Quinebaug hall was the scene of the gathering. The population of Putnam at that time numbered 2,319.

Records reveal that George Warren served as moderator and James W. Manning, as clerk of the first town meeting. George Warren, Luther Hopkins and Horace Seamans, comprised the first board of selectmen. Asa Cutler was agent of the town deposit fund while Moses Chandler, Abel Dresser, Jr., and Erastus Torrey were grand jurors. Abiel Clark was constable.

History tells us that three towns,—Pomfret, Killingly and Thompson parted with portions of the lands alloted their respective townships which went to make up the new town. Pomfret gave three square miles, Thompson gave nine and a half and Killingly's contribution was seven and a half square miles.

The formation of the town of Putnam in 1854 was the result of a long struggle. The plan had been suggested on many occasions but strenuous opposition was voiced by the mother towns of Killingly—Thompson and Pomfret. Arguments that grew out of the plan of incorporation of the new community were held in Hartford and during the sessions, state-wide attention was attracted to the campaign which was waged for six years, before the efforts to adopt the town of Putnam were finally crowned with success.

A joint celebration of Putnam's 75th and of Independence Day, was talked of some time ago, but the proposal was not received with any marked degree of enthusiasm on the part of town leaders, who were content to allow the event to pass quietly.

Mayor Charles A. Richard, who has conducted a successful grocery establishment in Putnam for the past 24 years is to retire from further business pursuits. His decision to retire was announced this week. Following the disposal of his stock of goods, Mayor Richard will remove to a new home on South Main street. His departure from Putnam's commercial life, where he has been a central figure for nearly a quarter of a century, is done in the interests of his health which was impaired the past winter as the result of a long illness. He has no plans for the future, except the taking of a long and much needed rest.

A force of special police officers patrolling every corner of the city held Fourth of July celebrators in check Thursday evening, and the general "night before" observance passed off quietly. The police blotters were clear until a late hour this afternoon, not a single arrest having been made.

Not only was the "night before," the same as any July night when the thermometer is hitting the high spots, but the prevailing and unusual silence of Thursday evening continued throughout the day. Excepting for intermittent reports of giant fire-crackers and bombs, which were set off at intervals there were no demonstrations that will in any way go down in the city's history.

While the celebration of Independence day was generally regarded as having been a safe and sane observance, the day had its casualties. Late this afternoon two patients were admitted to the Day Kimball hospital suffering from injuries caused by exploding noise makers. John Andrews, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Andrews of Farrows street was severely burned late this afternoon when a blank cartridge exploded in his hand. The wound was caused by powder, the hospital report said. He was treated and was discharged in an improved condition early this evening.

Joseph Provinso of Danielson was a patient at the hospital late this afternoon suffering from powder burns about the face and injuries to his eyes.

Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston is quietly conducting a personal campaign to rid the city of fire hazards which are continuously threatening property destruction, unbeknown to owners. During the week Chief Thurston has visited a number of places in the city where questionable conditions are known to exist. In one place his inspection revealed large quantities of waste and papers carelessly strewn in corners of the building. Conditions were immediately rectified as soon as his orders were given, the chief said.

Putnam's business section is at the present being directly lighted. Globes on the special 400 candle-power light standards have been removed by the light company at the request of the common council. The removal of the shades is an experiment, recommended to the council by Alderman Robert T. Chadwick. Its purpose is to see if the lights will distribute more light without the mantles than with them. In the opinion of an interested observer, the business section seems to be receiving no additional supply of illumination without the globes. The light is somewhat brighter, but its distribution seems to be centered upon a smaller area than before.

A new 400 candle power light has been installed on the telegraph pole on the corner of Main and Front streets, directly in front of the shoe department of the Bugbee corporation store. It is a noted and worthwhile improvement. Through its presence, many dangers existing at this point of the street have been eliminated. Alderman Chadwick introduced the motion for the light to the council at the session Tuesday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry A. Houghton and Miss Madelyn Houghton of Grove street have returned to their home after a motor trip into the New Brunswick woods.

Rev. James F. English former pastor of the Congregational church now pastor of a Congregational church in Manchester, N. H., was a visitor in Putnam Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Dean have returned from a ten day wedding trip and are making their home with Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Dean of Mechanics street. Mrs. Dean before her marriage was Miss Winifred Mellor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard H. Mellor of Grove street.

A number of local baseball enthusiasts were in Boston today attending the doubleheader between the world champion Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Red Sox.

Miss Molly E. Noonan, Miss Grace R. Murphy and Miss Helen Noble of Northampton, Mass., were the guests of relatives here over the week end.

JEWETT CITY

GAME WITH WAUREGAN HAD ALL THE OLD-TIME PEP

In the old days, twenty-five years ago, when the Jewett City team was to play in Wauregan half the town went with the players. So it was this time, a representation of over 100 boroughites were on the job, with rooting powers unimpaired by the passing of a quarter of a century.

From all sides were to be heard expressions of wonder, that of 18 men who took their places on that same field back in 1904, all but one checked in, and filled his appointed station. One who knew both teams well back in those earlier days stood and looked over the faces again. Here and there, as the game went on, there were many incidents of action, recalling the tactics and style of each individual, to indicate that the same men were in play again.

George Robertson and Morgan Moore proved to be the same invincible battery as of yore, while "Pop" Williams, "Gordie" Willis and the rest of the young old boys, sprinted around the field like thoroughbreds. "Bon Homme" Ritchie, caught a pop fly to short and ran to third before the runner that had started for the plate on the hit could get back, thus performing the extremely unusual stunt of an unassisted double-play. Jewett City won, but the victory gave no hint of the blood-curdling, hair-raising performances that were accustomed to take place, back when the world was twenty-five years younger than it is today.

The boys met one another again, they shook hands all around, and even, if there were to be noted silver threads among the gold, the light in the eyes seemed undimmed. It was a renewal of old friendships, and an affair altogether worthwhile.

MR. AND MRS. CHAS. MAYNARD NOTE SILVER ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maynard entertained a number of relatives and friends on July Fourth with a clambake at their bungalow at Quinebaug camps, to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. Their camp is situated in an ideal spot on the bank high above the Quinebaug and yet almost in the treetops. The most appetizing aroma arose from the real old-fashioned bake prepared by two chefs, Horace Dawley and Earl Hiscox, and which contained clams, mackerel, filet of sole, and potatoes. Clam chowder, clam fritters, tomatoes, cucumbers, radishes, watermelon, lemonade and wedding cake were also on the menu, served to fifty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Maynard were remembered with gifts of money, silver and many other tokens. The host and hostess have lived in Jewett City all their lives, and have many friends who are congratulating them and offering wishes for years more of happy married life.

There is to be a union service of the three Protestant churches at the Methodist church Sunday evening at 7:30, with Rev. E. E. Scates speaker.

Mrs. Francis Campbell has returned from a visit in Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McBroome entertained their family at a shore dinner prepared by Mr. McBroome at their home. Their guests were Attorney and Mrs. John T. Barry, Mr. and Mrs. John McBroome and daughter Doris, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McBroome and children Gladys and Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hebert and children, Ruth and Walter and Miss Alice Flannery of New Britain.

Finn's Sunday. All-talking and singing. The Golden Calf, with Sue Carol and El Brendel.—adv.

One pleasing feature of a bright and pleasant July 4th was a marked absence of revolver shooting, which has often been a dangerous nuisance. The police report little trouble the night before, with those who wished to celebrate illegally. Three extra patrolmen were on duty, and men were assigned to extra night tricks at the engine house.

GRIPPING MYSTERY PLAY ON CHAUTAUQUA NIGHT

The play, Dead Man's Holiday, given at Chautauqua Thursday night, certainly was hair-raising and so mystifying that certain people, on leaving the tent, evidently could not settle the whirl inside their craniums. A perfectly sane and well balanced young man, just sort of dazedly meandered toward his brand new Ford, got in, sat down next to his wife (?) and reached for the cigar lighter in an effort to settle his nerves with a smoke. To his bewilderment, there wasn't any cigar lighter, and the equally dazed woman beside him—for she never said a word—wasn't his wife, or anyone he knew. With a sort of "Hetty" like expression we do now?" expeditiously unfolded of horror, he weakly said, 'What do himself from the seat, and wandered around, finally locating his own machine and his lawful spouse, his brain being somewhat cleared with the shock.

FOUR HOLIDAY ACCIDENTS AT END OF CELEBRATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 4.—Four accidents happened on the Fourth, all of which were painful. Donald McNicol has an injured hand as the result of the discharge of a borrowed pistol. Jack Whalley had the five fingers on his right hand burned by a firecracker and injuries behind one ear. A young man named Nadeau has a deep gash on the thigh, caused by an accident with an open knife. A small child living on Hill street was burned on the leg.

An Attractive Spot.

The men who work on the road for the state here made an attractive stopping place for lunch or resting at the west end of Leffingwell, where the town joins Montville. There is a table with seats, a pretty little bridge and a settee all beside the brook, which add its own charm to the spot.

THE ADJOURNED CONGRESS

That congress has completed its work and adjourned will be the cause for general satisfaction. The country will welcome the relief from the long drawn out session and the uncertainty which has prevailed during much of the prolonged debate and maneuvering. It would be happier if the senate had disposed of the London pact before adjournment, but there is a realization that the consideration of that treaty will probably occupy but a few days, and aside from that one matter there is probably little that will occupy its attention. Its members are too anxious to get away from Washington to attempt anything that would keep them in session longer than necessary.

Several important matters have been disposed of in the session just closed, while others which should have been acted upon remain undecided.

The country knows the importance of the special tax reduction that was made and of the bills that were put through for the relief of unemployment. There has been a revision of the tariff after squabbling, the placing of the prohibition enforcement bureau in the department of justice, the disposition of veteran relief legislation, the ratification of the French debt settlement, the reorganization of the federal power commission and the passage of rivers and harbors legislation. After much discussion nominations for two vacancies on the supreme court bench have been ratified and provision has been made for the continuance of the law enforcement commission. Various relief activities have been brought together under one head.

Much more was attempted against the wishes of the administration, but for the most part they were blocked, while certain measures, including Muscle Shoals, remain for another session to wrestle with. It was a session featured by the obstructive tactics of the senate which was determined to embarrass the president in every possible way, the coalition of democrats and insurgents making it possible, and it would have been successful to a greater degree but for the strong administration support given by the house. That the session is over, however, is cause for rejoicing by more than the members of congress.

THE CYCLOPS' DISAPPEARANCE

In these days when it is possible to communicate so freely with others and with the shore, provided there is the necessary equipment, not many ships are expected to disappear without a trace. The situation is different from what it was in other days and yet no one knows definitely what became of the United States collier Cyclops a dozen years ago. This is one of the modern mysteries, one that it was hardly believed could happen, even though it was during the period of the war.

Whether the information which the navy department has received actually clears up that mystery is as yet uncertain. There is a story being told, and which is being checked, which may furnish the solution. Thus far it is no more than a story and there are features of it which seem incredible, as well as others which seem plausible.

This tale has been revealed through a diary which is said to have been kept by one who participated in the destruction of the collier, and relates that the ship left Barbadoes with a cargo of manganese bound for Baltimore. Four men, involved in the plot to destroy the ship, had placed dynamite about the boilers and at a fixed time caused it to explode and the ship to sink. That might have been done, but it discloses that a foreign ship had not only picked up the diary writer but also all debris coming from the Cyclops, remaining in the vicinity for that purpose in order to destroy all knowledge as to what became of the vessel and where it was lost. This ship was also said to have carried several hundred people.

This phantom ship seems to furnish a fanciful feature of the tale. That it should be able to remove all trace of such a wreck doesn't seem possible. That such a sinking could have been kept secret by hundreds of people for such a length of time seems incredible. The diary would appear to be a bit of fiction written about the loss of the Cyclops, a speculation as to what might have happened, and until there is something to corroborate the details of the story as brought to light there will be hesitancy in accepting it as the correct story of its loss.

OUR WHEAT CROP

As a means of relieving the situation in the agricultural sections it has been urged more or less frequently that there should be a diversification of crops instead of an increase in the production of those crops in which there is already large over-production each year. The point on which emphasis is laid is that it rests to a considerable extent with the farmers themselves to relieve the situation. Trying to get relief through legislation which gives encouragement to increased over-production is the wrong way of reaching a solution.

As a study of the world wheat situation, the department of agriculture declares that there must be extensive adjustment in the wheat acreage if wheat production is to be profitable to growers generally in the next six to ten years. This bears out what has been said before and is based upon the competition in world markets because of the increased production in this and other countries when there is not a corresponding increase in demand.

The department is not directing attention to this situation because it likes to proclaim this state of affairs, but because it sees the necessity of having the world wheat situation understood in order that there may be a proper regulation of the domestic situation. It is through a realization of such conditions that adjustments can be made.

It seems quite evident that if the wheat growing countries of the world are already producing more wheat than is needed, and continuing to plunge ahead in the expectation that all wheat is going to be utilized and good prices maintained, someone is going to awaken to the falsity of such an idea. If, on the other hand, some help toward better prices in this country may be secured through curtailed acreage, and use can be made of part of the acreage now being devoted to wheat for the production of other profitable crops, it would seem to be time to give serious consideration to this need.

Thus, the world wheat survey which has been made by the department of agriculture should not fail to get the attention it deserves from the wheat raisers. Once again it furnishes them valuable information about what they are vitally interested in and a word to the wise should be sufficient.

THE HUNTERS' FLIGHT

If the flight of the Hunter brothers in the City of Chicago has demonstrated nothing else it has shown that the time which airplanes can remain aloft is governed by the time the engine will continue to function. As long as it is possible to feed it fuel, as long as the pilots can obtain some sleep and food, as long as weather conditions do not interfere, the flying machine can keep on purring.

In the performance over the Sky Harbor airport there was a remarkable performance by an old plane and by the brothers, who knew how to handle it and repair its deficiencies as they developed. With such fliers in such a machine able to remain 553 hours in the air, they have established a record which may soon be broken, but it is one which everyone will not be anxious to attack. Sticking to such a grind night and day for 23 days involves a severe tax on a person in such close quarters, and crawling out on a catwalk to repair the engine under such conditions is not a job that many people would relish. Such are among the requirements in endurance tests in the air, though none has followed them to the limit that the Hunters have.

There were the days when the length of flights depended upon the amount of fuel that could be carried. Those days are gone. The refueling arrangement has practically eliminated the problem of fuel supply, as the hundreds of refuelings for the City of Chicago have demonstrated. To a certain extent engine repairs can be taken care of, but when vital parts become defective and breaks occur endurance tests must end.

The Hunters have given a great demonstration of flying, have shown they have the stamina to engage in such a contest and have pushed the endurance record so far ahead as to discourage many who might otherwise like to try for a better one. They have set a hard goal for those who may be anxious to pass it.

CLEAR UP THE SITUATION

Sooner or later some decision must be reached concerning the chairman of the republican national committee. With a clear presentation of all the facts, it might be difficult to convince the fair-minded that there was anything in the conduct of Chairman Huston that would call for his resignation. There are those who think he has done nothing to call for such action, while others believe that the action of the chairman has been put forth in such a manner as to create an impression that will be hard to remove and for that reason his retention of the important office would have an embarrassing effect. Whatever the right or wrong of the matter, the situation now is such that it can be employed to the detriment of the individual and the organization which he happens to head.

In order to relieve that situation and remove any embarrassment for the organization there is, and has been, a strong demand for his retirement. That is a course which Chairman Huston is disposed to resist, although from the effect which the claims made against him are bound to have, whether justified or not, it would appear that the time has come for the submergence of personal interests for the good of the organization.

The desire is to eliminate any such situation from the campaign by the choice of a new chairman. As it stands, the opposition is furnished an issue upon which much stress will be placed, regardless of the real merits of the situation. This should be recognized by the chairman and in the interest of party welfare another should be allowed to take the helm. Nothing is going to be gained for anyone through a delay in such action.

EDITORIAL NOTES

All the celebrating was not because of the adjournment of congress, but it might well have been included.

The man on the corner says: Did you come through the celebration intact or in pieces?

With all the tributes, medals and tokens presented to him, Admiral Byrd will need a museum to keep them in.

When the Smoke Prevention association meets in Newark this week it will have much to say, but no terrors for the tobacco industry.

If Admiral Byrd found the silence of the polar region depressing, he probably hasn't found much to complain of since he returned home.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

There is an advantage in overcoming that is rarely stressed to its full value, and that is in the imparting of strength to make greater victories. By using what strength we have judiciously gives us more strength to use. It is also scientific fact that we can refrain from using strength so long as to have no strength to use. The Bible expresses the same thought in the Book of Proverbs in the following language: "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." There is hardly a phase of life where this principle does not apply. The schoolboy learns how to do examples in arithmetic only by doing them, and every one he does tends to make the principle more firmly fixed in his mind. In the same way he learns baseball by playing the game. Imparting strength creates strength.

Unless the calendar is wrong this day is July 5, 1930, and the writer wonders just how you feel, and the "you" applies to the little boys who did not use fire crackers and torpedoes with adequate caution, and it applies with equal force to some ministers (who might be mentioned) who attempted to settle the political trials of the universe in their stump speeches. If the lads, and possibly some of the lassies, have bandaged fingers today we can understand the reason why. Now if conscience worked normally there are some ministers who opened their mouths wide, and beat the air fiercely yesterday who ought to have their hearts and minds bandaged up in cotton batten today. If there was some kind of a mental chronometer to measure all the lies told yesterday, we could see that this is the land where everybody can say anything.

While the human mind under the urge of extreme emotion may somewhat overdo the patriotic stunt, let us have a little patience and forbearance because there are big things to talk about here in America that make it perfectly easy and natural, unless one is severely on his guard, to overstate and exaggerate. No nation exists, or ever has existed, that has become great in so short a time, and along so many lines, as America! It was more than a thousand years from the founding to the breaking up of the old Roman empire. Think of the vast reach of time between Edward the Confessor and George the Fifth of England. Thus all the nations of Europe measure their history by millenniums while we are only about a century and a half old. As far as expansion is concerned along national lines we have done about as much in a century as many others have in a millennium.

Long ago a great man said that "the proper study of mankind was man." That tallies with the emphasis that is put on the importance of biography. Now the scholars, that is the great ones of all modern countries, have called attention to the amazing number of able men this country had during the Revolutionary war and subsequently. If we look at them not so much in the aggregate as in the proportion to the population we shall see the force of this statement. When we recall the men who created the Declaration of Independence, one of the outstanding state papers of all ages; a paper that can be put along side of the Mosaic Decalogue, or England's Magna Charta, without losing prestige, is in itself evidence what colonies, raw in experience, can do when some great universal principle is at stake. It is well that the Fourth of July should once a year tell its story to the world.

How true it is and always has been when we get frightened over the possible exhaustion of some great natural product, somebody discovers something that is a valuable substitute, or takes its place altogether. For the last ten or 14 years fear has been frequently and emphatically expressed that within a few years there would be a lumber shortage. It was probably true that the demand for lumber was getting to be far in excess of its growth. There seems to have been a real foundation for this alarm because there is more demand for lumber than for any other single product for building purposes. Now scientists begin to search for something to preserve this necessary commodity, and at length it was found in zinc chloride. Since its discovery and application it has been found that the life of lumber has more than doubled, and the use of zinc chloride in which it is steeped does not interfere with the working of it.

We can see what effect this will have on the business all around. It will avoid skinning the forests as in the past decade. And that means much in preserving the fertility of the soil because it keeps the forests from being denuded. It also permits the timber to grow to a size where it can demand a larger price to the farmers, and at the same time is of greater value for building purposes. It likewise puts off to a more distant day any possibility of a timber famine. When we remember that lumber is still far and away the greatest natural material used in building, we can see the great economic value of increasing its longevity. From this we can also see the great economic value to the builder, houses, barns, garages, fences, posts, platforms, railroad ties and other things of like nature will not have to be replaced so often.

There is a good old hymn we frequently sing to the tune Laban, composed by Dr. Lowell Mason in 1830: "My soul be on thy guard! Ten thousand foes arise!" This dear old hymn recently came rushing into my mind in reading a notice in one of our leading religious journals in regard to the recent doings of a minister whose name is listed as being in good and regular standing. He represented himself as an agent going about raising money for the missionary work in South Dakota, and also that he was stranded and without money. Now this man did an easy thing, but more foolish than it was easy. He went to a bank to cash a $20 check. Very soon the check came back protested. There were no funds back of it. This seems to have been several times duplicated. He has eluded arrest so far, but the time is coming when he will be behind the bars.

When one is out sightseeing the farther he is away from some particular point of importance the less intensive is his interest in it. If one starts from any point in New England to visit Niagara Falls, he is not so keenly alive to this great cataract when he passes through Springfield or even Albany as when he nears Buffalo. Now we have just been in the atmosphere of another Fourth of July, the most important of any of our national holidays. But is there the same intensity of purpose today in its celebration as there was up to the beginning of this present century? Elderly people can hardly help comparing the present with 50 or more years ago. There are valid reasons for it. We have a very large foreign element now that we did not 50 years ago. It is saying nothing against their patriotism or good citizenship if they do not feel the thrill of those in whose veins there flows the blood of those who served in that great conflict a century and a half ago.

NEW BIOGRAPHY OF BENEDICT ARNOLD MARKS 150TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS TREASON

It was just 150 years ago that Benedict Arnold, commanding the strategic citadel of West Point, engaged in the plot to betray his trust to the British. As if in commemoration of this sesquicentennial, a new biography of the traitor has just appeared, "Benedict Arnold, the Proud Warrior," by Charles Coleman Sellers (Minton, Balch and Company, New York, 1930). The book is obtainable at the Otis library.

On the whole, this new biography is not unsympathetic. According to Mr. Sellers the traitor was splendid in battle, a fine and courageous leader. His treason was primarily due to the belief that the patriot cause was so weak that it could be shattered by a single stroke from within; and by delivering that stroke, Arnold hoped to pin a place in English history akin to that occupied by General Monk, whose defection from the parliamentary cause a century before had led to the restoration of King Charles II.

Concerning Arnold's character and his boyhood days in Norwich, where he was born, Mr. Sellers says:

Father Was a Drunkard.

"Hannah Arnold, (Benedict's sister) might chat about their great-grandfather, who had been president and governor of Rhode Island colony, but it was known that their father had come to Norwich as a cooper, had turned merchant, had failed at last, and died a poor drunkard and a public nuisance. Perhaps the quick pride of his son was touched by this disgrace, as his own sons were to be inflamed by the stain upon their father's honor.

"Not that the son had scruples about high living. He was apparently a popular pot companion, and in this day but little of moderation was required in gentlemen's pot companionship. He was a man of forceful ambitions, not to be seduced by fruitless pleasures.

"In the life of a thinker, the environment of childhood is of the first importance. But to Arnold it could add only the sense of gentle birth. The Puritan piety of his mother and his neighborhood, utterly incompatible with his nature, was far less a stimulus to action than the ignominy of his father's being 'taken up' by the constable for public drunkenness.

"The gossips, as sympathetic as they are aggressive, loved to dwell upon the sad case of the young man's mother, so often shamed by husband and son, and yet so piously watchful over her untamable gift of the Almighty, tenderly urging upon him the needs of his soul. 'Pray, my dear, whatever you neglect dont neglect your presios soal which once lost can never be regained.'

His Wild Boyhood.

"But the child had grown up as a leader of the wildest boys, a vigorous, careless, boastful lad, mischievous and a bully, a dark, smiling boy. He had hunted wildcats and foxes in the woods, he had stolen poultry and tied tin buckets to the tails of the farmers' cattle. He had gained renown by clinging with hands and feet to the water wheel of a mill, lifted high in air and carried down into the rumbling depths of the race with each ponderous, whining rotation.

"At 14, when interrupted in the business of stealing tar barrels from a shipyard near Norwich, he had stripped off his jacket and challenged the constable, 'a stout and grave man,' to fight. It was common talk of how, at 15, he had run away to join the forces mustering for service in the north. Friends had pursued and restored him to the poor mother, but ere long he vanished anew with the same purpose.

"This time he had seen service at Ticonderoga, and other of the wilderness fortresses, until, finding even militia discipline wearisome, he deserted and came home again. Not long after, the worries and prayers of the mother had been ended in death, an event which the gossips must needs lay to the wild pranks of her son."

How "Old Put" Regarded the Traitor.

The attitude taken by General Putnam, Windham county's Revolutionary war hero, is shown by Mr. Sellers in the following incident: "The people of Norwich and New Haven were never tired of reiterating that they were not surprised by Benedict Arnold, who had always been a remarkably bad one. Wayne had felt forewarned by the 'peculate talents' and the 'dirty, dirty acts,' by which Arnold had made two ends meet in the last months. Samuel Adams and James Lovell and other of the critics of Washington dilated on their previous suspicions.

"But in spite of Arnold's rude breaking of all the ties of friendship, sturdy John Lamb refused to allow his reputation as a soldier to suffer. Arnold had offered his compliments by a flag of truce, and Lamb had replied that when the traitor was hanged he would be willing to go barefoot to see the execution.

"He once deplored, at mess, that so capable a soldier should prove so despicable a villain. A brigadier of Gates' staff contradicted him.

" 'Consummate courage, sir! Where has he ever exhibited any proof of such qualities?'

Lamb mentioned some instances.

" 'Pshaw, sir. Mere Dutch courage. He was drunk, sir.'

" 'Sir,' said Lamb, 'let me tell you, that drunk or sober, you will never be an Arnold, or fit to compare with him in any military capacity.'

"The table was hushed, a challenge in order, and hotly forthcoming, when General Putnam, in his guttural lisp, interrupted the dispute.

" 'Whatth all thith? God cuth it, gentlemen, let the traitor go! Here'th Washington'th health in a brimmer.' "

"Victory or Death!"

Arnold was at his best on the battlefield, especially that of Saratoga, where he contributed more largely to the patriot victory perhaps than any other commander. Mr. Sellers gives us this glimpse of Arnold leading the decisive charges in that engagement, supported by Norwich and New London troops:

"In the meantime, Arnold, mounted on a splendid bay charger, had been riding about the camp in a torment of impotence, watching his regiments being ordered out by the aides of Gates. His excitement rose till it was bursting into an ecstasy of mad fury. He was full of the high-12 Gen Mot 4' po . . 126¾ 126¼ 126¾ sounding phrases with which the warriors of that day and of subsequent American melodrama encouraged their troops. He turned wildly to his little family of faithful officers.

" 'No man shall keep me in my tent today!' he cried. 'If I am without command I will fight in the ranks; but the soldiers, God bless them, will follow my lead! Come on! Victory or death!'

"Learned's men, advancing on the British center, received the rider in buff and blue with a cheer. The men were rushing forward, a hoarse excitement sounding along the ranks as they neared the battle. Arnold was among them, his sword in the air.

" 'Colonel Latimer's, sir.'

" 'Ah, my old Norwich and New London friends! God bless you! I am glad to see you! Now come on, boys, if the day is long enough we'll have them all in hell before night!'

Norwich and New London Troops Charge.

"Behind him, the jogging line surged forward to the charge. Farmer lads, knuckles white where they gripped their guns, breathing hard, and veterans of three years' service with faces hardened in expectation, ran forward, the weight of the long flintlocks swinging them on. They halted, delivered their fire, and swept on again, toward the waiting line of blue-coated German infantry; a long wave of homespun, of ragged shirts and bare, broad chests, a wave of bayonets stretched out before the hurtling bodies, and clubbed muskets swinging high.

"The Germans, holding doggedly to their works, drove them back a space, and then retreated as the wave surged in again. As three thousand militiamen reinforced the American front, the shattered remnant of their opponents everywhere gave way, Burgoyne himself, his clothing torn by the bullets of the riflemen, bringing them off.

"Against their redoubt at Freeman's Farm, commanding in some measure the surrounding country, manned largely by survivors of the wreck, and ably held by the young earl of Balcarres, Arnold hurled the victorious regiments, shouting like a maniac as he dashed among them, his sword glittering around him through the smoke. Uniting the bodies of men with instinctive skill, he led them to the charge, in the face of musketry and grape, across the abattis and against Balcarres' works. But their rush was checked at the breastwork, and they fell back again, shielding themselves behind stumps and hillocks to keep up a hot, close fire, 'a continual sheet of flame along the lines,' a British officer described it. But there was small chance to decide the issue here.

Rode Between Two Lines of Fire.

"Westward, along the neutral ground between the two fires of friend and enemy, the battle-mad fire-eater rode. It was a feat of unheard-of temerity. Coming upon a part of Learned's brigade, he led it against the outposts of a redoubt held by von Breymann's Germans, and cleared them. The redoubt commanded Burgoyne's camp, and to take it would leave him the choice of counter offensive or surrender.

"Arnold gathered more troops and charged again. Behind him again came a wave of long-haired men, of faces lined and sharpened by the struggle with the wilderness strained and sharpened now behind the surging, lunging bayonets; of hands, hardened by the flail and scythe, swinging their muskets among the bodies before them, as, in a moment, they broke over the top, driving the Germans before them."

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 4—Under the surface in Washington a battle is in progress.

It has to do with selection of the next chief of staff of the army to succeed General Summerall when his hitch is up in November.

There are a number of men on the list of major generals whose records would justify their being picked for the job of chief military adviser to the president.

Summerall is the last of the war time high commanders. Now comes the turn of the younger men of the regular service who carried the brunt of that struggle as executive officers to army and division commanders.

Notable among these are two men with remarkable records, Generals MacArthur and Nolan, while the postwar work of General McCoy in Nicaragua has brought him prominent support.

Gossip.

Service gossip has it that Summerall's choice, if he could pick his own successor, would be Major General Preston Brown, his present deputy.

Secretary Stimson, of the state department, a former war secretary, still a reserve officer of the army, and who presumably had much to do with McCoy's selection for the Nicaraguan job, is supposed to be urging that officer.

What influences other than their own records may be working in behalf of MacArthur and Nolan, the Bystander does not know.

Both MacArthur and Nolan are holders of valor decorations won in France.

Nolan, in fact, has been cited for gallantry in action as far back as the campaigns against Santiago in Cuba in the Spanish-American war and also served with exceptional distinction in the Filipino insurrection.

He was a noted West Point footballer in his day, while MacArthur conceived and put through the organization of the Rainbow division in the World war and was its chief of staff and later commanded a brigade.

Nolan was Pershing's chief of military intelligence throughout the war, his assignment to a brigade of the 35th division in action being to meet an emergency. He now commands the fifth corps area and by experience would seem to qualify exceptionally as next chief of staff.

He served as deputy chief under General Hines following General Harbord's retirement to enter the business world and General Pershing's retirtment for age. MacArthur has had no Washington duty since the outbreak of the World war.

Paved Draft's Way.

One unwritten aspect of Nolan's career is the work he did during the 1916 national preparedness drive.

He had charge of the general staff effort to pave the way for the draft act by inducing press discussion of a universal military training bill.

General Hugh Scott, then chief of staff, caused investigation of Nolan seven times as a possible premature "leak" on staff ideas. But when the war came, press opinion was well prepared for the draft act.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Little Muskrat Who Forgot.

Appalling you will find the cost
Of what forgetfulness has lost.
—Old Mother Nature.

Forgetting is a bad habit. My goodness, I don't know of any habit that is much worse than forgetting. It leads to all kinds of trouble. It not only gets the ones who forget into trouble, but it gets other people into trouble also. If people never forgot, this world would be a much happier and safer place in which to live.

One of Jerry Muskrat's children was forgetful. He didn't mean to forget. It wasn't willful forgetfulness. It was just the result of habit. Now, this little Muskrat had been warned, as had all his brothers and sisters, to always stay close to the water's edge. Some of them couldn't see why they should not climb up the bank of the Smiling Pool and make little trips out on the Green Meadows whenever they wanted to. Jerry and their mother explained to them that there were certain fur-coated folk on land who would like nothing better than a young Muskrat now and then for dinner. But, never having seen any of these dangerous persons, it was very difficult for the little Muskrats to really believe in them.

One moonlight night the forgetful little Muskrat sat at the edge of the water with his back to the land. The shore was low at this point. The water in front of the little Muskrat was very shallow. It was not deep enough for him to dive. He would have to swim out several feet before he could dive. He had been warned that this was not a safe place for young Muskrats. His mother had told him this. So had his father. They had explained how an enemy might creep up behind him and catch him before he could reach water deep enough to be safe.

Now, the forgetful little Muskrat had always remembered it until this moonlight night. Then, as he was swimming past this place, something on the shore caught his attention and he forgot all about the warnings he had had. He swam ashore, and having satisfied his curiosity, he sat down. He was tired and this seemed a good place to rest.

Now, it just happened that Reddy Fox had taken it into his head to visit the Smiling Pool that evening. It was some time since Reddy had been over there and he knew nothing about Jerry Muskrat's big family. He didn't really expect to catch anybody over there. Nevertheless, he aproached the Smiling Pool just as carefully as if he were certain of catching some one. As he drew near his keen eyes saw a movement in the grass on the edge of the shore. Instantly, Reddy flattened himself out. Then he began to creep forward very slowly, very carefully. He tested the wind and made sure that it was blowing in his face. As long as it was blowing that way, it would carry his scent behind him.

Foot by foot Reddy crept forward. Every few feet he stopped to look. "That looks like a great big Meadow Mouse," thought Reddy. "Yes, sir, that's what it looks like, but never in my life have I seen a Meadow Mouse as big as that. It may be a Rat. That's an idea. I wonder if it can be a young Muskrat. Well, I'll soon find out."

Foot by foot Reddy crept forward. How clever he was! He didn't make a sound. Every time the young Muskrat turned his head Reddy dropped flat on the grass. He was so near now that he could see clearly that it was a young Muskrat. Reddy knew all about the situation there. He knew that the water was not deep enough for that Muskrat to dive. He knew that if he could get just a little bit nearer, he could rush that young Muskrat and the latter wouldn't have a chance to escape.

The forgetful young Muskrat turned his head and looked over his shoulder. Then with a squeak of fright he started fo the water. He was just too late. The black paws of Reddy Fox pinned him down before he could reach deep enough water for a dive. A moment later Reddy was trotting across the Green Meadows with that forgetful young Muskrat in his mouth. So now Jerry Muskrat's big family numbered only seven. But, though she missed the two that were gone, Mrs. Muskrat felt that even seven were plenty when it came to keeping them out of trouble.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Fourth Suggestion.

Mr. Editor: The "Glorious Fourth" has come and by this time has gone again. It is not so glorious when we take into consideration the wear and tear resulting from the senseless noise caused by exploding fireworks. The sick and nervous are greatly annoyed and those that need rest have to endure a sleepless night, all because the savage impulse is allowed to run wild for the time being. The fire department and chamber of commerce could, it seems, arrange a municipal display on the Fourth that would add to the festive spirit and eliminate the prolonged and promiscuous shooting with its accompanying dangers and annoyances. Private money thus saved could go towards a public subscription for a decent and civilized observance of Independence day.

A READER AND PATRIOT.
Norwich, July 4, 1930.

Better Country Roads.

Mr. Editor: In a recent issue of your paper you had an editorial and at another time, a Farmer's Talk to Farmers, on the improvement of the cross country roads of our state. In both of these articles you referred to the statewide movement by the state grange through its master, Mr. Tolles, and others. Those articles should have been read by every reader of your paper as they both gave a very concise and accurate idea of the benefits which can be derived from this great movement.

State Master Tolles has asked every subordinate grange of this state to appoint a committee from its membership to help in every way possible to carry out this movement. As I have been appointed chairman of the committee selected by the Norwich grange, No. 172, P. of H., I feel that I could, in no other way, more effectively present this subject to the thinking people of this vicinity than to write this letter.

In appointing this committee and in writing this letter no reflection whatever is intended on the roads of Norwich or any other town, but it is only a part of a general movement to induce the state to co-operate with the towns for the betterment of their cross country roads. In regard to this I would like to say that I believe that there has been no time in the past history of this state when the progress and prosperity of our rural dwellers and the professional and business people of the city were more identical than today. With the efficient and modern means of communication and transportation it is ever increasingly apparent that whatever affects one in the way of good roads affects the other. The professional and business people of the city very often find it necessary to give professional aid or transact business with the people of the rural communities. On the other hand the rural people find it necessary, not only in a business way, but in their social, civic and religious activities to communicate with the people of the city, thus making the interests in good roads mutual.

The city of Norwich is situated in the center of one of the finest agricultural sections of the state. The surrounding towns greatly enhance its progress and prosperity, therefore, whatever Norwich or any other town or city for that matter, can do to help their neighboring towns in a civic or practical way not only helps those towns, but also helps their own town as well. Whenever the people of any of the larger towns of the state, have an opportunity to lend a helping hand, in the way of legislation or otherwise, so that the smaller towns can get their just dues, I think they should do so.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

A Ministry Without Words

If Christian service were all talking and praying, in meeting and visiting the sick, how limited our service. But our tongues are not the only way we may serve our Master. There are ways in which even silent people can serve God and be a blessing to the world. A star does not talk, but its calm steady beam shines down continually out of the sky. A flower cannot sing bird songs, but its sweet beauty and gentle fragrance make it a blessing wherever it is seen. Be like a star in your peaceful shining and many will thank God for your life. Be like a flower in your beauty, and in the influence of your unselfish spirit and you may do more to bless the world than many who talk incessantly. The living sacrifice does not always mean active work. It may mean the patient endurance of a wrong, the quiet bearing of a pain, cheerful aquiescence in a disappointment, ever showing in the life the spirit of the Master. By high ideal lived up to no matter what the cost. This is what the world needs today. Those that always strive for the highest and best. Looking ever to their Saviour for strength and guidance.

YOUR HEALTH

Discovering Childhood Tuberculosis

By Dr. H. E. Kleinschmidt, Director of Education, National Tuberculosis Association.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Childhood tuberculosis is to be distinguished from the adult type—so-called consumption. It is the early stage of adult type tuberculosis. It is not itself dangerous to the child if proper precautions are taken. The reason it is specially emphasized in present-day health work is that its discovery marks a child as one who should be given special care to prevent later development of the adult type—the type that kills.

How is this condition discovered? Any group of children can be divided into three classes: First, those who are absolutely free of the bacillus; second, those who have been infected with tuberculosis; third, those who have been infected and have progressed to the childhood type. The first class grows smaller from year to year, as its members join the other two. The second class—merely infected—are in no danger whatever. It is the third group, those with childhood tuberculosis, from which half the later cases of active adult type disease are recruited.

By use of the tuberculin test and the X-ray, these children in the second group can be found. The tuberculin test, applied to children, picks out those who have become infected. The X-ray, applied to these, selects the ones who have childhood type tuberculosis.

Some of these children are apparently healthy and strong, for childhood tuberculosis has no outright symptoms. But careful parents will take comfort in knowing that as they keep their children under the observation of a skillful family doctor the means of safeguarding them are at his command.

Stories That Recall Others

Blameless.

Jack glanced down at his neat knickers and clean finger nails rather disparingly. "It's not my fault I'm this way!" he said.

Telephone Number?

On Memorial day her grandparents took Annette, hardly four years old, to the cemetery where they were to deposit flowers on their parents' graves. Seeing the date of their birth on the stone, Annette said:

"Grandma, is that their telephone number?"

PLEA FOR REVERENCE OF THE CONSTITUTION

OCEAN CITY, N. J., July 4—(AP)—A plea for reverence of the constitution and strict enforcement of all its articles and amendments was made by Vice President Curtis here today.

He spoke at Camp Square of the Ocean City tabernacle, of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The vice president indirectly took note of the prohibition issue in calling for strict enforcement of all laws.

"Whoever seriously wishes to preserve our constitution in its full purity and vigor," he said, "must of necessity wish to have all its articles and amendments honestly obeyed and faithfully enforced.

"What we need now more than ever is reverence for the constitution and respect for the courts of our country. It is not pleasing to notice the wave that is sweeping over the country which disregard law and order and the constitution and substitutes man's desires and weakens opinion of law."

Mr. Curtis also referred to the London naval treaty, which, he said, with the Washington naval conference of 1921, the recent evacuation of the Rhineland; the Kellogg pact, and the Locarno treaty "all point toward permanent peace."

SEIZED WITH SUDDEN FATAL HEART ATTACK

Stricken with a sudden heart attack, Dennis J. Bowen, about 70, residing at 39 Hobart avenue, fell among some bushes on East Cliff street, across from the Polish convent, and expired there, his body being found shortly before noon Friday.

At that time police headquarters was notified of the finding of the body and Officers Patrick Murphy and Clifford Crary were sent there while Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve was summoned and the body was taken in charge by Corcoran and Lyons, morticians.

According to what was learned in the investigation conducted by Dr. Gildersleeve, Mr. Bowen had been down town Thursday evening and had taken a taxi between 9 and 10 o'clock to come home. The taxi driver, whose name is Garish, let him out on Hobart avenue near Reynolds street, a short distance beyond his home, and it is believed he then started for home by walking around through the next street, which is steep, and that the exertion brought on the heart attack. A boy named James Connor, 13, of 64 Roath street, told the medical examiner that he saw the man lying among the bushes about 10 o'clock Thursday night as he was going along the street on the way down town to get some fireworks, and the same boy, with Joseph Waselewski of 72 Roath street, noticed him again shortly before noon Friday.

For many years Mr. Bowen had been an employe at the United States Finishing company where he was a faithful workman and was highly regarded by those with whom he was associated. He was a member of St. Mary's Memorial church, of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and of the Foresters of America.

He is survived by three sons, John F., Joseph R., and James A. Bowen, all of New York, by his daughter, Miss Catherine Bowen, with whom he resided at 39 Hobart avenue, and by two sisters and a brother, Mrs. John Donegan, Mrs. Michael Dennis and Daniel Bowen, all of Norwich.

NORWICH HAS QUIET DAY ON FOURTH WITH ONLY FEW MINOR ACCIDENTS

Generally Norwich had a quiet Fourth of July, one of the quietest on record. The fire department had no calls during the day and what few accidents there were to patriotic celebrators were mainly of a minor character. As far as was learned only two Norwich cases called for the services of a doctor, and the Backus hospital had had only two cases up to an early hour in the evening, both of these from out of town. One came from Jewett City and the other from Gardner Lake. There were also no offenders who called for police attention because of their celebrating.

During a large part of the day, a good proportion of the residents had apparently left town on picnic trips or on other objectives, for during the middle of the day and in the afternoon the streets were almost deserted.

The principal evidence that the Fourth was being celebrated came in the early morning hours and again late at night as the final limit was approaching, but whatever noise was produced was a mere fraction of what is ordinarily executed.

Dealers handling fireworks reported a very appreciable decrease in the amount of sales, and this falling off was generally laid to the general slackness in employment bringing a condition where people had no money to blow in, blow up and blow off.

Alex Poluntz of No. 5 Sixth street received serious injuries in the celebration of the Fourth of July. He had two fingers on his right hand severely hurt when a "cherry" bomb exploded while he was setting it off. Joseph Golub of Greeneville also received burns to his hand when the contents of a blank cartridge entered it. These two were attended by Dr. John Suplicki.

Donald McNicol, 11, son of William McNicol of Jewett City, was also hurt by a blank cartridge and was attended by Dr. William T. Driscoll. The boy was brought to the Backus hospital.

Another patient at the hospital from Fourth of July injuries was Ernest Beston, 27, of Gardner Lake. He had a flare go off in his hand.

ST. PETERSBURG HAS ONLY ONE BANK LEFT

St. Petersburg, Fla., known as the Sunshine City, has plenty of sunshine in the sky but not in the hearts of the people. The reason is that there is only one bank in the community, the Central. All the others have passed out. Within a few weeks the Fidelity Bank and Trust Co., Crosstown First National and American have closed their doors. The Crosstown was a branch of the First National.

Following the closing of the First National a run started on the Central. To stem the tide of fright and to give the institution full opportunity to pay all depositors in orderly fashion the bank put into effect the rule requiring notices on savings banks which had been temporarily suspended. The run was finally stopped and the situation is less tense. Hammered for six weeks by steady withdrawals by frightened depositors to the tune of an average of nearly $90,000 per banking day, the First National, the oldest and largest St. Petersburg bank decided to turn its affairs over to the comptroller of currency for the United States, effective June 16. More than two and one-half millions in deposits were lost in six weeks following closing of other banks.

The Du Pont interests, headed by Alfred I. Du Pont, president of the Florida National bank, at Jacksonville, has applied for a charter from the state of Florida for a new bank in St. Petersburg. It is obvious that with the closing of all banks except one business interests were walloped hard. The people of St. Petersburg are hoping for a flood of tourists this winter to ease the situation.

A plane sent out by radio station KTRH followed the leaders for about fifteen miles before turning back and reported by short wave transmission that all was well.

CONGRESSMAN TILSON AT JONESBORO CELEBRATION

JONESBORO, Tenn., July 4—(AP)—A new generation of Tennesseans helped this old town celebrate its 150th birthday anniversary today and saw the story of American life in the raw told in pantomime.

They came down from their mountain homes along the North Carolina line and up from the Cumberland valley to the west and even from the black lands near Memphis.

Among those who came was John Q. Tilson, republican congressman from Connecticut, and majority floor leader in the house of representatives. He was born in these mountains and came home today to speak to the new generations about the old ideals of the republic.

It was fitting, he said, that this town, a thriving center when Washington was president, should celebrate its birthday on the anniversary of the nation's Independence.

He told of the hardships of those pioneers who dared the mountains.

The new generation, he said, shall perform its task as well as the pioneers "if we react to the environment of our time as they did to theirs."

"The Indians are gone, so while we no longer must strain our eyes to catch sight of the skulking red Indians, we must continue to be on guard against other dangers such as the red anarchist and even the "parlor pink" who would seek to destroy our institutions," he said.

RAILROAD INQUIRY HAS "DISCLOSED STARTLING FACTS"

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—The initial investigation into railroad ownership by the house interstate commerce committee was described today by Representative Rayburn, democrat, Texas, as having "disclosed startling facts as to the far reaching control" of some of the nation's major railroad systems by uncontrolled holding and investment trust companies.

Rayburn, ranking minority member of the committee, made public a special report submitted to him by Dr. W. H. W. Splawn, chief investigator on investment trust companies. Chairman Parker of the committee this week made public an interim report on the holding company phase of the inquiry.

The report to Rayburn showed that of 110 investment trust companies with a capital and surplus in excess of $5,000,000 each, 50 held railroad voting securities. It had not been determined whether 28 others held such securities.

Although the report did not divulge names of the investment companies it said one held voting securities in 50 railroad lines, and 23 were said to hold securities of the Alleghany corporation, the holding company dominated by the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland.

In addition, the report said, eight investment trust companies held voting securities in the Chesapeake Holding company, six in the Pennroad holding company, dominated by the Pennsylvania railroad, and three in the Lehigh Coal and Navigation holding company.

It said investment trust companies held on January 1, 1930, 36 per cent of the New York Central securities; 34 per cent of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe; 8 per cent of the Union Pacific; 29 per cent of the Pennsylvania; 20 per cent of the Baltimore and Ohio; 19 per cent in the Chesapeake and Ohio; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; Southern, and Southern Pacific, and 15 per cent in the Canadian Pacific, the Missouri Pacific and the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

"If the disclosures in the remainder of the inquiry are comparable to the developments in the preliminary stage," Rayburn said, "I fear that some of these tremendously strong financial organizations have a greater influence in the field of transportation than any one organization should have."

The investigation was instituted to determine what legislation is necessary to bring holding and investment companies under government jurisdiction in order that the policy of merging the nation's 1,500 lines into 21 great competitive systems may be carried out.

"If the country is to have 21 great systems, as seems to be the intention," the Texan said, "no two lines should be controlled by the same financial organization. The initial investigation has disclosed startling facts about the influences of holding and investment trust companies which are, under the existing law, uncontrolled. The interstate commerce commission, under which consolidations of railroads are authorized, has no power to prevent holding and investment companies from dominating presumably competitive lines.

"After the investigation is completed it is the purpose of the interstate commerce committee to formulate legislation which will bring the companies dominating the railroads, either through control of securities or ownership, under government regulation.

JEWETT CITY BEATS ANCIENT RIVALS IN OLD TIMERS GAME

WAUREGAN, July 4—Approximately 1,000 people, many of them their old-time friends and admirers, watched almost with fascination this morning the 4-inning baseball game between the original Wauregan Grays and their great rivals of the past—the Jewett City team that made things hum back in 1901, '02, '03.

Their great battles of the past stand out in memory, but probably no game they ever played against each other will be more outstanding in the minds of men and women, too, than that of this morning, when the grizzled Jewett City veterans turned in a 7 to 5 victory over their old and worthy opponents.

They were all there—those gray and aging veterans of yesteryear. What a sight and what a treat! The old battling, forceful animosity between them had completely vanished. Today they were an almost affectionate bunch of old-timers willing to fight anyone for each other, but not against each other. Oh, the passing years! It was not ever thus.

There was a touch of solemnity in the arrival of the teams on the field where they fought it out of old. Marching in behind a band, they were given an enthusiastic welcome. Manager Jerry Doyle, who piloted the Grays in their day, introduced, individually, each man of both teams, all receiving an ovation. Jerry even included his former arch opponent and rival manager, Charles Connell of Norwich Town.

Flashes of their former greatness were revealed by some of the players, and also their present weaknesses in the great pastime. A three base hit was good for a single any time during the game. Speed gone. But the old hitters of both teams were there, especially Robertsen and Williams of the Jewett City team.

Ted Shea, Jewett City veteran, developed a Charley horse chasing one out in left field during the second inning. He had to retire notwithstanding that a loyal Jewett City rooter pitcously inquired of him "What does a kink mean amongst two legs?

It likely will be a long time before the fans see the like of this combination again, and here is the box score that tells in detail just what happened.

VELVET MEN WIN SECOND VICTORY OVER N. L. KACEYS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 4—Scoring three runs in each of the second and third thinnings the J. B. Martin Co. baseball team of Norwich defeat the New London Kaceys 7 to 2 here this afternoon. It was the second defeat of the locals by the Rose City velvet makers. The bat of Nap Liberty was responsible for a good part of the damage done to the locals for Liberty in five times at bat hit a triple, double and a single. Daniels went the entire route for the Kaceys allowing ten hits which were bunched in these innings. Lindner held the Kaceys to six hits after a shaky first inning when the locals scored twice. KENT CREW ELIMINATES PRINCETON IN HENLEY

HENLEY, England, July 4—(AP)—Kent school of Connecticut eliminated Princeton university's lightweights—the only other American crew in the regatta—in a close race over a mile and 550 yards today to enter the semi-finals for the Thames challenge cup, an event open to all amateur eights.

Thus two American boatloads, celebrating their national holiday far from home, drew the chief attention on a day that has no victorious significance for England and at the same time provided a decided threat for the semi-finals tomorrow morning and the finals in the afternoon. Kent is now regarded as a slight favorite to repeat the victory of another schoolboy eight, Browne and Nichols, of Cambridge, Mass., last year.

It is generally believed that Kent, now it has passed such a formidable contender as the crack Princeton boatload, can defeat Worcester college of Oxford, in the semi-final heat, if a time comparison in previous races forms an accurate gauge of ability. The American youngsters travelled the course in seven minutes, 27 seconds in defeating Princeton by half a length while Worcester eliminated Lady Margaret college of Cambridge in 7:29.

MRS. MOODY RETAINS HER WIMBLEDON TENNIS CROWN

WIMBLEDON, England, July 4—(AP)—Helen Wills Moody won her fourth successive Wimbledon tennis championship today by beating Elizabeth Ryan 6-2, 6-2, in the women's singles final but that was only an incident in the Fourth of July play that brought about four all-American title matches at Wimbledon—an unprecedented outcome of England's classic tennis meeting.

So many Americans are elbowing each other out of the path to titles that the tournament must stretch into a third week to give them all an equal chance. Wilmer Allison, the slim Texan plays Big Bill Tilden for the men's singles crown tomorrow. With Johnny Van Ryn today Allison won a fine match from the Britons, J. Colin Gregory and Ian G. Collins, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3 and will therefore play in the men's double final against George Lott and John Doeg, who whipped the last of the French, the great doubles team of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, 8-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1.

BLUE LARKSPUR WINS RICH PURSE AT CHICAGO

ARLINGTON PARK, Chicago, July 4—(AP)—Blue Larkspur, 1929 three-year-old champion of America, won the $33,000 Stars and Stripes handicap at a mile and an eighth before 40,000 spectators this afternoon. Misstep was second and Sun Beau third. Blue Larkspur ran the distance in 1:49 2-5, smashing the track record hung up by Misstep by a full second.

Blue Larkspur rewarded his backers with $10.40 to win in the two dollar mutuels. The winner was ridden by the veteran jockey Jimmy Smith.

KALILI LOOMS AS THREAT TO CRABBE

LONG BEACH, Calif., July 4—(AP)—Maiola Kalili, native Hawaiian, furnished the fireworks in preliminaries of the National A. A. U., swimming meet today by winning the 440-yard free style in five minutes 5 2-10 seconds to prove a threat to Clarence Crabbe, titleholder, in the finals.

Crabbe, Honolulu's contribution to the Los Angeles A. C. team, won his heat in 5 minutes 14 2-10 seconds.

Albert Zorilla, of the New York A. C., won the third heat in five minutes 24 seconds.

Replies to Versailles

Sports Editor:—In regard to the challenge from the Versailles base ball team, let them go out and win a few games and then the Baltic team will talk business. The Baltic team has the two first Sundays in August open and will play them home-and-home games but first make a rep and show they have a ball team. The Baltic team has won more than 2 games as was stated by an error and are out to give any team a go for the game.

I was an interested fan at the ball game between the Elks and the Young Italian club in the Junior league. The last man called out was safe. Matthews is a good umpire and even the umpires make mistakes. I sat right in the front seat back of the plate but as the pitcher seemed to be in Matthews' way to my judgment he gave what he thought was the right decision.

HARRY COLLINS

"Hold-up on Franklin Hill Road."

Reads like a headline in a Chicago daily, doesn't it? Yet it's true, every word of it. There sure was a holdup but the motive was not robbery.

It seems that a certain Norwich young man and the girl friend were returning from Willimantic shortly before eleven o'clock last night and when coming down Franklin hill the young lady spied what she took to be a cat in the middle of the road.

"Oh, oh," she exclaimed, "don't run over the pretty kitty." So the boy friend pushed down both feet and jammed on the brakes and the car slid to a halt within a few feet of the obstruction.

Peering through the windshield the boy friend gave the "pretty kitty" the once over and frantically grabbed for the shifting lever. "Oh, oh, pretty kitty me eye," said the boy friend as he stepped on the gas and the car shot back up the hill.

He was none too soon for the "pretty kitty" was in a very belligerent mood and his moot was "They shall not pass." The animated atomizer was doing its stuff but the enemy had retreated out of range.

"Seeing that the distance was too great for accurate marksmanship the nocturnal guardian of the road desisted but still held firm to his place in the middle of the road.

The air was permeated with an aroma that was not of roses or violets and was most disagreeable to the two in the car. Thinking that the animal might be scared by blowing the horn this was tried but apparently horns meant nothing to it.

The car was driven forward at a slow pace but the purveyor of perfume stood his ground and started hostilities anew. There was another retreat and it looked like the contest was going to be a draw.

Finally something disturbed the knight of the road for he looked one way and then the other and loped off the road and into the fields. Perhaps to chuckle over his little joke.

SHYMAS TO CLASH WITH WAUREGAN TODAY

The Shymas will again swing into action on their own grounds at Taftville this afternoon when they cross bats with the Wauregan Independents in the first game of the series between these two teams. The second game of the series is to be played at Wauregan Sunday. There is plenty of rivalry between these two teams and a fast game should be the result, which will also be renewing the old time feud between the residents of both villages. The Wauregan boys are coming to town with one of the best teams to ever represent the village. The manager would not divulge his lineup but it is rumored that he has secured some of the fastest ball players in that section in an effort to clinch the first game of the series.

The manager of the Shymas has had his boys practising hard all this week after their defeat at the hands of the Baltic team, which team was defeated by the Wauregan team, and feel sure that his boys will come out on the long end of the score. They will take the field in the following order: Ulewicz 3b; Bunk, 2b; Wilke, 1b; N. Lemieux, ss; Raymond, cf; A. Lemieux, lf; Benoit, rf. Burelle will do the catching while the pitching will be between Faucher, Dudeck, or Sammy Raymond. It is hoped that the fans will turn out for these games as the management of the local club is now trying to secure some of the fastest amateur teams in the state to show their wares in the village.

O'DOUL BOOSTS HIS AVERAGE TWELVE POINTS

(By The Associated Press)

The holiday double headers brought a big change in the Big Six standing, due to the clouting activities of Frank O'Doul, Chuck Klein and Lou Gehrig. Klein trailed not far behind, hitting four times in seven tries to increase his second place average five points to .404.

Gehrig batted his way to the American league lead and to third place in the Big Six, making five hits in eight times up. His average is .396. Al Simmons, who hit but once, dropped out. ONLY SMALL CROWD TURNS OUT TO GREET SCHMELING

BERLIN, July 4—(AP)—Only a small crowd saw Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, come down out of the clouds today with the laurels he won in America from Jack Sharkey on a foul.

A small army of police detailed to the Templehof airport to control the expected throng had nothing to do. Schmeling was cordially "hoched" however, before leaving he received a beltw, gift of the Union of German Boxers and spoke into a radio microphone.

"I'm glad to get back to Berlin," he said. "I am thankful for the confidence the people have in me and hope I will always be worthy of it."

MISS CARSTAIRS DRIVES HER BOAT AT 70 MILES PER HOUR

GRAVENHURST, Ont., July 4—(AP)—Miss Marion Carstairs, British hope in the Harmsworth trophy races at Detroit, attained a speed of 70 miles an hour today with her speed boat "Estelle IV" in a test on Lake Muskoka. This boat is the slower of her two challengers.

She expects to drive her first string boat 100 miles an hour in the Detroit races August 28 to September 1.

Since the death of Sir Henry Segrave in a speed boat recently in England, Miss Carstairs is the sole British hope in the international speed classic.

ROBINS CLING TO SLIGHT MARGIN IN HOLIDAY SPLIT

NEW YORK, July 4—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins clung to their precarious hold on first place in the National league today by winning the afternoon game of a double header, 5 to 2, after the Giants had taken the morning contest, 5 to 4, in an eleven inning struggle. The Chicago Cubs also got an even break.

William Watson Clark of Brooklyn held the Giants to six hits in the second game, one of which was a home run by Lindstrom. The Robins made some timely hits off Bill Walker, getting two runs on a single hit on two occasions. Finn's homer following a walk turned the trick the second time.

The Giants scored four runs in the seventh, eighth and ninth inning of the opener to the score. Dazzy Vance pitched the entire contest, giving eleven hits, Herman, Gilbert and Hogan hit homers in the morning.

CARDINALS WIN TWO EASY GAMES FROM REDS

ST. LOUIS, July 4.—(AP)—The Cardinals won both ends of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds here today. In the opening game the Cardinals hit hard behind Flint Rhem's rather effective pitching and won, 15 to 4, while in the second contest Syl Johnson hurled brilliantly until the ninth inning, and the Red birds triumphed, 6 to 2.

Johnson shut out the visitors until the ninth when Swanson and Kelly hit home runs. Walker hit a homer for the Reds in the opening game.

Larry Benton started the first game for the Reds, but he was treated very roughly and retired. The Cardinals continued their assault on May and Campbell.

SENATORS TAKE BOTH GAMES FROM YANKEES

WASHINGTON, July 4—(AP)—The Senators turned Independence day into a Roman holiday today by slaughtering the New York Yankees in both games of a double header and advancing to only one game behind the league leading Athletics. The scores were 8 to 0 and 7 to 3.

Sad Sam Jones held the Yankees completely under control in the opening game, allowing them five hits scattered through as many innings. The Senators got to George Pipgras in the third frame scoring five runs on as many hits, a walk and an error. Ownie Carroll finished for New York.

Fred Marberry allowed eight blows in the second game and Babe Ruth started the Yankees off ahead by clouting his 32nd home run of the year with empty bases in the first inning. But the Senators took the lead in the same frame and drove Ed Wells out in five innings. The score:

WHITE SOX SHARE HOLIDAY BILL WITH BROWNS

CHICAGO, July 4—(AP)—Tommy Thomas came back after a long period of ineffectiveness today and gave the White Sox an even break with the St. Louis Browns in the Independence day doubleheader.

The White Sox dropped the opener, 7 to 3, when the Browns hammered Ted Lyons and young Ed Walsh, but Thomas cinched the second with a four-hit pitching performance, 6 to 4. The Sox made six errors behind him but Johnny Kerr and Carl Reynolds saved the issue with home runs.

Gregory Mulleavy, star shortstop, obtained by the White Sox from the Toledo American association, made his debut and got three hits, driving in three runs. He fielded perfectly in the first game but made two bobbles in the nightcap.

ARNOLD HAS SEVERAL MISHAPS IN RACE

BRIDGEVILLE, Pa., July 4.—(AP)—Indianapolis today sent the winner to the Pittsburgh-Bridgeville track in the person of Wilbur Shaw, who took the 100-mile A. A. A. Independence day sweepstakes, covering the distance in 1 hour, 29 minutes, 57 2-5 seconds. He averaged 66.9 miles an hour.

Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia pilot, finished second, two laps behind the winner, and Burt Karnatz, of Detroit, was third. Dave Evans, of Evansville, Ind., came in after the Detroiter.

A series of mishaps, which started in the qualifying trials, kept Billy Arnold of Chicago from making a strong bid for first honors. Arnold, who won at Indianapolis on Memorial day and at Altoona on Flag day, needed today's race to give him the A. A. A. championship for the year.

Arnold's accidents left him unhurt and he finished seventh with a time of 1 hour, 35 minutes, 23 1-5 seconds. He lost time when his mount skidded on the first and 39th laps.

Billy gave the spectators a thrill in the trials when his car skidded completely around and careened into the infield. On the first lap his machine was sideswiped by Paul Bost's car and Arnold skidded again. The 39th lap saw him in trouble a third time. His mount started slipping about and went almost to the infield. Each time he brought the car back to the track amid cheers of the 10,000 spectators.

Paul Bost, Detroit, finished fifth and Whiz Sloan, Akron, O., was sixth. Frank, Brisko, Milwaukee, was in eighth position, back of Arnold.

Shorty Cantlon, also of Detroit, who was second to Arnold at Indianapolis, was forced from the race on the 34th lap by motor trouble.

Twelve drivers qualified for the race out of 14 entrants. Bill Lindau, a Pittsburgher, and W. H. Stubblefield, Los Angeles, were low qualifiers and were left out.

YOUNG CORBETT HANDS THOMPSON NEAT LACING

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—(AP)—Sturdy, swift-punching Young Corbett, Italian boy from Fresno, Cal., added another bristling chapter to an already brilliant fistic career today when he gave Young Jack Thompson, world's welterweight champion, a ten-round beating in a non-title fight at Ewing field today.

In the same systematic fashion as when he took the measure of Jackie Fields here four months ago, the stocky title contender pummeled his way to a popular decision over the Oakland Negro, successor to Fields' throne.

From opening gong until the nerve-tingling tenth round was over, Corbett was out in front. He combed the dusky ruler of the 147-pound ranks with raking lefts to the body and outboxed him practically all the way.

A ninth-round climax saw Thompson tumble to the canvas for a nine count, floored by a vicious left to the body. The Negro staggered to his feet and weathered out the session. Corbett tried desperately for a knockout but the round was too far gone.

It was a battered champion who responded to the tenth round gong. He survived the storm of gloves that Corbett drove in. Thompson fought back gamely but his few rallies were nipped short as the Fresno southpaw bored in with devastating lefts to the mid-section.

Corbett surprised not only Thompson, but his most ardent supporters, by abandoning his usual defensive tactics to force the fight most of the way. Right jabs began a tattoo on the champion's nose at the start and he bled throughout most of the battle.

The Negro, furious from the bewildering attack, rallied in the fifth round to shake Corbett with rights to the jaw. The sixth was fairly even but Corbett came back in the seventh to score with several telling uppercuts.

Thompson spurted in the eighth to gain a slight margin. Corbett's closing finish in the last two frames had the 20,000 fans in a frenzy. Raising of the Fresno lad's hand by Referee Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion, was a mere formality.

It was the third victory for Corbett over his rangy rival. In the old four-round game, he took a decision from Thompson. Later they fought a ten-round draw and a few months before the Negro became champion he lost a ten-round decision to Corbett. Today's victory brought Corbett's record to 116 fights with but three defeats.

Gate receipts were approximately $40,000.

TRONIA BRITTON BREAKS TRACK RECORD AT WINDSOR

The diamond enthusiasts of Norwich and vicinity will be treated to a real encounter for blood when the J. B. Martin and the Army and Navy meet at Martin field Sunday afternoon in the intial game of their championship series for the baseball supremacy of Taftville.

Contrary to expectations and several idle rumors there will be no change in the line up of the Army and Navy team. They will use the same men they have used all season and feel mighty confident that they can take a fall out of their rivals. Jablowski, who had a banner year with the University of Vermont, will toe the slab for the service men. Lamory will be on the receiving end.

The management of the Velvet makers has plenty of assurance that his team will give their village rivals a severe trouncing and expects to extend their string of victories to seven at the expense of the Army and Navy. They are also standing pat on their line-up and will depend on their mound ace, Walter Lindner, to take home the honors. Eccleston will do the catching, the remainder of the lineup is unchanged.

Hamil and Hart will officiate.

HANOVER BERTHA TAKES FEATURE MATRON STAKES

NORTH RANDALL TRACK, Cleveland, O., July 4.—(AP)—The annual renewal of the Matron stake sponsored by the American Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, was won today by Hanover Bertha from the Hanover, Pa., stables. Driven by Tom Berry, she trotted the two one-mile heats in 2:06 2-5 and 2:05 2-5, virtually smothering her opposition.

Voltaire from the Fox stable and Calumet Annet, a winner at Toledo, divided second and third honors. The value of today's stake was $6,720. Sixteen years ago, Peter Volo, sire of the winner, won the fourth renewal of the Matron stakes over the Hartford, Conn., track.

The $3,000 Ohio stake for 2:12 class trotters and the secondary feature on the Fourth of July program was won by Hollywood Harrod, owned, trained and driven by John L. Dodge, Lexington, Ky., sportsman. The son of Hollywood Prince dropped the second heat to Azmoko from the Whiteside stable of Duluth, Minn., which paid 40 to 1 for the heat. The winner trotted his heats in 2:06 3-5 and 2:06.

Goldy Wood from the Thomas stable won the 2:18 pace, paying $681 for $10 in the result mutuels and $159 to $3 to win the first heat of the race. Robert O'Guy, the favorite, paced a bad race, while Alexander Direct, second choice, was behaving poorly. Twinkling Dan and Peter Dale furnished the contention.

In the fourth event, a 2:12 pace, another big upset occurred, when Becky Beall and Hal McKinney went down to defeat. Ovelmo Lad from the Byroad stable won after dropping the first heat to Hal McKinney. He paid $303.75 for a $10 result ticket.

TWO WORLD RECORDS FALL IN A. A. U. SWIMMING

LONG BEACH, Cal., July 4.—(AP)—National A. A. U. swimmers today broke two more world records.

Helene Madison, Seattle mermaid, set a women's 440-yard free style mark, and George Kojac, of the New York Athletic club, negotiated 200 meters backstroke for a new world's record.

Kojac was competing at 220 yards, but his time for the furlong was superior to Toshio Iriye, of Japan, who splashed through the metric distance in 2 minutes 37 8-10 seconds in 1928. Kojac's figure was 2:3 4-10 and left him not only in possession of the 200-meter record, but also a new American mark for the furlong, since it had eclipsed his own former time.

Miss Madison's time of 5 minutes 39 4-10 seconds was eight seconds faster than Miss Josephine McKim set last year. Miss McKim, Los Angeles A. C. star, finished second, 30 yards behind Miss Madison. Third place went to Lisa Lindstrom of the New York Women's Swimming association.

The closest race of the day developed in the men's 440 free style, with Maiola Kalili, native Hawaiian, gracefully pulling away from the defending champion and his fellow townsman," Clarence "Buster" Crabbe, to win by three yards in 4 minutes 56 4-10 seconds, 4 and 4-15 seconds slower than Johnny Weissmuller's world mark. Austin Clapp, Hollywood A. C., finished third, with Albert Zorilla, the 1928 Olympic champion and member of the New York A. C., in his wake.

Miss Eleanor Holm, 16-year-old New York W. S. A. backstroke champion, defeated her own swimming mate, Miss Lindstrom, to retain her title in the women's 220-yard backstroke event in 3 minutes 5 seconds, 4 and 4-10 seconds behind her own American mark.

Miss Georgia Coleman, Los Angeles A. C., 10-foot springboard star, won the diving honors to retain her title, registering 132.77 points. Bernice Phelan, San Francisco, was second, scoring 126.46.

At the end of today's events the Los Angeles A. C. continued to lead in team points in both divisions. The club had 17 points in the men's section against 11 for the Hui-Makani Hawaiian association, all scored by Kalili, and 10 for the New York A. C., all scored by Kojac.

The L. A. A. C. was one point ahead of the New York W. S. A. in the women's section with 13 tallied. Miss Madison, swimming unattached, increased her point total to 18 to lead the field in this section.

Tomorrow's program calls for the 300-yard medley and half-mile relay in both the men's and women's sections, along with the men's high platform fancy diving tests.

SPEAKER SAYS AMERICA CAN'T STOP DRINKING

LUKE JUNALUSKA, N. C., July 4—(AP)—Edward B. Dunford in an address tonight before the Methodist Episcopal church, South, board of temperance and social service in session here said America has failed to adopt the 18th amendment only because alcohol is a narcotic and habit forming drug.

The speaker, Anti-Saloon League of America attorney, said Americans were not afraid federal agents would be more effective than local police in enforcement—it was because America could not stop drinking.

The board in outlining its plan for the next four years favored the Stalker resolution which would eliminate aliens from census enumeration to determine congressional or electoral representation. Bishop James Cannon Jr., emphasized that the new apportionment for the house of representatives would give to wet alien population cities an increase in congressmen at the expense of dry districts.

A complete outlawry of war with a pledge to uphold all in authority in in maintaining the Briand-Kellogg treaty were outstanding items in the board's world peace policy.

INTERNATIONAL ATMOSPHERE "POISONED WITH SUSPICION"

BOURNEMOUTH, England, July 4—(AP)—A warning that the international atmosphere is "poisoned with mistrust and suspicion" was delivered to the banquet of the International Congregational church council delegates tonight by former Premier David Lloyd George.

The liberal leader declared that the peace of the world depended upon the cooperation and good-will of Great Britain and the United States.

"It is vital in the interests of the human race that Britain and American should march side by side solving the great problems that await us," he said.

"Peace is by no means secure. In spite of treaties man has not yet given up the idea of war. Preparations for war are going on in every country of the world. There are more men trained for war in Europe, Asia and America than before the great catastrophe of 1914."

Mr. Lloyd George asserted that except for countries like Germany that were forced to reduce their armaments, Great Britain was the only country that had diminished its forces to a point where they were at least no more than before the war.

YOUTHS UNABLE TO START GLIDER EXPERIMENT

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Hugh Keasney and Robert Lewis, Long Island youths who sailed yesterday aboard the liner Saturnia with gliders in which they expected to be towed across the Atlantic, have been unable to start their experiment, a message received from the ship's cvommander tonight said.

The message said that it was impossible to launch a glider today because of rough water, but than an attempt would be made tomorrow morning provided conditions are favorable. Soon after the vessel passed Ambrose Light last night, Lewis and Keasney attempted to get one of the gliders into the air, but had to abandon the attempt because of rain and wind.

WESTERLY

INDEPENDENCE DAY PROVES PLEASANT AND PEACEFUL

The Glorious Fourth this year in Westerly passed into history without a major mishap of any sort, although the beaches were thronged and the Pawcatuck river banks lined with humanity to do homage to the country's natal day. In spite of several severe showers motor visitors, through traffic, local, and trippers to the beaches did not seem decreased, the record-breaking numbers which began at early hours continuing throughout the day.

There was not an alarm for fires on the whistles of the Westerly and Pawcatuck fire department headquarters although the firemen held themselves in readiness to respond.

The Thursday afternoon and evening express trains making the Westerly station stop were operated in several sections with many cars, more noticeable on the east-bound trains of the Pennsylvania railroad. The Westerly station yard was filled almost to capacity with automobiles of the larger type waiting the arrival of expected guests to rush them to the shore for hotel and house parties at Watch Hill, Misquamicut, Atlantic Beach and Weekapaug. Automobiles from Narragansett took passengers arriving from New York on express trains not making the Kingston, R. I., station stop, to rush them to the most easterly town of South County, which borders on Narragansett bay and the Atlantic ocean.

The quarters of Westerly Yacht club at Thompson's cove in the Pawcatuck river was a hive of activity all day and members of the club arrived early in order to park near the club house. Officer Thomas V. B. Clancy was stationed at the entrance to River Bend cemetery to see that auto parkers in their endeavors to be close to the quick in the river motor boats races did not tread too roughly on the plots.

With almost perfect weather the various races came off as scheduled, those against time in the morning and those in the various well-filled classes of contestants in the afternoon and early evening. The band concerts were given attention by the large number of people who thronged the grounds and roadsides on both the Rhode Island and Connecticut banks of the Pawcatuck river and apparently greatly enjoyed the music. At about 10 the public fireworks which had the backing of the newly formed Westerly chamber of commerce were most advantageously set off in elaborate display and were as thoroughly enjoyed as the numerous acts of vaudeville which preceded them.

The night before the Fourth was the quietest ever in the history of Westerly and vicinity. There was practically no sale of fireworks by Westerly merchants, nearly all the sales being made in Pawcatuck.

CHARLES DUNN, 4, STRUCK BY CAR OF HOLYOKE MAN

Charles Dunn, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Dunn, of 91 Liberty street, Pawcatuck, was struck by an automobile on Thursday night near his parents' home and was seriously injured. Clarence E. Bennett of Holyoke, Mass. was the driver of the automobile and reported that the boy ran in front of the car, which knocked him several feet.

The boy was taken to the Westerly hospital where he was attended by Dr. Michael H. Scanlon and Dr. C. Grant Savage, who found that a fracture of the skull had been sustained, also lacerations about the face. Patrolman George L. Seidel of Pawcatuck investigated the accident and detained for a time Mr. Bennett who was on his way with his family to Misquamicut to remain over the Fourth of July holiday.

BROKEN SIDE FRAME ON FREIGHT DOES SOME DAMAGE

The possibilities of a freight wreck near the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad, similar to that several months ago tying up traffic for many hours, loomed large early Friday morning. The side frame to the truck on a freight car of a long train east-bound in some manner became broken as the train was between Mystic and Stonington. At the Stonington station the wooden plank track crossing for baggage trucks was gouged out by the rocking end of the broken side frame of the freight car truck. This was also true of the wooden plank track crossings both west and east of the ticket office at the Westerly station. The wooden fiber of the plank about four inches outside the outer rail of the east-bound main line track was shredded and carried along with the truck and deposited on the roadbed. The gouging was not deep and the planks were not ripped out of position and across the tracks to derail cars following. At Westerly the freight train was stopped and the car with damaged truck was cut out from the train and left on a siding.

Shortly before 10 p. m. Thursday a low-flying airplane with red and green running lights passed slowly over Westerly headed in a northeasterly direction. In a moonless sky against a background of high clouds the airplane was clearly outlined and its green light was visible long after the plane had passed over the center of the town.

U. S. Attorney General Mitchell and Secretary Lamar of Washington, D. C., were Fourth of July house guests of U. S. Assistant Treasurer Walter Hope, arriving in Westerly Thursday night to motor to Mr. Hope's summer home at Watch Hill.

Russell Lee Slocum, dog warden at Watch Hill, Thursday found a valuable golden brown year-old collie with a litter of five pups. There was no strap or marker on the dog's neck and it awaits execution unless an owner should appear. In Westerly Officer Slocum has found a foxhound with a bridle but no collar or licensing tag. This dog awaits a similar fate as the first, should no claimant show up.

Nearly three hundred youngsters were lined up in two rows on Broad street Thursday morning before the Solomon Department store to take advantage of the free distribution of horns which has been a practice of this store for nearly a quarter of a century. Mr. and Mrs. George Valentine Smith of Ardmore, Pa., arrived Thursday to pass the season at their summer home, Edgecliffe, at Watch Hill.

FRANZ JOSEF LAND HAS BEEN RENAMED

Frans Josef Land is no more.

By vote of the Russian Association of Science, according to dispatches from Norway, the name Fridtjof Nansen Land has been substituted for the former title that was given in honor of the famous Emperor of Austria.

"Its new name fits the Arctic archipelago appropriately because the islands figured in one of the most dramatic episodes of the late Fridtjof Nansen's career as an explorer," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"The land which has been named for him literally saved his life and preserved him for the valuable humanitarian career that reached a climax when he, in co-operation with Herbert Hoover, saved the lives of millions of famine-stricken Russians.

"Fridtjof Nansen and a small party on board the specially constructed 'Fram' entered the ice floes off northern Siberia in 1893 and, locked in the ice pack, drifted for 35 months without sighting land and without a single contact with the world. In fact the world believed Nansen and his crew lost.

"When the 'Fram' failed to drift over the North pole, as Nansen hoped she would, the explorer conceived a daring two-man dash to the top of the world. Nansen and Johansen with three sledges, 23 dogs and two kayaks (Eskimo canoes) did not attain their objective, but they made a new 'farthest north,' 86 degrees and 12 minutes, just 228 miles from the pole. Turning south the two men started on one of the longest marches ever made over Arctic ice. Finally they were reduced to two dogs. Johansen was struck down by a hungry polar bear but escaped death.

"At last they reached Eva Island, one of the outlying islands of what now becomes Fridtjof Nansen Land. There they built a stone hut and lived chiefly on bear meat during the entire winter. In the spring they started south for the main islands of the group. Nansen's kayak was attached by a huge walrus that drove its tusks through the fragile craft, but Nansen scrambled out on a cake of ice as the tiny boat filled with water.

"While they were planning to reach civiliazation by a long, dangerous sea trip to Novaya Zemlya, Nansen heard a dog bark. He started off and met, to his great joy, Frederick Jackson, leader of an English expedition. Although Jackson had met Nansen years before, he failed, for the moment, to recognize in the bearded, black-skinned, sooty-haired wanderer the famous blonde Norwegian explorer. Nansen and Johansen came home on the English party's whaler; the 'Fram' arrived a few days later. Nansen, who had been given up for dead, received a tremendous welcome.

"Former Franz Josef Land, containing the most northerly land yet discovered, finds its greatest usefulness to the world as a memorial. As a whole it now becomes a snow-white monument in honor of a man of the north.

"Conveniently, also, for memorial purposes, Fridtjof Nansen Land is divided, and subdivided, into numerous islands, large and small. Channels and capes and headlands demand titles. There were no inhabitants to label them so the various explorers had free rein to distribute names as they went along.

"It is easily possible to recognize the nationality of the exploring parties as well as the period of their work by merely reading the map; British channel, Alexandra island, Harmsworth Straits, Cambridge Bay, Wilczek Island, Wayprecht Sea, Crown Prince Rudolf Land, Pierpont Morgan Strait, Vanderbilt Sound, Graham Bell Island, Whitney Sea. Austrians, English, Americans, Norwegians, and Italians have shared in making known the secrets of this ice-bound archipelago.

"Thirty of the islands in the group are 10 miles or more in length and the remainder, scores of them, are small. Several are as much as 50 miles long. As a whole Fridtjof Nansen Land lies slightly farther north than Svalbard (Spitzbergen) and it is as far north of the Murman coast of Soviet Russia as Chicago is from New Orleans.

"Because of its far northern position and the greater distance the Arctic arm of the Gulf Stream must flow to reach it, Fridtjof Nansen Land is marked by Arctic conditions to a greater extent than Svalbard. It is called, 'the world's most characteristic polar land.' Most of the islands are plateaus under 1,000 feet elevation and covered with domes of ice. Less than five per cent of the surface is free of snow even in summer.

"Only lichens, mosses, several grasses, and poppies grow where the sun melts through the snow. Polar bears and foxes live on the islands; walrus and seals frequent the nearby waters. The islands are richest in bird life. Thousands of little auks, dovekies and other birds come to the islands in March and remain until September."

Thuringia

American tourists probably will hear little music from their homeland this summer when visiting Thuringia. The prime minister has issued a proclamation prohibiting jazz music and Negro songs in fashionable cafes and other public places.

A bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society, deals with this little republic of central Germany.

"Thuringia is well termed the 'Green Center of Germany,'" says the bulletin. "It brings a breath of medieval times with its romantic and legend-encrusted castles, its wealth of musical atmosphere, and its great mountains and splendid forests extending for miles and miles.

"Gothic villages drowse within its boundaries and dream of the past. Even the cities seem noiseless, and silence pervades the rural districts, where everything is quiet except for the little goose girl who drives her flock as she sallies out into a century too advanced for her surroundings.

"The population of well over 1,500,000 is mainly Teutonic and includes a smattering of the Wendish and Slavonic element. Larger cities of the republic are Gera, Jena, Gotha, Eisenach and Uttenberg.

"Germany and music festivals are synonymous. Perfection in music is sought in the event of a simple folk jubilee in a hamlet, or in a lavish exhibition in an ultra-modern theater in one of Germany's capitals. The republic of Thuringia mothered such musical artists as Handel, Wagner, Bach and Liszt at different periods of their lives and almost every city of the province has its memorial to music. Wagner glorified Wartburg in his 'Tannhauser.' The home of Bach in the town of Eisenach contains an interesting museum. The little residence of the Grand Duke of Meiningen is famous through the music of its orchestra. The musical interest in Kassel, has centered about Louise Spoler; and Gottingen, the famous university town, pays homage to Handel by its festival plays every summer.

"Thuringia claims fame also as the home of the poet, Goethe. It is rich in Goethe recollections. The visitor is reminded that the modest place on the opposite side of the street is the home of Goethe, that the park he is passing is the most beautiful monument to the artist's genius and that the open air theater is of interest because of its use in Goethe's day.

"Weimar, the republic's capital city and the birth place of Germany's new constitution following the World war, retains many of its medieval characteristics. Surviving are narrow winding streets, houses with high pitched gables and remnants of the grand old palace with its towers. The palace was erected under the superintendance of Goethe and dedication of one of the wings has been made to Schiller, Herder and Weiland, noted German writers.

"A motor ride through the republic discloses pleasing and pastoral landscape, sometimes flat and fertile and sometimes hilly, often clothed in dense woods but always charming.

"Historic Erfurt lies between the interesting old cities of Gotha and Weimar, in easy reach of the Harz river on one side and Thuringian forest on the other. It plays a dual role by being picturesque, historically memorable, silently in tune with its sister cities and yet economically important and a railroad junction. It was Luther's home in his days as a monk, from 1505 to 1508. Erfurt's sky line is dominated by fine medieval architecture and is the home of the celebrated bell, Maria Gloriosa, cast in 1497, which weighs 27,000 pounds.

"Gera is situated on the banks of the White Elster and is the home of a large university where young Thuringians prepare to carry on its famous textile industries. Ringing true to the peacefulness of the republic is Jena, a university town on the banks of the Saale. It maintains its medieval market square, the older buildings of which blend well with the inevitable newer buildings."

THE KIWI, THE WORLD'S QUEEREST BIRD

Ever hear of a kiwi?

Rear Admiral Byrd has one.

Not a real kiwi, but a silver model of a kiwi, presented to him by New Zealanders in honor of his flight to the South pole.

"The kiwi is a singular bird," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"To New Zealand the kiwi is a sort of national mascot. It owes its selection, apparently, to the fact that it is one of the strangest creatures living in an area of the world that is famous for curious beasts and birds. Kiwis are first cousins to the cross word puzzle emu bird and are relatives of the rhea and cassowary.

"The kiwi has no wings. It cannot fly.

"When collectors brought the first kiwi skin and carcass to London naturalists doubted there could be such a bird. Even today observers describe it as a cross between a gourd and a football.

"The adult kiwi is about as large as a hen, has oversize feet, and a long bill. The kiwi, like the 'possum, sleeps in daytime rolled up in a hole under the roots of a tree. It is also like a dog. It ranges through the bush at night sniffing noisily as it smells the ground for earthworms and it is said to growl if disturbed during the daytime.

"Occasionally it emits a penetrating cry, 'ki-i-wi.'

"While the chief purpose of the long bill is to root out earthworms some writers report that the kiwi also uses its bill as a cane or prop to rest its head and neck when fatigue overtakes it.

"When the mother kiwi lays an egg or two she is through. The male kiwi must sit on the egg or eggs and hatch them. And such eggs! Naturalists marvel that the kiwi, a bird the size of a hen, can lay an egg 5 inches long and 3 inches wide; an egg weighing one-quarter as much as the bird herself."

Motoring accidents took four lives in Connecticut, with two persons, Fred Codianna, 28, and Napoleon Lisstefane, 28, both of Waterbury, fatally injured in that city. Robert Beane, 14, was killed at Rutland, Vt.

Thomas Hall, 27, of Everett, Mass., was drowned at Dracut, Mass., and Otis E. Schoocraft, 45, of Andover, N. H., died after a gun had been accidentally discharged while striking at a hawk on the ground.

One suicide was reported, John Lopes, 45, of Taunton, Mass., shooting himself after having wounded his wife in a domestic quarrel. An unidentified man died after being struck by a train at Woodmont, Conn.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT AT MOUNT RUSHMORE UNVEILED

RAPID CITY, N. D., July 4.—(AP)—Gutzon Borglum's gigantic face of George Washington, carved on Mount Rushmore's granite cliff, today was revealed as a reminder through the centuries of the historical foundation of the United States.

In simple impressive Independence day ceremonies in the heart of South Dakota's Black Hills, an audience of 2,500 witnessed the unveiling of the 60-foot head of the first president, the first unit of Mount Rushmore National memorial.

On the nation's birthday, a patriotic note was sounded by the speakers in the mountain setting near the center of the North American continent.

"America's shrine for political democracy," the monument was called by Joseph S. Cullinan, of Houston, Tex., chairman of the federal commission in charge of Borglum's massive project.

Borglum, in his presentation speech, said it was a monument to the aspirations of a great people, not to individual men. Declaring Washington's head would remain on the mountain for half a million years, the sculptor told the audience that the monument would include the heads of Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, along with a brief history of the nation's founding and expansion to be written by former President Coolidge. These will be drilled on the same heroic scale on Rushmore's 700-foot face.

Washington's head appears high on the granite cliff, 6,200 feet above sea level. Pine and spruce trees are dense at the foot and stretch for miles over the rugged blank hills. The stone face is visible for a great distance.

Ceremonies were held at noon today on the veranda of Borglum's studio on Doane mountain, almost under Rushmore Memorial. The crowd gathered on boulders and trees in a rustic setting.

Doane Robinson of Pierre, S. D., who first proposed the Black Hills Memorial, described it a success without the necessity of completition of the figures of three other presidents.

CLUE TO WHEREABOUTS OF OLIVER B. GARRETT

BOSTON, July 4.—(AP)—A clue to the whereabouts of Oliver B. Garrett, former leader of the liquor squad and a fugitive since his disappearance nearly three weeks ago on the eve of his trial, came today when he was reported to have been at the Black Rock hotel, Cohasset, from June 27 to July 2. The information was given to District Attorney William F. Foley by Albert A. Golden, hotel manager.

Garrett came from New York with a companion by seaplane, remained at the resort six days while his former brother officers were scouring the country for him, and departed, ostensibly for New York, Golden said.

The former liquor raider wore smoked glasses and Golden said he did not recognize him for six days. The stranger apparently sensed the manager's suspicions, for on Wednesday he sent a wire and several hours later the seaplane arrived.

Barrels made in Arkansas, a dry state are prized by wine dealers in the West Indies, South America and Canada.

Receipt for a Happy Life

Three ounces are necessary first of patience.
Then of repose and peace of conscience a pound is needful.
Of pastimes of all sorts, too, should be gathered as much as the hand can hold.
Of pleasant memory, and of hope, three good drachms.
They should moistened be
With a liquor made from truest pleasures which rejoice the heart.
Then of love's magic drops a few—
But use them sparingly, for they may bring a flame
Which naught but tears can drown.
Grind the whole, and mix therewith of merriment an ounce
To liven; yet all this may not bring happiness,
Except in your orisons you lift your voice
To Him who holds the gift of health.

My Little Cape Cod Maiden.

I brought her from the sand-dunes,
From the sand-dunes and the sea,
And I placed her in my garden
Where the wind blows recklessly,
And the storms beat down upon her,
But she doesn't seem to care—
This little Cape Cod maiden,
With the sea-weed in her hair.

She is winsome and attractive,
Though demure to a degree,
And I've christened her Priscilla,
Which is fitting, you'll agree,
Since her forbears crossed the ocean,
With those pious sons of God,
Who came over in the Mayflower,
And anchored off Cape Cod.

She wears a bright, blue kirtle,
And a hood which frames her face
In a fascinating manner,
Giving her an added grace,
And she steers her daily windmill
With a firm, unfaltering hand,
In uttermost obedience
To every least command.

Of the wind, whether it whistles
With a guesto through the trees,
Or sweeps across the garden,
In a playful summer breeze.
And sometimes as I watch her,
Perched upon her iron rod,
I fancy that she's longing
For the shores of old Cape Cod.

HOME TOWN OPPORTUNITIES

Dear Social Corner Friends: "The typical remark that all women smoke nowadays belongs in the category with the July or August idiocy that everybody is out of town. It is altogether likely that fewer than one woman in a thousand in the United States use tobacco. There is an equally good probability that not more than one in 1,000 use a lip-stick. Impressions gathered in white ways may be vivid and picturesque, but they are imperfectly serviceable in fixing a date for the collapse of civilization."

The above quotation will remind us that a great many of our acquaintances have what we might perhaps call the hyperbole complex, that is, it is well-nigh impossible for them to speak on almost any subject without exaggeration. They may not mean to be untruthful, but they have acquired the habit of telling things big. When we first know these people we suffer many disappointments because of their lack of accuracy but as we become accustomed to their exaggerations we mentally tone down their descriptions so that when they take us to see their "seaside villa" for example we are prepared to enjoy the small cottage it proves to be, because that is what we were really expecting to see so we are not in the least surprised or disappointed. From long acquaintance with some people of this type, I have almost decided that they are to be pitied rather than blamed for they really, I believe, are not to be held responsible for their exaggerations anymore than is a kleptomaniac for his pilferings.

I once ventured to try to explain to one of these exaggerators whom I knew very well that it would be a fine thing to overcome this habit and learn to call a spade a spade instead of a steam shovel but such an injured expression came into her eyes and she seemed so hurt that I changed the subject immediately, concluding that if I ever again attempted to play the role of reformer it would be with a different type of delinquent.

Here is a sentiment that seems to me to hit the nail squarely on the head. "We have to live before we know how. There seems to be no way of rearranging that." We all recognize the truth in this assertion even though perhaps we have never thought about it before. And, sad to say, we have to live quite some time before we learn how to live. This is one of the reasons, I believe, why so many thoughtful people today are placing a deserved emphasis upon the potentialities of what we call middle age. This period is somewhat elastic and people do not of course agree exactly as to its beginning and its end. No doubt it varies in different types of people. But regardless of its exact length it may be a period of development quite as much as youth is and as people by the time they reach it have learned to live if they are ever going to these middle years may be more productive than all the earlier ones were.

By this time we "find ourselves." Talents that for one reason or another have remained dormant come to life and expand. Many mothers too fully occupied previously with the care of home and children to give much thought to themselves now have a new lease of life as it were. When I remember the attitude of mind I held toward middle age in my youth I realize poignantly how great was my ignorance. Now that medical science has done so much to conquer disease and add years to life's span this middle period will be lengthened and I venture to predict that the world of tomorrow will be greatly benefitted because of this. Many young people have no chance to realize their ambitions but now it may be possible for some of these at least to come into their own at this later period. It is encouraging to read what is being accomplished through adult education.

Let us be alive to the opportunities offered by the home town. In a recent forum I read of a man who was dissatisfied with the advantages to be found in his birthplace, a small town in Maine, and started out to better himself. After visiting the different sections of our country and finding "lions in the way" all around he returned to the old town of his youth and some of the scales having been removed from his eyes by his travels he saw a good opportunity for business right there and was soon prospering. We must learn to fill small positions noticeably well before we can expect to be called to higher places. May more of us improve the opportunity offered us by this Social Corner page—ours to use "without money and without price." With cordial greetings to you all.

STRUGGLING WITH THE GARDEN.

Dear Social Corner: I have just been watching over the funeral pyre where the bodies of three of my biggest foxgloves lay. It really seems too bad to destroy them, but what can one do? These huge plants which we wish could live forever, are after all, only biennials and even if they survive another winter would be practically useless as far as blooming is concerned next year. So out they come to make room for other things.

Another planting that will have to come out is the sweet Williams. These two beds have been established for three years and they are now a rather ragged looking apology of what they should be. I shall save just a few seeds but I shall not depend on them for the flowers will not be nearly as good as from plants raised from new seed. Sweet William seed is cheap; I shall buy a large package and have a lot of plants so that I can have a large bed in my garden and have some plants to give away.

At the same time I plant the sweet William seeds I shall plant several other varieties; Canterbury bells, hardy pinks, oriental poppies, hollyhocks, aubrietia and several other things. Most of these will bloom next year. The delphiniums which are blooming in my garden now were planted just about a year ago.

Plantings may be made in the open ground but I find that I can care for them more easily in a cold frame. As soon as the tiny plants have their fourth or sixth leaf I transplant them in the cold frame. Last fall I put half the plants into the garden and left half in the frame to see which wintered the best. The same varieties that lived in the ground lived in the cold frame and the same with those that died so there wasn't much difference. But those that were in the cold frame did start growing quickly and were the first to bloom when warm weather came.

Last year I planted seed of a number of rock garden plants but almost all of them died so this year I am leaving them alone until I can find why they didn't succeed here before.

The delphiniums are pretty now but the things that have happened to them! Cutworms and calves and hens, and even the dog, have broken them off. And then in spite of stakes and stout raffia the wind seems determined to break them, too. They are awfully tender but their blooms are so beautiful they are well worth raising.

PICNIC AT BAY STATE'S

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: On Wednesday, July 9th, there will be a picnic at the home of Bay State on the Military highway, Allyn's Point. All members and friends are cordially invited to attend. Please remember to bring your dishes and a soup plate by those desiring to have chowder. Also bring salads, cold meat, pickles, sandwiches, pie, cake and fruit. Those not having cars can take bus from the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. station. I shall only have one picnic this summer as conditions will not allow me to have another one. So all come who can.

Too Late: Shall look for you and Alfara, Tuny Ann and all the rest of the crowd.

Rose Lee: Will you be able to come?

I know that the Club No. 4 members will come as they did last year.

Now Club 6, you all want to make an extra effort to come.

Forget-Me-Not: Don't forget the day, July 9th and be sure and come.

All wishing to go in bathing bring bathing suits.

Best wishes to all the sick ones and especially to Aunty No. 1; shall miss you at the picnic. Now remember to come one come all and have a good day's outing.

GREETINGS FROM OLGA.

Social Corner Sisters: Was happy to see our Corner page almost filled last Saturday. Hope to see it overflowing this week.

I extend thanks to our kind editor for the yellow slip.

Can assure you it was an unexpected and very pleasant surprise.

Theoda: Am glad you have found time to write. Always enjoy your letters.

Kennebec: Am sure you will be pleased with your knitted lace for pillow slips, also tan dolly. Catnip brought them to the last meeting. They are done so beautifully. Was sorry you were not able to come. We had a very nice dinner. A large number were present and had a pleasant social hour. We will miss getting together for two months.

Aunty No. 1: Am so sorry you are ill. Hope to hear soon you have entirely recovered.

I. J. B.: Have missed you so at the last meetings. Wondered where you were and was then told you had sold your lovely home and moved away. I hope you will be happy in your new home. But we are sorry to lose you.

Joan: We have been lonesome without you and your music, and hope when we renew our meetings in September you will be able to attend.

I made a mistake in my last letter. The dinner at which we were given the tiny turtle souvenirs was at Club No. 5.

Yours for a jolly Fourth of July.

OLGA.

USING ADHESIVE TAPE

Dear Cornerites: I have gotten much help from the Corner letters and as I have an idea which I put into practice many times I am sending my idea along, hoping it may prove a help to someone else.

I always keep two rolls of hospital adhesive tape on hand, one upstairs and one roll downstairs. When the children accidentally break one of their small toys I repair it with adhesive tape and it holds for a long time. I also fixed a magazine cover with the adhesive tape and the cover remained on the magazine so we could finish reading it and still have a cover on it; I also purchased a roll of transparent adhesive tape, used for mending paper. When a sheet of music gets torn or worn on the edges from continually turning I repair it with the tape and it looks as good as new. A few months ago two pages of a book were torn across. I repaired them with the transparent tape, and as you can read through the transparent tape, the book is as good as new.

Baked Cabbage: Chop a firm head of cabbage. Boil vigorously until tender drain and set aside until nearly cold. Then add two well beaten eggs, salt to taste, and a half cup of rich milk. Mix and bake in a baking dish until lightly browned. Serve in the dish while hot.

Beet and Onion Salad: Cut into slices, then into strips, 2 cooked beets. Slice a medium-sized onion, separate the sections, add as much celery as onion, 1 tablespoon capers or chopped sweet pickle, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper; mix and serve with any favorite dressing.

Neapolitan Salad: Three cups shredded cabbage, 3 tablespoons chopped pimientos, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon paprika, ½ cup diced celery, 2 cups diced pineapple, 2-3 cup thick salad dressing. Chill all ingredients. Combine and serve in a bowl, lined with crisp lettuce. Serves eight.

RESULTS IN THE GARDEN

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I just don't know how to begin this letter so I'll just start.

Pernickety said her peonies blossomed the first year; so did mine. I had never transplanted any before and didn't know whether they should be or not. I would like to suggest, "Mi-own Garden," "Paradise," or "Beauty Land," names for her flower garden.

Speaking of names, it always falls to me here to name all calves, or anything requiring a name. This spring I was wondering what was best to name our two cow kids. For the clear white one I decided on Snowflake and in a few days our four-year-old boy suggested Cornflake for the other one and so it was decided.

My Excelsior are a thing of the past and just started canning Aldermans today. My pole beans have blossomed before my black wax string beans and all were planted the same day.

P.K.: Have made "baked economy" many times but did not know the name of it. I use odd ends of hams that are too small to fry.

Betsy Bobbett: Hope you have better success than I did. One day when raining I transplanted Klobi Rabi setting it in all places where other seed had not come up. Today a boy was going to hoe a little in the garden. As soon as I found it out I rushed down but I was too late. There lay some of my onions hoed up the boy said he was "hoeing cabbage and thought onions were twitch grass." I'll need some labels.

My beets don't grow a bit, the roots are covered with a greenish blue aphid. What shall I do with them? My little boy said his corn didn't grow fast enough so he pulled up all the corn stalks but one and threw them away. About the way I feel.

Hope all sick members are better.

WOODSIDE

TRYING TO HAVE FLOWERS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have not written in quite a while but that does not mean that I have not thought of you all often.

Have been very busy trying to make some plants and seeds grow so I can have some flowers.

Have some nice plants in the garden all budded, ready to bloom and every morning when I go out I find two or three broke off. I am furious for I can't find out what does it, but rather think it is dogs. It is discouraging when one works so hard, to see things destroyed that way. The old saying that a "watched pot never boils" is true I guess for I'm out there looking around every spare minute I have.

Aunty No. 1: Was sorry to read that you are not so well. I have not been over your way recently but imagined you were able to be out of doors now. Do hope you are feeling better by now.

And Joan: You have my sympathy. Hope by September you will be able to be at the Buckingham again.

I wonder if we are not going to have any more of C. H. "Dad" Shaw's interesting letters in The Bulletin. The last three Tuesdays there have not been any and I'm sure I am not the only one that has missed them.

Well today is the day after the 4th and I suppose there will be the usual number of accidents and fires. I think it would be a good thing to prohibit the sale of fireworks and blanks for they certainly are a nuisance.

I hope that all the Social Corner family have had a safe and sane Fourth.

Quid Nunc: I suppose a young fellow like you had to have a good time the Fourth. Hope you are enjoying the summer. Remember me to A.

Olga: Next time you see Ting ask her about the Social Corner meeting we had. Funny things do happen.

And Lonesome Pine: Congratulations.

Will ring off now and get to work

BLACK EYED SUSIE

USING UP LEFTOVERS

Editor of the Social Corner: Please accept my thanks for the prize. To say I was very much surprised would be putting it mildly. I consider myself very fortunate as this is not my first and only yellow slip I have received.

Skipper: Have you tried the Indian meal pudding yet?

Stranger in the City has arrived in her home town, looking much better than she did when she went away. The change to a different locality for five months proved very beneficial to her health.

It hardly seems possible that the haying season is here. Time surely flies.

In cleaning a closet recently I found an old fashioned cretonne bag, used to hold knitting work. The sides were gathered on two small sticks with round knobs on each end. I had no use for the bag so carefully ripped it from the two sticks, used the cretonne to cover arms of a willow rocker and with the sticks made towel racks.

I had four curtain brackets. I used the ones with slots, not the one with holes; nailed on a pair of brackets at the right end of my water pail dresser and laid a stick across those brackets. By gently pressing, the stick fitted in firmly, so now I have one more towel rack. When I get time I will fix the other the same way.

Always best wishes for the Corner.

HOSTESS WANTED

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: Just a little plea. If there is anyone who cares to be hostess at the picnic of Club 6, which is to be July 15, will they please communicate with me by next Tuesday night, July 8th? Our phone is 86R15, Westerly.

Will write of my trip to the Wolf Den later.

If there is no hostess, of course there will not be any picnic.

Hal: Received watch O. K. Thanks.

PASSING THE SUMMER ON THE FARM

Dear Social Corner Folks: The days are so full, no wonder the Corner page is not so full sometimes. I wonder if most of the farm folks are enjoying summer vacations at home as we do. We have more stock and haying than usual this year so it keeps us here pretty constantly, but we gets lots of variety out of the summer months. The big screened porch off the kitchen is our summer camp. The children sleep there, we have our meals there and most of the kitchen tasks can be moved outside. The house is arranged to require the least possible care for the summer and clothes require only washing and mending that are easy to do at home with the conveniences we often miss when away.

Food for the summer comes almost entirely from the farm and is always fresh—milk, butter, eggs, cottage cheese, lamb and chicken. The vegetables begin with asparagus and dandelions and continue with a daily supply of several kinds to the brussels sprouts that we pick into December. Rhubarb and strawberries open the season of fruits, soon followed by raspberries, black caps, early apples, cherries and plums to the late peaches and cranberries. We buy a very little in the market and they never seem very attractive after having our own. These fruits and vegetables do not require a great deal of land. Most of ours are on three or four acres near the house. Of course blueberrying is a picnic time and the whole family join in the haying and gardening. I used to think I would let the baker do my cooking when I wanted to rest but it is so unsatisfactory and not economical and we require so little pastry cooking that I find I can cook a batch of pies or cookies or bread in the cool parts of the day, around breakfast or supper, and so we have extras once in a while.

This year we are having less company for we find that we can arrange with our friends or relatives at a distance to meet us part way by auto and picnic together for a day. In this way we can get a good bit of visiting done, an exchange of good things in the lunch and a good time all around. We can go to the ocean and back in a day and we find more real rest in our little family excursions than in a picnic with too much preparation and a crowd. Most of our clubs and organizations for work that are good for many things stop for the summer and I just enjoy the letdown it gives one to be free from having to entertain or take part regularly.

On Sundays we like to visit some other church occasionally, especially the little country groups. And each year we have the family reunions that are becoming more and more popular. We go to a different place for ours each year, as different ones invite. I find more time to read what I want to and rest just when I feel like it. And best of all is having the family all together. Yours with all best wishes.

THIRTY-TWO

WASHING BLANKETS AND WOOLENS

Dear Editor and Corner Members: Olga is right when she says there is something wrong somewhere with our writers.

It is much easier to read letters than to write them and I will admit that I have been with the majority for the last few months simply because I did not do as my thoughts directed me to do.

Many attend the meetings and think their duty done; not so with Olga. She is faithful to the Corner in all ways. Now, Olga, I am not looking for a quarter, or a treat, but just the friendly handclasp I know I will receive whenever or wherever I meet you. Zany appreciated the card very much and wishes me to thank you.

I find 101 things to do (as Ann Tenna says) that never used to be my lot, but that is no excuse for my not writing for the Corner page. I think Club 4 used to take the lead in the number of letters written. Hope we are not slipping.

Death has claimed two more of our members. Whoa Emma, who never had the pleasure of attending many meetings or being acquainted with many members, and Trixie, who never missed a meeting if she could go and she always took all the friends her car would carry. Does any sister know of the passing away of any other Club 4 member?

Welcome to all new members and hope they do their bit even if the older ones do not.

Aries: Don't know where the next meeting will be, but we hope to do something in July.

Here is a nice way to wash blankets and woolens so will pass it on. After shaking them well plunge into a tub of water (about as hot as you can bear your hands in) to which has been added a pound of nice soap (dissolved on the stove in two quarts of water) and a half-pound of borax. Press the blankets well down in the water but do not rub any soap on them. Let them soak an hour or so, then rinse in several waters as hot as the first. When the last rinse water shows clear lift the blankets into an empty, clean tub without wringing or pressing at all and hang on the line lengthwise, turning over about two inches or just enough to hold them firmly, putting in plenty of clothespins to hold them and then let the wind slap out the water. Spreads hung out dripping wet require no pressing and look much better than when wrung out. Care must be taken to stand on the wrong side of the wind to prevent getting wet when hanging these out. When the loose side is dry change sides so they will stretch evenly.

Hope all sick ones are feeling better and can enjoy the summer season.

TWICE TWENTY

PICNIC AT CANTERBURY BELL'S JULY 16

Dear Editor and Cornerites: I will take a little time now and then when I have to sit down a few minutes to rest and jot down a few lines while I rest.

The tulips and narcissus had gone by mostly when I arrived and the baskets of gold were starting to go by but the rockets were just beginning to open. Then the lupins and iris of which I have a good variety, including Japanese and Spanish, plumy bleeding heart, persicifolias and coreopsis were followed by gaillardia, kelmayi and delphiniums and then heliopsis and achillea. Aclepios tuberosa is at its best now and the foam like blooms of white and deep rose spirea. An early phlox began in June and will last until the late ones are in bloom. It is deep glowing pink almost carmine. I have only a few sweet Williams this year and only three foxgloves and a few hollyhocks; some of them look wild.

Betsey Bobbett: One would think I had a real garden to hear me tell about it but it is a hit or miss and not much of anything but I spend quite a bit of time very pleasantly in the green trellis garden. You have not promised me any seedlings, but I don't mean to say I would not care for any; I think I would.

I have a Jack-in-the-pulpit and some wild geraniums and ferns and a white flower I don't know, in my wild corner.

I have lythrum and gay feather, hibiscus, oswego tea in two colors, hardy ageratum and sweet lavender, southern weed, spearmint and balm. I have a small collection of choice pot plants including some Florida favorites. I have lots of balloon flowers, clematis paniculata, Dorothy Perkins, cinnamon vine and kudzu vine on trellis.

Bay State: Where are you?

Chelsea: Get your pen.

Marigold: I haven't seen you for a long, long time.

Now I want to see you all on the 16th of July, if pleasant, if not, please come the next day. Ask the conductor to let you off at the "Bean Hill church" and follow the yellow bows. They will be big enough to be seen; no guess work.

My sympathy goes out to the sick ones.

U. C. E. and Bumble Bee: Please come early.

Yours Cornerwise,

CANTERBURY BELL

OUR ROSE GARDEN.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I am sorry to say I have not written for over a year, but there are others who have not written but one letter.

Did you know that Little Sister is in the hospital at St. Joseph's in Willimantic? I think it would be nice to give her a card shower. I sent her one and I am going to take her some flowers some day. I have some lovely roses. Some time ago my husband sent away and got lots of rose bushes.

I hope it will be so I can go to more picnics this year. I think I went to two last year.

Too Late: Are you going to have a picnic this year? If so I hope you will have it before I go on my vacation.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Victor McLaglen, star of "What Price Glory," who has many admirers all over the country, is the lead in "On the Level," a thrilling comedy drama which comes to the Palace today, where it will be shown through Tuesday of next week.

"On the Level" is anything but what its name implies. Most of the action takes place on top of skyscrapers or on staging which is removed several stories from the ground. It is while Victor McLaglen, as Biff, a riveter, is working on one of these buildings he spots a fair lady in an apartment across the way. He sends his pal and co-worker, Danny, over to the girl with a note. An acquaintance springs up and, all unsuspecting, Biff is invited to visit the girl in her home. There he meets several other men and finally he is asked to take part in a real estate deal which looks to him to be the real thing.

Victor McLaglen, as always, is a tremendous hit in his part. He shows perfect understanding of his part and his ability to perform is shown over and over. Supporting him are William Harrigan as Danny, Lilyan Tashman as Lynn Crawford, the real estate lady, and Mary McAlister who, as Mary Whalen, daughter of Mrs. Whalen, the landlady, is the faithful girl who watches her life savings disappear because she had so much confidence in her friends.

This is an altogether delightful production and the McLaglen fans should pass the good word around to those who have not yet become acquainted with this distinguished gentleman.

Broadway Theatre

The "big-three" of outdoor action motion pictures is reunited. It is Paramount, Zane Grey and Jack Holt, and this combination, with the addition of Richard Arlen and Fay Wray, has just finished making another thrilling western, "The Border Legion," which opens a four-day engagement today at Warner's Broadway.

Paramount has picturized 24 Zane Grey stories of which Holt has appeared in 11, not including "The Border Legion," in which he makes his first appearance in an all-talking Zane Grey picture. Practically all of Holt's cowboy and riding roles have been undertaken under the Paramount banner.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Ponemah Mills, (Taftville), Norwich

Ponemah mills is located on the Shetucket river in Taftville, town of Norwich. Ponemah, from the Indian name meaning "Future Hope," is referred to in the Song of Hiawatha as "Land of the Here-After." The mills and village were built on farms covering about 500 acres purchased in 1865, and the first mill was operating in November, 1871. The mill was established to produce dimities, lawns, organdies, etc., from very fine yarns not previously made in this country. The employes and operatives to operate the foreign machinery installed were brought to this country for the purpose from England and Scotland.

No. 1 mill is an unusual mill construction, made of heavy walls, high studding, and the upper floor, 785 feet long, supported by truss construction, which allows one of the mule spinning rooms to be without posts or similar obstruction, this room being 785 feet long, 17 feet high and 75 feet wide.

Additional mills have been built, making a total of four, with the present equipment of over 160,000 spindles and 3,700 looms. The mills now stand in an area behind an iron fence over a mile in length.

Few, if any, modern mills operating for a similar purpose have outstanding conditions superior to Ponemah mills of Taftville. All of the rooms are light and with the high studding make the operating conditions unusually comfortable, and the work of the operatives is such that there is no crowding. The room are all scrubbed and kept clean, and are ventilated by automatic air-changing equipment and humidity control.

In the Ponemah mills over 1,300 people find employment as constant in nature as the whims of women's style requirements will allow and a fair share of the textile consumption will permit.

Time has not changed the perfection of Ponemah mills' product, nor the efficiency of its machinery, as the replacing of operating machinery has kept pace with the times and the mills are now in the front rank with others in the textile industry.

New needs in fabrics have been met by skill in fabric development and the installation of 3,000 of the latest type of automatic looms meets the present day need of flawless material and economies in operation.

The product of the mills has always been nationally known; the women of the country have for years used soiesette (swahzet), the all cotton cloth with silklike softness and luster, dyed in almost numberless shades and a multitude of print designs, using a product of over 5,000,000 yards a year. Soiesette is also nationally known for men's underwear, identified by the label on the garments. The Ponemah brand broadcloth shirts are enjoyed by an army of men and its Alpha oxford, originally made for officers' shirts during the war, is very popular. Cloth for an innumerable number of mechanical purposes is also made, this cloth requiring a density of the threads in the weave and constructed of the finest sized yarns made from selections of the choicest varieties of American and foreign cottons. One of the most difficult fabrics to manufacture in the line is cloth for gas bags for dirigibles, and another cloth of which Ponemah mills was one of the originators is a fabric made from cotton to replace linen for airplane wings. The range of Ponemah mills' products is appreciated by such extremes as the finest web-like rayon voiles, printed in beautiful designs and sold exclusively by some of the largest department stores in the country and cut up by some of the most exclusive garment manufacturers.

Few employers of industrial labor provide their employes with the benefits found at Ponemah mills' unique village in Taftville. Here most of the employes live in 500 comfortable homes kept white and clean by the mills, and where the landlord asks not over 30c a room a week for the best apartments. A seven-room house with bath at $2.50 a week is quite unusual, as most any rent payer will undoubtedly admit. A herd of Holstein United States tested cows produce milk for those who wish it. Any cases of sickness reported to the mills' welfare nurses are investigated within two or three hours. Employes and dependents have the free use of three beds at the William W. Backus hospital in Norwich, reserved and paid for by Ponemah mills and The Taftville Chapter, A. R. C. With these, the patient has the choice of selecting his own physician at the expense of the patient or the hospital attending physician at no cost.

The corporation was originally formed as The Orray Taft Manufacturing company, Edward P. Taft of Providence being the leader in the promotion, and the first treasurer. Before getting under way with the production of goods, the corporation name was changed to Ponemah mills. The first agent of the mills was James S. Atwood, father of the present treasurer, J. A. Atwood. James R. MacColl, of Providence R. I., is the president of the corporation now and Frank B. Rickeson of Taftville is agent.

Life's Too Short

A THRIFTY LOVER SEEMED TO BLIGHT ROMANCE FOR JANET, SO SHE TOOK UP HER ABODE AMONG THE IMPROVIDENT ART FREAKS OF THE "VILLAGE"

JANET'S kick on John had nothing to do with either his manners or his morals. Nor did it relate to his looks, clothes or choice of neckties. It concerned his money. In the first place, he had too much of it. In the second place, he took it too seriously. He kept an expense account! Life, according to Janet's comfortable code, was too short!

"Excuse me a moment, darling. I'll forget this if I don't put it right down."

And out came the little black book from his vest pocket. In sundry other pockets he kept a pigskin wallet for bills, a coin purse, an address book and a red memorandum book where he recorded every important anniversary from his Great-aunt Susan's birthday to the date on which he first proposed to Janet. Of course, he kept a line-a-day diary and had not missed an entry for four years now!

"One stamp," wrote John firmly, "$00.02."

That was the strange thing about him. It was the small sums that bothered him. He was not stingy. Invariably he bought the best. Loge seats for the theatre, avacados and hothouse strawberries in the dead of winter, white orchids for her week-end corsage. But he angered her by entering the briefest expenditure in the ubiquitous expense account.

Of course, they were engaged. There was that much excuse for him. Nowadays a girl was supposed to know something about her future husband's finances. Together she and John would have the responsibility of managing old Jacobs' fortune, built on his now famous slogan: "Many pennies make a dollar!"

John's father had always claimed that most people disregarded the importance of pennies. They considered anything under a dollar inexpensive. He made his millions on this fundamental weakness in human nature. For Jacobs was the first store in America that specialized in selling only below the dollar mark.

"IT'S the principle of the thing, dear," he insisted, staring into the big brown eyes that made every other man quote poetry. "The people who let the pennies dribble away are the ones who waste the dollars."

"I suppose so," pondered Janet. But she wasn't really thinking about the pennies. She was reminding herself that John was just as good-looking as he was prudent, and that was saying a very big mouthful!

Blue eyes that were sometimes gray and sometimes green—gray when they were kissing her, but green when they were calculating pennies! A profile so clean cut that it made you think of a cameo chiseled in stone. Almost taffy-colored hair. An outdoor color in his firm young face. In short, her John. Janet sighed. The 2 cents part of it was relatively unimportant. It was just the way he had been brought up.

But, as a matter of fact, in this case, at any rate, John was right. That particular 2 cents was important. For it went on a letter that was to influence both their lives. Janet had written it to a home correspondence school and it brought home the bacon in the form of a course in costume designing!

She had always been clever with odd scraps of material. She could take a length of silk, a snip of tulle, a twist of ribbon, a needleful of thread and do things that surprised even herself. Now that college was over and John had promised his parents to wait at least a year before he did anything so rash as to share his fortune with a scatter-brained girl, Janet desparatively wanted something to do.

At first she merely played around with her new profession. The home correspondence course had very little to teach her, but it inspired her with confidence in herself. She learned to admit that she was good. John laughed at her good-naturedly when she turned the upstairs library of the imposing old family mansion on 81st street into a "salon." Here she practiced on her friends, copying imported models for the bare cost of the materials and delighting their souls with gowns that would put many a fashion expert to scorn.

"Janet, I adore this beach ensemble," trilled a sweet young thing who had dropped in to inspect the new venture. "How much are you going to charge me for it?"

"You can have it for $15, Betty. At that I think I'm making about a dollar."

John, for whose long legs she had cleared a place among the bolts of pencil-blue transparent velvet on the sofa, looked disapproving. After Betty had made an ecstatic exit with the pajamas over her arm, he pulled an envelope and fountain pen from his pocket.

"How much material went into that rig, Janet?" he demanded.

"Oh, about seven yards. It was pretty full."

"At how much a yard?"

"I got it on the bargain counter—a remnant, you know. I think it was only $2 a yard."

"That's $14 then. What else—?"

"Nothing else. Why?"

He tapped his pen thoughtfully.

"It had a sort of cord around the middle," he reminded her.

"And they say a man never notices little things!" she exulted. "How smart of you, John. I'd forgotten all about it. It cost exactly $1, so I broke just even, after all, didn't I?"

"Broke even?" he echoed. "You lost! What about the thread?"

"But don't be foolish, John. What's thread? Five or 10 cents. That's nothing to worry about. Life's too short!"

Slowly the laugh died out. For John was wearing his green eyes and Janet was remembering the slogan on which he had been raised: "Many pennies make a dollar!"

It was as good a time as any, figured John, to demonstrate the practical value of an expense account. He marched out and returned with a large black book. It was ruled into tiny blue squares and had columns marked off by red lines.

"Now, Madame Janet," he smiled, "pull up your chair and take a lesson in bookkeeping. We are going to call this column 'disbursements.' In it you enter everything you spend—"

"Here's the first item, then," laughed Janet, leaning over to kiss him. "How extravagant I am with love!"

For just a second gray eyes dreamed back at her. Then—

"Here!" exclaimed John, "this is a business conference. No more interruptions, if you please, young lady. Go get me your checkbook."

But when she presented it dutifully he swore under his breath and tore his almost taffy-colored hair. For the stubs looked something like his.

No. ....Date—Monday......192

Order of —Myself..............$50.00
For ....

Half the checks were covered with scribbled shopping lists. None of them was numbered! The account had never been balanced!

"But how do you know when it's overdrawn?" gasped John.

"Oh, they call me up. It doesn't happen often, though. Only once or twice. You see, I sort of carry the figures in my head."

Carry the figures in your head! It was sacrilege to a boy whose first present had been a penny savings bank; whose first lesson in arithmetic had been in learning to count the accumulated copper discs that filled it.

John wanted to take her over his knee and spank her. He wanted to shake her until all the boasted figures jumped out of her stubborn little head with its wealth of bronze curls. He did his level best to look cross. But Janet knew the answer to that. She tweaked his nice flat ears and rumpled his nice smooth hair. Then she kissed him right where every self-respecting kiss belongs. Even young millionaires are human. So John fired the bankbook into the corner of the room and took Janet on his lap instead of over his knee.

"I love you!" he whispered. "I love you!"

Which is, of course, the correct answer to any difficult problem in life or arithmetic. But it did not solve Janet's shocking disregard of pennies, as was shortly proved by the episode of the shoes.

THEY were black snakeskin shoes and they cost $20. That, however, was not the trouble. John was no piker. He believed in the economy of buying the best and he happened to be with Janet when she picked them out. The real difficulty was that there were two pairs of them. She could not make up her mind between the ones with ankle straps and the ones without. So she sent both pairs home on approval. John thought this rather foolish. It seemed as if a girl ought to know which kind she wanted, especially when the ones without the straps were only $19.50. Since pennies were what counted, John would have bought those. He said as much, but Janet only tightened her mouth.

The next day was Easter Sunday and they joined the 5th avenue parade. Janet was a good advertisement for her new profession in the smart black tailleur with the ivory blouse and just enough rouge to remind the world that Cupid had done a good original job with her lips. John was about to tell her so when he happened to look down at her shoes. He leaned against a lamppost and clutched at his black silk hat for support.

"Great Scott, girl," he gurgled. "What have you done to your feet?"

Janet's eyes followed his and then she giggled. For on her right foot reposed a stunning black snakesskin shoe with an ankle strap. And on her left foot reposed an equally stunning black snakeskin shoe without an ankle strap!

"You did it on purpose, you little vixen," scolded John with eyes as coldly green as imitation emeralds, "because you meant to keep both pairs!"

Naturally it made her mad. She was fair-minded enough to admit, to herself at any rate, that it might have been one of those wish-fulfillment complexes so popular in current psychoanalysis. But it was not pleasant to have John accuse her of such a thing. So she flew up in the air.

"I can't help it if I'm absent-minded," raved Janet. "I was probably thinking of something else. I hope it wasn't you. You're not worth it. All you think of is money. I suppose you're positively sick to think of my spending that $40—"

"Thirty-nine dollars and fifty cents," corrected John patiently. "But you're wrong, darling. It isn't the money. It's the principle of the thing. You don't need two pairs of virtually identical snakeskin walking shoes any more than I need a—a——".

"An adding machine," interrupted Janet viciously.

"Well, if you won't listen to reason," said John stiffly. "Trouble is, you've got your head in the clouds."

"Trouble is," answered Janet sweetly, "you've got your feet on the ground!"

And she turned sharply on the sensible heel of the snakeskin shoe with the ankle strap. Naturally she expected him to follow her and apologize. For two blocks she walked very fast. Then she slowed down a little to allow him to catch up. Tap-tap-tap. The pair of feet behind her passed right by. They belonged, she discovered, to a stout old gentleman who evidently suffered with corns! John was nowhere in sight.

"And that," proclaimed Janet solemnly to a pigeon in front of St. Patrick's, "is that!"

There was a frightening finality to her tone of voice.

The next day she moved her "salon" from the upstairs library of the imposing family mansion on 81st street to a dingy little hole in Greenwich Village. Outside she hung a turquoise blue shingle lettered in vermilion. It said, startingly enough:

"At the Sign of the Seven Veils."

Down in the lower right-hand corner she printed, informally, "Salome"! Because Salome is, after all, the symbol of the perfect costumer. She knew what the smart young woman will always wear—or rather fail to wear!

In the window Janet hung seven pieces of chiffon. One, pure white, became a bridal veil. Another, all black, made a brief but adequate nightie. A third, flame where it was not scarlet, formed a devastating negligee. Four, five and six, respectively mauve, green and peach, were intimate bits of feminine wearing apparel. And the seventh, passionately purple studded with silver stars, made you think of a tropical night.

It would be nice to be able to report that Janet missed John. But, as a matter of fact, she was too busy proving to herself that she didn't. She was rather fed up on his old expense account. Life was too short. She meant to show him that a girl could run a successful business without bothering about the pennies. Dollars were what counted and Janet made plenty of them.

A wisp of chiffon that cost less than $5 she twisted into a divine tea gown that sold to uptown visitors, curiously sight-seeing the Village, for $25. A scrap of bargain-counter gauze she did something miraculous to and disposed of as a spangled evening scarf for ten times what she paid for it!

AND then, of course, she was busy meeting a score of young men with souls above commerce and the loathsome marts of the world! There was Paul Pierce for instance, born Charles Brown, but finding life as a misunderstood poet much easier under a more euphonious title. He lived upstairs in the evil-smelling tenement that housed Janet's "shoppe" and wrote highly improbable sonnets to her with a quill pen under the pale glow of a tallow candle. If she provided the ingredients, he brewed hot coffee for her over an alcohol lamp. Once he bought a dime's worth of pretzels from the change and hung them romantically in a paper bag on her doorknob. Other times he bought cigarettes for himself. It was amazing how quickly he could go through a $5 bill!

"What have I," mused Paul dreamily, "to do with money or money to do with me?"

What indeed? Janet often wondered. But it would be sacrilege to demand an expense account. Paul was above such small considerations!

There were others, too. Actors out of a job, aspiring young geniuses who were writing the Great American Novel but never got around to starting it, painters who would some day be famous if only they could get over the habit of sleeping all day and romping all night. They were delightful playmates and none of them kept expense accounts! But Janet soon found them an expensive luxury. They were not exactly dishonest. Not a single one of them would lift a stray dollar from her pocketbook. But they were all short on memory.

MOST especially there was Clyde la Farge. He was good-looking enough to clean up a fortune in the movies if he had not despised the base commercialism of Hollywood film stars. Clyde was a Socialist. He had something to do with running a little theatre movement in a converted stable on a cobblestone alley just around the corner from Washington Square. The little theatre movement was too highbrow to be popular. So it made no money. It fed its actors in lieu of pay. Clyde was the general factotum of the establishment. He peeled potatoes for the evening stew, served at bare deal tables in the loft over the auditorium to hungry young Booths and Irvings, otherwise too weak to perform. He took in tickets at the box office, officiated behind stage with the cantakerous curtain, rehearsed new one-act plays, swept up peanut shells after the performances and ran the hand press that printed the programs.

Clyde knew everybody important in town. He introduced Janet to them if he did not happen to be owing them money. It was all very gay and stimulating. But once he saw a chap walking toward them swinging a cane. That time he grabbed Janet's arm and ran. They ducked down a side street and around several corners before he let her stop to catch her breath.

Later he explained. It seemed that Clyde was broke one time and the other chap, who was rich and temporarily interested in financing the little theatre movement, loaned him his apartment while he was in Florida. Clyde said that he was starving. He actually had not eaten for days. So he sold the rich chap's books in order to buy a meal!

"I believe in the equality of the social classes," said Clyde firmly. "Distribution of wealth and all that, you know. Naturally I had to live up to my principles."

Unfortunately the rich chap had not seen it that way. He was inclined to be unreasonable. Some of his books were first editions. Clyde, very red in the face, looked over his shoulder. When he was sure that the rich chap was not following them, he laughed about it. Janet laughed, too—a little uncertainly.

"Why didn't you work?" she asked matter-of-factly.

"Work?" he echoed.

"Yes, work—if you were hungry and wanted to eat."

"But, my dear, one doesn't. A real artist, I mean. Not unless something turns up that appeals to one's soul; issues a call, as it were, to the highest in one's spiritual nature."

"Oh," said Janet as if she saw reason at last. But she didn't. She was thinking, most provokingly, of John—just when she least wanted to remember him. It was very annoying.

As things turned out, though, it was Clyde who gave Janet her big chance. As any one who lives in the village will tell you, there is no real glory connected with being in trade. Industry is not to be mentioned in the same breath with the arts. So that Janet's no-matter-how-successful costumer's shop would never have brought her fame.

But Clyde chanced to know an uptown theatrical producer who was looking for a designer to supply some original ideas for the costumes in his new show. The quaint little silver fig leaf aprons of the third act inspired more than one tired business man to stop yawning. The original inspiration was Janet's, however, and her reputation was assured overnight.

That was how John happened to see her again. Of course, he knew where she was all the time. What use was his money unless it could hire the best protection in the city for the only girl he was ever likely to love—despite the fact that she stubbornly refused to count her pennies? But even young men in love are apt to prove stubborn. After all, it was Janet who had walked away from him in her respectively strapped and strapless slippers. Very well, let her walk back again!

Then he went to see the show and was duly bowled over by the costumes. There on the program was her name, cunningly printed in Gothic letters:

"Costumes by Janet Thorne."

Janet Thorne! Janet of the big brown eyes and tangled bronze curls! Janet of the spendthrift ways but indubitable talent! Janet, his girl! John, granting absolution, was magnanimous.

"The kid," he remarked aloud to the confusion of his neighbor, a stout dowager who thought he was addressing her and raised her ear trumpet, "is clever!"

He forgot himself enough to be actually impulsive. Without waiting for the last curtain, he dashed out of his perfectly good fifth row orchestra seat, hailed a taxi and contained himself only with difficulty until he reached Janet's one-room-bath-and-kitchenette address.

"Darling," exulted John when Janet, cold-creamed and coolie-coated for the night, opened the door. "It's stupid to quarrel. I love you. Let's be married right away. I'm ready to forgive everything."

Which goes to prove that he knew more about managing fortunes than girls. Janet drew herself up until she looked almost haughty in spite of the film of grease across her nose.

"I'd like to know what you have to forgive," she exploded. "And now, if you'll excuse me, Mr. Jacobs, I'm about to get me a little beauty sleep."

But he was too quick for her. He put his foot in the door.

"You don't need it—the beauty sleep, I mean," he stammered because improvising compliments in a hurry was not his forte. "Please be a good girl and let me come in, Janet. I've got to talk to you."

She weakened visibly. He was so divinely Apolloish in evening dress.

"Very well," agreed Janet finally, "on one condition only. You're not to mention money."

Then she made her mistake. No girl wants to be seen through a glaze of cold cream even though the spectator is only a young man for whom she has no possible further use. So she walked to the bureau for some powder. But when she yanked at the top drawer out fluttered a whole flock of bills. Black and green ones. Yes, and yellow ones. Dozens of 'em.

John gasped. He turned purple, then red, gradually fading out to a ghastly white.

"Janet Thorne," he bellowed, "you don't do your banking at home, I hope."

"Why not?" she said coolly. "It's lots more convenient. Why bother with checkbooks and deposit slips? Life's too short."

"But it's not safe to have that much money around," he protested. "It's positively dangerous. There must be at least a thousand dollars there."

"Fifteen hundred," smiled Janet. "I collected a few old accounts yesterday."

"You'll be robbed," groaned John. "You'll be held up. You'll be murdered. Great Scott, why haven't my detectives reported a thing like this to me?"

"Your detectives," blazed Janet. "So you've been having me watched. And I thought that nice old man was only trying to pick me up. Oh, I hate you."

"But, sweetheart, you frighten me. Do listen to reason. It's only common sense."

"Common cents, you mean. Get out of here, John Jacobs, and call off your old detectives. You haven't got a soul above the Indian on a copper penny."

He may have been dumb about girls and the stony things they call their hearts. But he knew when he was insulted. So he jerked his white silk muffler around his throat in a fashion calculated to strangle a weaker man and shook the very literal dust of her apartment off his correct black patent-leather shoes.

"Good-by," said John stiffly. "When you want me you can whistle for me."

AFTER that there was not much left for a girl with any pride but to fall in love with some one else as quickly and efficiently as possible. Clyde being most conveniently at hand, Janet dutifully performed all the stunts made famous by Delilah, Cleopatra and Helen of Troy. But she soon struck a snag. The snag was Clyde's prejudice in favor of free love.

"The very thought of marriage suffocates me," he moaned. "We must both be free. Free as the birds are free."

Janet, who was modern enough to concede a love nest to any one who liked the things, shook her head. For she knew that any strong wind is likely to blow them down. Men and women being what they are, it is still safer to enjoy whatever legitimate freedom may be found within the comfortable limits of a marriage license.

"No, thanks, Clyde," she said sadly.

"I'm sorry," he mourned. "As a matter of fact, I was just about to tell you that if you couldn't see things that way I was planning to run up to Toronto on the night boat with Carleen."

"Carleen?" echoed Janet.

"The little olive-skinned, dusky-haired girl who plays the adventurer in 'Nile Nights,'" explained Clyde patiently. "Jan, be a good girl and let me have fifty just until Monday, will you? I'm broke."

Janet wrote off the debt to experience.

She woke the next morning to a dismal, foggy sort of day which could not decide whether to rain or not. Janet's eyes felt perfectly capable of making up for the weather's indecision. To make matters worse, her head ached. When the delivery boy rang the bell and handed her the square pasteboard box she was only a little less blue than his uniform. Janet could not imagine why any one should be sending her flowers unless it was to help celebrate the funereal state of her emotions. It was neither Christmas, her birthday nor a national holiday of any kind or description. She lifted the lid and there, under moist layers of tissue, lay the cunningest imaginable corsage of yellow pansies, their soft velvet faces framed against a perky circle of white paper.

"Oh," exclaimed Janet in spite of her doldrums, "you darlings!"

Even yet she had not guessed. It was the card that told her. A very prim white card it was, printed with meticulous care.

"Here's pansies," it said, "for remembrance."

And down in the corner, the date, October 28. The anniversary of the day she had first met John.

WHO but a man with a methodical red memorandum book would remember a thing like that? Who, indeed, but John of the coin purse for change, the stupid old expense account and the adorably tiresome, honest ways?

Pansies—for remembrance.

She dropped her head among the understanding little flower faces and suddenly the tears that had been threatening all morning descended with the force of a cloudburst. But at the same moment the sun decided to smile and that turned her storm into a rainbow. What can a girl do when even the weather makes sport of her blues?

First she powdered her nose. Next she swallowed her pride. It made an ample breakfast. Then she snatched up her purse and ran to the nearest telephone booth. A few seconds later a whistle shrilled from behind the closed glass doors.

"You said," Janet half laughed and half cried into the black mouthpiece, "that when I wanted you I could whistle. Well, I'm whistling, John. You see, I've found that life's too short—too short to get along without you any longer dear. And now—what are you going to do about it?"

Whatever he meant to do must have proved highly satisfactory, for Janet emerged with shining eyes. She paused for just a moment to pull a shiny new notebook and a stubby pencil from her pocketbook.

"Telephone call," wrote Janet firmly at the top of the first page. "$00.05."

The shopkeeper, who was a thrifty German, waddled to the back of the store, where his wife was frying the breakfast pancakes.

"There," he commented, nodding his head sagely in the direction of Janet's retreating smile, "goes a girl who will make a swell wife for some lucky guy."

HIGHJACKER FROM THE FANNING IN STRANGE ASSAULT AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 4—Willis George, sailor, a member of the crew of U. S. Coast Guard destroyer Fanning, state pier, was arrested this morning by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh charged with assault, threatening to kill and slay and theft. Although George has not been turned over to the civil authorities he is a prisoner in the brig at the coast guard academy.

George "jumped ship" late last night and went to the locker room at 213 Main street, conducted by N. Haddad, where William Marshall is employed as attendant. George entered the locker room at a time when Marshall was there alone and pulling a knife pressed it against Marshall's body and commanded the attendant to open several of the lockers and take from them such apparel as the sailor selected. Marshall was then ordered to place the apparel in a suit case and while he was performing that act, he was struck a blow on the face by George, who then commanded Marshall to make a written and signed confession that the attendant had committed the robbery. Marshall obeyed the order of George for the latter held the knife in his hand and threatened to use it. When George left the locker room, Marshall went to police headquarters and reported his experience. This morning Sergeant Cavanaugh was assigned to the case and the search for George led the officer to the state pier. George was there and was identified by Marshall. George stoutly denied his guilt and accused Marshall of making false accusation, declaring that he was aboard the Fanning when Marshall claims to have been attacked and the locker room robbed. Marshall, however, is positive as to the identity of the sailor and George will probably be delivered into the custody of the civil authorities within a few days and then presented in the police court.

A fortnight ago the gasoline station corner of Garfield and Jefferson avenues, was broken into and 80 cents taken from the cash register. Late yesterday a man was arrested by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh suspected of being the thief. He is locked up at police headquarters pending an investigation. The station is conducted by Irving Gadbois.

Several cases of intoxication will be included among the prisoners who will be in court tomorrow for a half dozen men were arrested on that charge last night and today. One man was arrested in the rear of Golden street, where he was down and out.

The awning at the Dekamo store on State street was discovered afire at 1:30 this afternoon, probably from a fire cracker. A strip two feet wide and four feet long was burned in the awning before the fire was subdued. Chief Engineer Shipman and the apparatus of the Nameaug company were called but their services were not needed.

An employe of the Connecticut Power company reported to the police this morning that a rowboat had been stolen from the company's Water street plant during last night. The craft has the following lettering on the stern, "COPO".

Councilor James A. May, Montauk avenue, drove his automobile to Huntington street, near State, last night where he parked it. When the councilor returned to resume his driving he discovered that the Whippet sedan, carrying markers 34178, had been stolen. The state police at Groton and Westbrook, as well as the police departments throughout the state were informed of the theft.

An automobile driven by Boris D. Moseasohn, 255 West 84th street, New York and a car operated by Dallas Greene, 65 Federal street, collided last night, corner of Lower Boulevard and Montauk avenue. Both cars were damaged. Greene alleging reckless driving against Moseasohn, the latter was arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran. After a lengthy conference at police headquarters, Greene withdrew his complaint and Moseasohn was released.

James Carroll, a stranger, was arrested last night on Main street by Patrolman John Sullivan charged with begging. Carroll was locked up and will be in court Saturday because there was no session of court held today.

Raymond Perkins, Washington, D. C., was arrested yesterday by Patrolman William Manice charged with violation of the city ordinance regulating traffic. Perkins parked his car on Huntington street and in restricted area. He was allowed his freedom with a warning to heed the traffic signs hereafter.

Harold C. Finnell, New Bedford, Mass., was arrested shortly after 2 o'clock this morning by Patrolman Louis Pine upon complaint of Joseph Fazio, 4 High street, Groton, who alleged breach of the peace against the New Bedford man. Finnell furnished a surety on his bond of $200 and will be in the police court tomorrow. Fazio and Finnel engaged in a quarrel.

To Camp at Niantic

Headquarters battery and Battery A of the 192nd regiment, will go into camp at Camp Trumbull, Niantic tomorrow and will remain two weeks. The advance contingent of the batteries went to the camp today. The batteries will leave the state armory at 8 o'clock and 20 minutes later they will be in camp. It will be the first year in many that the batteries have camped at Niantic, the soldiers for several years having been out through their war training at Camp Tobyhanna, Virginia.

James Foley, sailor, a member of the crew of the S-8, submarine base, was arrested last midnight by Patrolman William Riordan charged with breach of the peace. He furnished a bond of $100 for his presentation in the police court tomorrow. Foley and Joseph Riordan entered into a discussion and Foley attacked and beat Riordan. The latter then obtained the arrest of the sailor.

The New Haven railroad will operate a special train from New London to Boston Sunday, July 13, it being the first excursion that the road will have conducted from this city this summer.

NORWICH WIFE ALLEGES GRIFFITHS IS NEGLIGENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 4—John C. Griffiths was arrested by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh this afternoon charged with non-support, upon complaint of his wife, who resides at 55 Union street, Norwich, with Mrs Ella King. Griffiths will explain in court tomorrow.

Too Patriotic.

Max Lutin, 64 Milford street, Hartford, was arrested at Ocean Beach this afternoon by Sergeant Samuel Hick and Patrolman George Bruhns, charged with violation of a city ordinance, which prohibits the exploding of firearms. Lutin was celebrating the Fourth when the officers detected him discharging a .32 calibre revolver.

Max Garter, 169 Calla street, Providence, R. I., was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer George city ordinance prohibiting the parking city ordinance prohibiting the parking of automobiles on Brewer street. He was released with a warning to heed the signs regulating traffic.

FREEMAN A. SANFORD LEADS COPS A MERRY CHASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 4.—Freeman A. Sanford was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Frank Linehan and Louis Tooker charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, driving without a license and failing to stop at a traffic officer's signal. He was locked up and will be in court tomorrow. Sanford, who had partaken of too much liquor during the day, borrowed an automobile and started on a joy-ride. When he approached State street where Traffic Officer Tooker was on duty at the corner of Bank, the automobile speeded from Bank street and against the officer's signal. The car continued across State street to North Bank street and Patrolman Tooker followed as did Patrolman Linehan, the latter going to Main street in an effort to head the driver off. When Sanford reached Federal street where it would be necessary for him to make a sharp turn to continue driving, the drunken autoist stopped the car and alighted, then attempting to escape to Main street, but he was overtaken and arrested.

SAFEST, SANEST FOURTH EVER KNOWN IN TOWN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 4—The proponents of a safe and sane Fourth may not have realized it, but their recommendation to the city council for the observance of such a holiday recently was realized today, for never before in the history of the city was Independence day observed with such quietude. From early morning until midnight there was an absence of the usual continual exploding of fire-crackers, except for a brief time this evening. Chinese residents of Golden street caused huge strings of firecrackers to be exploded, but the explosions were of brief duration. The usual bonfires the night before the Fourth were lacking and there was no demonstration in the vicinity of Bank and State streets, which has usually been the case. The patronage at Ocean Beach was as large as ordinarily, for thousands of autoists went to the shore resort while many more thousands visited the beach by trolley. The weather was ideal and many of the visitors enjoyed the surf bathing. Many New London residents went for automobile drives, while the city was crowded with tourists and for several hours late this afternoon and evening there was general congestion of traffic on the city's main thoroughfares. No serious accidents were reported, although several celebrators suffered slight burns by their indifferences while discharging fireworks or carelessness in handling them.

Dr. George P. Cheney, Montauk avenue, this afternoon made complaint to the police because of a vicious dog owned by Victor Fargh, 197 Shaw street. The physician requested the police to instruct Dog Warden William Tryon to notify the owner to keep the animal under restraint, but to caution him not to slay the dog.

Richard E. McCrary, 34 Denison avenue, was arrested this afternoon charged with reckless driving. He was driving in a manner that endangered the safety of other drivers until stopped by Motorcycle Officer George Cockell. McCrary did not possess sufficient money to enable him to furnish a bond for his appearance in the police court, so his cycle was taken as surety and the driver was released.

A sailor was arrested tonight by Patrolman Dennis Murphy charged with tampering with an automobile. The sailor evidently intended to steal the car, but before he had an opportunity to do so was arrested.

MONTVILLE

STATE POLICE AGAIN RAID PALMERTOWN BOOZE DEPOT

Mrs. Alvina Melifski was arrested again by State Troopers William E. MacKenzie and Eric Swanson, of Groton barracks, Thursday evening, when the two officers raided her home at Palmertown. She was brought before Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church and bonds were fixed at $1,000, which was furnished by Mike Alkewich of Palmertown for her appearance in the Montville justic court Saturday at 10 a. m.

Arrested On Four Charges.

William Garland, No. 1760 Main street, Hartford, Conn., was arrested by State Trooper William E. MacKenzie when the car owned and operated by him on the Hartford turnpike did not have proper registration issued by the commissioner, was driving without a reflector, no markings on the side of the truck,—which include light weight, heavy weight and speed per hour and driving without a tire on the state highway. He will be tried Monday, July 7th, before Justice Oscar E. Church.

Plan Annual Field Day of Uncasville-Shelton.

The annual field day and outing of the employes of the Uncasville-Shelton mill at Uncasville will be held this year on the Vasa Country club grounds at Poquonoc, Groton, Saturday, July 19th, and will be an all-day affair instead of a half day as in former years. Buses will leave the Montville Community house at 9 a. m., and will continue to ply to and from the grounds until all the employes and their families are transported. The grounds are an ideal place for such an event, affording ample opportunities for swimming, boating, running, jumping and dancing. Music has been arranged for. Dinner will be at noon and supper at 5 o'clock. At a meeting held at the mill office at which Supt. K. R. Johnson presided, the following committee were named to pilot the event to a successful termination: Refreshments: Supt. K. R. Johnson and Ralph Bugbee. Transportation: John D. Noyes and David Crotty. Sports: P. J. McDermott, Ernest Johnson, Paul Metinuf, Mrs. Fannie Bilson, Miss Metinuf, Mrs. Fannie Nilson, Miss Stella Szozygiel and Mrs. Mary Arsenault.

Miss Margaret Geary of New Haven is spending the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Geary.

Mr. and Mrs. Mentz, with their family, of Palmertown, were visiting relatives in Willimantic over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gauthier and family spent the Fourth with relatives in Glasgo, Conn.

Stephen, Joseph, Walter Tisky and Walter Lasiewicz are spending the holidays in New York with relatives and will attend a league game at the Polo grounds.

The second in the series of picnics is to be held Sunday at the farm of Stanley Scovish at Gay Hill, under the auspices of the Ukranian church.

July the 4th was celebrated very quietly in the town. Stores selling fireworks did a fine business.

Mrs. Manuel J. Pont and son, Junior, are spending the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burton, Jr., and family, of Sterling, Conn.

Norman Bell, of Hilltop, will leave this (Saturday) morning with the 192nd Field Artillery, Connecticut National Guard, for Niantic.

Local fans attended the game between the New London Kaceys and the J. B. Martin Co. nine at Mercer field, New London, Friday afternoon.

Irving Crosby of Monson, Mass., is visiting his brother, David Crosby, over the week end.

POETRY

IF WE HAD KNOWN

So many things we might have done,
  If we had known what now we know!
So much more joy we might have found!
  More fruit our fruitless lives would show.

More kindliness, more hope and cheer
  To those from whose hearts joy had flown
We might have brought each passing day,
  If we had known, if we had known.

And oft we would have left unsaid
  The hasty words that with their sting
Hurt those we loved, if we had known
  Such lasting sorrow they would bring.

Ah, yes! If we had only known,
  How different all things would have been;
And so we sadly sigh, and wish
  That we might live life o'er again.

But why look back along life's way,
  Unless in looking back we learn
How better we may live today?
  The bygone years can ne'er return.

If we are wiser than we were,
  Because of failures in the past,
Let's fill the days with nobler deeds
  Through all the years while life shall last.

—Rev. L. D. Tibbetts, in Lewiston Journal.

THE THING THAT IS HARD TO DO

The world is made by men that do the thing that is hard to do.
That struggle and strive and sweat and strain till they've put what they started through.
The easy things are a midget's task, but the hard things must be done
By the men who have mounted to catch the stars and to put the flame in the sun.
Builders of cities and thoroughfares, who have turned wild trails to streets.
These are the masters to taste and know the will to avoid defeats.
The thing that is hard to do, and then,
  a fresh, new grip on the heart.
And the courage, persistence and dogged will to finish the thing you start.
—Folger McKinsey, in Baltimore Sun.

STATE DEPARTMENT MAKING VEGETABLE INDUSTRY SURVEY

Where is the Connecticut vegetable industry headed?

Is the expansion far greater than the industry warrants?

Are Connecticut vegetables worth $5,000,000 or $10,000,000?

Various estimates place the total number of farmers engaged in the commercial production of vegetables from 2,500 to 4,000. Other estimates indicate that the production of 1929 with an abnormally dry season exceeded that of 1928 by 36 per cent. If this represents a true picture, the Connecticut vegetable industry is expanding at a rate far in excess of that applying to any branch of farming in this state.

Connecticut vegetable growers want some definite information about their industry and have requested the state department of agriculture to furnish them with vegetable statistics similar to those furnished on other crops. The department through the co-operation of Connecticut Agricultural college, the extension service, county farm bureaus, various local vegetable growers' association and individual growers is endeavoring to satisfy this request by having the necessary information complete and accurate in the shortest possible time.

More than 2,000 questionnaires have been mailed to vegetable growers with the request that they give the necessary information about their particular farms. Reports of individual growers will be regarded as confidential and will be treated as such. These individual reports will be totaled to find out about the industry as a whole and each person reporting will be mailed a copy of the final report after all tabulations are complete.

While the federal census will act as a basis for judging the accuracy of the reports on the more important vegetables it was thought that any survey taken should include a more complete list of vegetables and small fruits than that included in the federal list. Thirty specific vegetables and small fruits are named on the questionnaire with blank spaces left for reports on some of the lesser important vegetables.

An effort is being made to receive a report from every farm where the commercial acreage of vegetables is in excess of two acres. A comparison between the 1929 and the 1930 acreages will be made and definite information regarding where and how Connecticut vegetables are sold is requested. When complete this survey will show the relative importance of different vegetables by acreages and years, also the relative importance of different city markets and different outlets within these markets such as wholesalers, retail stores, etc.

The state department of agriculture is sufficiently convinced of the real merit behind the request of the Connecticut vegetable growers to accept the responsibility of assuming the bulk of the actual work involved in making such a survey. However, the fullest co-operation of the individual vegetable grower in answering the questionnaire and returning it promptly is essential for the completeness and accuracy of the final report.

Any commercial vegetable growers who have not received a questionnaire are requested to secure one from the state department of agriculture at Hartford.

Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, will be represented.

F. S. Armstrong of Washington street has been chosen chairman of the Norwich grange committee, which will do every thing possible to further this project, as a result of a request sent out by the state master, Mr. Tolles, for every subordinate grange to appoint a committee to assist in this movement.

Not only the Norwich grange is appointing a committee to do its utmost in the matter, but the granges throughout the state are doing so and representatives from them will probably attend the meeting. The purpose of this movement on the part of the grange is to attempt to induce the state to cooperate with the towns for the betterment of their dirt roads.

The meeting will be for the discussion of the question and to outline a course of action.
